

BORN—On December 19, to Mr. and Mrs Emil Hauser, a son.

Not long ago Chemawa people were pleased to have Miss Long of Lapwai, Idaho, here for a short visit. Miss Long is a very capable woman and has a large acquaintance among our pupils.

Mrs. Fulkerson, sister-in-law of Dr. and Mrs. Fulkerson of Chemawa, came down from her home at Hoquiam, Wash., with her two young sons and spent the holiday season here.

Miss Alice Chalcraft came out from her home at the Siletz Agency and visited with friends at Chemawa and Salem. She reported of the people at the agency to be well and everything progressing nicely.

That Mr. and Mrs. Cooper have not forgotten their Chemawa friends is amply proved by the receipt of Christmas cards from them. They are now at Tongue River, Montana, where Mr. Cooper is in charge and they are getting along nicely, we are pleased to note.

There are some "real live Indians" out in Oregon. They are entering the club work with as much enthusiasm as their pale face sisters in any part of the country. In fact, the Indian girls from Chemawa school beat all the other club girls in a three-day contest at the Manufactures and Land Products Show at Portland last winter. They not only won the first prize of $50 for team work against several other girl club teams of the Northwest, but they carried off several hundred dollars' worth of prizes of greater or less utility value that were given by Portland firms for individual work in canning.—The Farming Business.

Following the first annual Kickapoo Indian agricultural show on the reservation near here, the Indians have formed a society for the advancement of agriculture on the reservation. Arthur Whitewater has been elected president; Moses Williams, vice-president; Philip Wahwassuck, secretary; and Big Simon, treasurer. The fair consisted of agricultural products, poultry, Indian craft and domestic science, and was a splendid proof of the fact that scientific agriculture is being studied on the reservation and that the Kickapoo Indian farmers are progressive in every sense of the word. Many specimens of corn shown at the fair were equal to that produced by Brown county's best corn raisers and the wheat on display was fully as good as the average raised in northeast Kansas. The poultry show included ducks and chickens, both raised by the Indians, and better breeds could not be produced by any farmer who is not a specialist in raising fancy poultry. The garden display included every article that can be grown in gardens in Brown county, including tobacco and peanuts. The Indian women have beautiful displays of needlework of all kinds as well as record-making bread, pies and cakes. The premium winners could successfully compete in any county fair.—Topeka (Kansas) Daily Capital.
