DO IT NOW

After a season of freedom from work and lessons, it is always hard to fit into the requirements and discipline of the daily routine. If it were not for the monotonous grind and drudgery in attaining our purpose, the effort would always be a pleasure. But the drudgery and grind must come; it is three-fourths of the process.

In your literary work, both in classroom and society, do not halt at the disageeable point. Consider that the exercise develops your mental powers as the drill develops the muscle, and you will soon find your your tasks easier and your progress greater. Take an interest in your work from the beginning. Do not wait until you see the last half of the year coming around to make up what should have been a steady advancement. Get into your work now. Put in the foundation faithful daily work and the end of the year will find you stronger and richer, both in knowledge and character.

LOCAL LORE

Work is progressing on the addition to the auditorium.

General inspection of the school batallion took place Sunday morning.

It would be hard to find two better kept buildings than McBride and Mitchell Halls.

Mr. Reuben Sanders spent Saturday last in Portland. He reports a good game between Nebraska and O. A. C. football teams.

Sixty new bureaus were distributed in the various rooms of the pupils' quarters Saturday afternoon by the property clerk, Mr. Brace.

Ground has been broken for a macadam road to connect the main road in front of the campus with the one in the rear of the shops.

A 20-horse-power traction engine boiler has been secured to supply steam for the laundry temporarily. This is made necessary on account of two of the school boilers being out of commission.

Superintendent Hall gave a very forceful talk at Sunday night chapel on the individual responsibility of the students and the far-reaching effects of carelessness.

Miss Welsh from Portland and Mrs. Seviens from Silverton visited Chemawa Saturday. They were delighted with the school and are planning to come back again soon.

Mrs. Brewer returned from her northern trip on Sunday last. She met with a warm welcome from all. About eighty-five pupils were enrolled through Mrs. Brewer's efforts.

Petroleum Barrett, a former Chemawa student, spent last week-end with his brother George. He left monday for Portland where he will take a good position in a large machine shop.

Chemawa boasts of a well kept and well organized student body dining room and kitchen as well as a bakery. Our pupils are fortunate indeed in having such an abundance of well prepared food which is well served.

Miss Ruth Brewer and Mr. Loulin Brewer entered the Oregon Agricultural College at Corvallis this year. Both of these estimable young people are graduates of Chemawa, and afterwards graduated from the Salem High School.

An attractive booklet containing Chemawa songs and yells is now being printed in the American office. The student body is fortunate in having the President in the printing office, as he is compiling old favorites and adding the new ones.

Nick Orloff, our yell leader, requests that everybody keep their eyes on him from the time he gives the signals for yells or songs until finished. It is the only method by which the student body can render their yells or songs in unison and effectively.

Miss Sarah Brewer, our efficient and wide-awake stenographer and assistant clerk in the Superintendent's office, devotes an hour each night during study hour teaching a class of pupils in stenography who are especially anxious to learn. All are taking much interest.

Mr. Smith has received a letter from Joseph Dunbar, one of Chemawa's graduates. At present he is located in Cleveland, Ohio, where he is employed by the Maxwell Automobile Company. Joseph was one of our all-round athletes and sends best wishes to our football team for a successful season.

Mr. William J. Warner, of Cornell University, will take up the coaching of the Chemawa football teams for the rest of the season. Mr. Warner is one of the best coaches in America. He will be ably assisted by Mr. Ruben Sanders who has had the team in training up to the present time and has done good work.
