BIG GAME OF THE SEASON

By the score of 7-7 the Chemawa foot-ball team last Saturday in Portland tied the Multnomah Athletic Club, probably the best team Chemawa has gone up against this season.

As in the game with the University of Oregon the score does not tell the story of the game nor represent the comparative strength of the two teams. The Chemawa team gained about three times as many yards as Multnomah and were superior in every department of the game except punting. Several errors on the part of the referee were, in each case, costly to Chemawa. In the second quarter, Downie attempted a drop kick and the ball was partially blocked by a Multnomah man, but rolled across the Multnomah goal line, where Hauser fell on it for what should have been a touchdown, but the referee did not see the ball first touch a Multnomah player, altho' the player admitted that it did, and would not allow the touch down.

The score of Multnomah came in the first quarter from a long run on a delayed double pass around Chemawa's left end. At no other time during the game was Multnomah near enough to Chemawa's goal to be dangerous. Chemawa's touchdown was made by Watts on a short end run after the ball had been advanced by Chemawa from the middle of the field on forward passes and runs and line bucks to within a few yards of the goal.

Sanders suffered a broken and dislocated wrist at the very beginning of the game and was replaced by White.

The Chemawa line played fine football; was quick to charge, playing hard all the time. Almost no ground was made through Chemawa's tackles by their opponents. The line men also afforded excellent interference for the kicks and end runs. Chemawa's interference on end runs was beautiful and every interference helped put some dangerous opponent out of the way.

The passing of Elk, playing his first game of the year at center, was faultless. Watts and Downie did fine playing and tackling and the work of Crane and Chamberlin was good.

Out of many attempted forward passes Multnomah only made one which was successful, and on nearly every one attempted by them the ball was caught by either Chamberlin, Watts or Crane.

The team is steadily improving and if they keep on, before the end of the season will be the equal of any of the Northwest University teams.

A LUCKY ESCAPE

The school horse barn had a narrow escape from destruction on Sunday night last. About 8:15 p. m. four long blasts of the whistle sounded, followed by short toots, signifying that fire had started at the barns. In an incredibly short time the fire company was upon the scene, adjusted the hose and quickly was playing water in the south end of the hay mow in the horse barn, where the hay was on fire.

The writer was on the scene and was gratified to note the precision with which each member of the fire company did his work. It was also noticed how methodically the barn boys turned out the horses and conveyed movable things to a place of safety. The fire was soon extinguished and it was found that but comparatively little damage had been done.

A great many of the students had retired, but without an exception every-one lined up outside of his respective quarters for roll call. It was especially gratifying to learn of the work of the officers in clearing each dormitory so quickly, as well as the interest shown on the part of employes who rushed from room to room to see that no child was missed. The origin of the fire is unknown.

APPRECIATION OF TEACHER

One morning last week Mrs. San Brace, the eighth grade teacher, was surprised on entering the school-room to find on her desk a large package tied with blue and white ribbons, and beside the large package a smaller one. Just at that time the class assembled and their smiling countenances betrayed the fact that what was on the desk was no mystery to them. Upon removal of the wrappings of the larger package there was revealed a cake thirteen and one half inches in diameter and thick in proportion, the snowy surface of which was sprinkled with nuts. The smaller package proved to be a daintily embroidered post card holder, all in white.

The cake was a contribution from the entire class and the embroidery was a gift from one of the girls. The occasion was the teacher's birthday and the presents are proof conclusive, not only of the culinary ability and efficiency in needlework of her pupils, but of their kindness and generosity as well, and denotes appreciation of kindness, patience and interest on the part of Mrs. Brace, who gives every minute of her time to the upbuilding of her students.
