SENIOR PARTY

The nineteen members of the senior class, together with their instructor, Mrs. Risser, entertained a large number of students and faculty at the annual Valentine party, which was given on Saturday evening in the gymnasium. These young people took a lot of interest in decorating the large room and rarely have we seen it present a more tasty or artistic appearance. The large stage was made into a class room with class colors, blue and gold, pennants and trophies used as decorations, while the main body of the gym abounded with row upon row of hearts suspended from above. On the walls were heart games. One end of the gym was screened off for the refreshment room, white lattice screens with big red hearts thereon. Altogether the setting was most pleasing and reflected much credit upon the skill and artistic sense of the seniors.

A program, consisting of class stunts, recitations, musical numbers, etc., and a class prophecy was given. This feature of the evening's pleasure represented the class on general Friday morning session, Logan Fann, class president, presiding. Maybelle Heay gave original verses, showing considerable literary ability. The prophecy by Allan Shepard was quite clever and unusual in his method of treatment. The class mascot, little Joe Matt, was a prominent figure and the mascot song gave much merriment to the many guests and apparently quite delighted little Joe. After the program cards for the guessing contest, and dancing were distributed. Then the fun of the evening began, which continued until refreshment hour arrived, at which time the entire party formed in couples and to lively music marched to the refreshment room, where small tables were formed in the shape of a heart around one large center table. Here again the heart motif was carried out with streamers of hearts over head, table decorations of hearts, heart favors and cupid place cards. The supper was dainty and delicious. Between courses the class enlivened the scene by singing some of their good songs. Wade Minthorne, official announcer, presented prizes to Julia Stevens and Jacob Mynuk and to Mary Unge and George Lekanoff for the successful contestants in the competitive dances.

This year's senior class is composed of a wide-awake, clever lot of pupils, and whenever they have anything to do they enter into the spirit of the matter at hand and always do it right.

A delightful evening was spent by the many persons present and all wended their way home feeling grateful to Mrs. Risser and the class. The following members constitute the seniors: Alicia Kimball, Muriel Bush, Eleanor Hauk, Mary Unge, Isabelle Lavadore, Veltha Frazier, Catherine Wilder, Sadie Knowles, Mae Belle Heay, Florence Hoover, Julia Mills, Elizabeth Reinville, Julia Gromoff, Bertha Grimes, Logan Fann, Wade Minthorne, Frank Johnson, George Lekanoff, Allan Shepard.

Mary Motanic was leader on Sunday, February 16. The meeting in the afternoon was a lively one in spite of the fact that Miss Eakin could not be present. It was opened by singing three or four old-time songs, followed by the secretary calling the roll, each member responding with a proverb. The subject for discussion was the common failing, "Gossip." Alicia Kimball played a piano solo. Josephine Corbett read from the Bible selections touching on the day's topic. After a few more songs and the benediction the meeting came to a close.

REPORTER'S NOTES

By Allan Shepard

On Friday the combined force of blacksmiths and engineers was engaged at the task of putting up a new smokestack at the power house. The work was completed in one day.

The painters have been engaged of late at the task of painting the lower halls of the academic building.

That part of the campus lying between the hospital and academic building has been plowed up and is to be leveled off and graded and resown to grass. In the past this section of the campus was utilized as a parade ground and we presume it will be again, as it is excellent for that purpose.

Robert Downie, class president for the seniors before leaving school for his home in Tacoma, sent the class a Valentine, which was much appreciated.

George Lekanoff made an extension for a dust brush for Mrs. Hall recently. The work was well executed, as is everything coming from the hands of George.

Of late the carpenters have been busily engaged in making window frames for the new wagon shed. They are now about done.

From what Mr. Hobucket says there is no doubt that Francis Smith is far above the average when it comes to "pailing a cow." Really, he has the knack of it down fine.

During last week the steam dryers in the laundry were overhauled and repaired.

Mrs. Loos has the lobby and "Golden Stairway" in Mitchell Hall tastefully decorated with pussy willows.
