SENIOR NOTES

A Salem visitor at "Mr. Bob" expressed much pleasure in the play and particularly enjoyed the class songs.

Some of the ladies on the campus are trying to engage "Jenkins" as butler for their next "classy" social function.

The seniors find it hard to beat Clarence Edwards in period averages. He leads his class, followed by Elizabeth Beall and Opal Pearson.

Heard on the campus: "There was less disturbance getting up the senior play than about any entertainment I've ever seen at Chemawa."

Theresa Gua received the highest grade in her domestic art class. Mabel Blodgett, Katherine Loftus and Clara Morais missed it by one point.

The class of '21 presented "Mr. Bob" December 17.

Act 1, morning; Act 2, afternoon.

An advertising stunt for this play took place in the dining room. Edwin Liljegren and Roy Nuckolls had a quarrel—others nearby believing they were in earnest. Mr. Downie interfered and found it was all about the senior play, "Mr. Bob."

OUR CHAPEL SERVICE

During chapel exercises on Sunday evening the orchestra played "La Cinquantaine" by Lack, the Octette Girls sang "Cast Thy Bread on the Waters," Cruz McDaniels gave as a baritone solo "When You are Mine" by Lee, the Choir sang the "Wonderful Story of Love" by Driver. Mr. Paul Corbett, who was here from Kamiah, Idaho, was on the platform with Supt. Hall and was invited to address those assembled. He made a good talk to the students, encouraging them to take advantage of their opportunities here in every way possible. He had only words of praise for our great school and its management, thus paying a deserved compliment to Supt. Hall.

BASKETBALL

A complete schedule will be published soon.

The first game on our schedule will be played about January seventh.

As usual the girls will be given a chance to show their wares. Arrangements are being made to play their first game here shortly after the holidays. The prospects for a winning team are unusually bright. A larger number of girls turned out for practice this season than in any two years previous, and they all have the knack of playing, too.

LOCAL

The Winonas adjourned to attend the senior play. It is said some carried their spelling books with them—the inter-society contest is almost here.

Mrs. Hall gave a reception to the Sigma girls the other evening in honor of the new members as well as visiting members. Mr. Paul Corbett was also present.

Supt. and Mrs. Hall motored to Portland on Monday to attend matters of business in connection with our Christmas, as well as inspecting supplies for the Indian Service.

Order of Divine Service on Christmas Day for all Catholic children: First mass and communion at five o'clock with extra music. Second mass at eight o'clock. Ten o'clock mass and benediction.

"Mr. Bob," the play given last Thursday evening by the Senior class, was under the direction of Mrs. Risser and was splendidly acted in its every detail—a credit to all. Lack of space prevents extended mention, but let it suffice to say the patronage was good and the Seniors are ahead $83.

The first big, pre-Christmas pop corn party was held Monday evening in the students' kitchen by several members of the faculty. It was a real enjoyable evening and several large baskets of corn were popped and sent to the domestic science department where it will be made into nice big balls for students.

Y. M. AND Y. W. C. A. NOTES

On Sunday afternoon Protestant preaching service was conducted by Rev. Thomas Acheson, pastor of the Jason Lee Memorial church of Salem. His sermon was a Christmas message, in keeping with the Christmas spirit which prevails on the campus, and was much enjoyed by all who attended. Special Music for the afternoon was furnished by the Y.W.C.A. chorus.

On Monday evening, the L. L. L. chapter of the Y.W.C.A. held their Christmas program, with the president, Maudie Craig, presiding. The program consisted of songs and recitations by the members and the telling of Van Dyke's story, "The Other Wise Man." A number of the members of this chapter have just received beautiful little bookmarks for their new Bibles, as a reward for learning the names of all the books of the Bible.

The Y. W. C. A. had an excellent Christmas program on Sunday afternoon. The meeting was led by Annie Miller, and the program was as follows: Christmas song, Y. W. Chorus; The prophecy of Christmas, Harriet Cain; the story of the Shepherds, Rebecca Carpenter; The Magic Christmas Tree, Carrie Anderson; "Holy Night," Y. W. Chorus; the story of the Wise Men, Julia Gromoff; What Christmas Really Means, Eleanor Hauk; Reading, "Christmas Everywhere," Hattie Martin.
