ATHLETIC NOTES

Wilford Evans of the Excelsiors was easily high point man of the trackmeet last Saturday. With a total of 20 points he stood high above any of his nearest competitors. John Hanson and Elmer Therriault came next in line with 10 points each.

The track and field meet held between the Excelsiors and Reliance societies Saturday was exciting and interesting throughout. Although Reliance won handily by a comparatively large score every event was characterized by the closeness at the tape, in several events just an inch or so was the deciding factor.

Mr. Bent has just received word from the University of Oregon stating that their 'varsity baseball team could not come here next week-end as they had scheduled, but will send their Freshmen team instead. One of the two games is to be played on the league grounds in Salem. Mr. Bent intends to take the band to that game. If the team don't make a hit the band will.

The track meet was a success last Saturday in that it served its purpose. The idea was to awaken those with ability to do track work. More first-class material was presented than we had any right to expect and has caused some of the letter men to wonder if they had not better get in and work if they want to retain their suits even during this year. We will wager that the boys not only surprised the spectators but themselves also.

JUNIOR NOTES

When exhibit day comes, notice the furniture produced by the carpenters of the junior class.

Last week for his experiment in chemistry, George Thomas showed the class how to make red flash lights.

These Juniors are on the honor roll for March: Elizabeth Churchill, Wallace Morgan and Dewey Sampson.

Whenever it comes to solving algebra equation, the class of '22 look to Frank Sookum and Wallace Morgan for help.

Those on the honor roll in the eighth grade B are: Rebecca Carpenter, Roy Courville, Cruz McDaniels and Irma LeClaire.

Lessons in chemistry are getting interesting now, because an explosion occurs nearly every day in the laboratory. If there are any more experiments on chlorine gas the juniors will have to invent some kind of gas masks.

SENIOR NOTES

Mrs. Iliff, principal pro tem, gave the class a good practical talk one morning last week.

Sunday afternoon found the girls of the class down at the bear pit interviewing Sampson, their mascot.

On Monday of last week the class of '21 made a special trip to Salem to have pictures taken for the annual.

The boys say the girls can take that sour, anxious look off their faces now as they all found they passed in D. S. finals.

These nice warm spring evenings make it hard to go inside early and study, but the seniors are at it just the same, as was shown by the improved report cards on Friday.

The seniors have been too busy to have a class song period lately, but Friday after letters were finished they put on a good little impromptu program of songs, recitations and class yells.

The botany class has made some very life-like water color paintings of various wild flowers of this vicinity. Some look so real that it seems you can smell them, for instance the skunk cabbage.

The commencement operetta has been decided upon and work is beginning. After the production of "Snow White" on next Friday evening the auditorium will be in use a great deal by the seniors.

Clarence Edwards, the algebra wizard, is again honor man in the period averages; he stands ninety-one per cent. Clarence was also honor student of his class when they were juniors. Seems to be a habit!

DOMESTIC SCIENCE NOTES

Clara Thorpe is cook for this week.

Any more birthdays? Ask the junior girls about birthday cakes.

The junior girls will soon be applying for positions, for they all passed in the test.

The junior girls took their final test on Tuesday. This completes their course of study for the junior year.

Hattie Cayton, Ethel Henry, Laura Waun and Joyce Simons have proved their skill in cake baking this week.

The senior dinners are over and the girls have done themselves proud. Ellen Beall gave her's Monday noon, Elizabeth Beall Wednesday noon, and Opal Pearson Wednesday evening, Harriet Cain gave her's Friday noon. This finished the year's work. Opal Pearson has the highest average for the year with Mabel Blodgett a close second in written work.

The junior girls have accomplished a great deal. This is shown by their grades in the test, Elizabeth Churchill getting 100 percent, and Joyce Simons 95 percent, Rose Grey 91 percent, Ethel Henry, Millie Bennett, and Frances Fitzpatrick 90 percent, Frances Thorpe, Hattie Cayton, Laura Waun, Elizabeth Poitras, Victoria Sansaver, Ione Henry, and Margaret Jackson in grades ranging from 80 to 90 percent.
