At 2 o'clock in the afternoon there was a campus meeting. The spot chosen for the meeting was the beautiful shaded stretch of lawn just west of the academic building. Mr. Downie acted as master of ceremonies and many were the stunts pulled off by various students, individually and collectively. All participants gave most pleasing accounts of themselves and helped to make the afternoon one to be remembered for years.

At 8 p. m. "The Maid and the Middy," an operetta in two acts, was given in the auditorium for the benefit of faculty members and the students, and it was noted that we had quite a number of visitors as well, and all were made welcome. The operetta pleased all who were present and those who took part are deserving of every bit of praise they received—and they received a lot, too.

On Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock the various shops were thrown open for the inspection of visitors and the forenoon was passed in a way that proved of unusual interest as the many visitors were profoundly impressed with the thoroughness of the school and the capacity of the pupils. The school scored 100 in the test.

At 1:30 P. M. there was a competitive fire drill, which proved quite a feature, although it was over in a jiffy, which was what was expected and desired.

At 4:30 there was a dress parade and at 6:30 a concert by the band and large crowds were entertained. Following the band concert came the second evening of the operetta, "The Maid and the Middy," this time for visitors. Well, we had a crowd—a jam, in fact—as there was soon "standing room only." It was the largest crowd ever at a commencement at Chemawa. Our auditorium is a spacious affair and it was packed. Our visitors consisted of the best people of Salem and various adjacent sections and all were pleased. The operetta went smoothly and it seemed that those composing cast and choruses fairly eclipsed on this evening all their former efforts. It was one grand success and was worthy the acclaim of the hundreds and hundreds of our visitors.

Wednesday morning, at 9:30 o'clock, the various companies composing the school battalion drilled in competition for prizes. All did well and the drilling was a credit to the school, but where there are winners there are also losers. Esther Blodgett, captain of the girls' Company A, won out with her company in the girls' competitive drill and received a cup for her company. Company C, boys, captained by Charles Buchert, was successful in the boys' competitive drill and took the cup offered. The competitive drill was followed by a dress parade. Adjutant General White was the judge of the competitive drilling, and was in every way satisfactory to all in that capacity and made friends by his fairness and evident ability.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the the physical culture classes of Mr. Bent gave an exhibition of a pleasing character. There were special calisthenic drills by the small girls of Winona Hall, pyramid building by the boys of Brewer Hall, wand drill by larger girls of Winona Hall and the exhibition concluded with
