

ACADEMIC NOTES

Eva Bean is enjoying her work with the little folk of the first grade.

Dr Wedge told three beautiful stories to the student body in the school assemblies while he was at Chemawa. His illustrated talks made a deep impression, but those stories, told so impressively, will influence conduct throughout life.

One of our high school boys, Frank James, has his name near the top of the roll of honor at the Salem High School. Frank earned an average of 1 in his studies this year, and only in one subject for one period has he brought home a grade of less than 1. He is carrying a course that includes two "math" subjects, solid geometry and trigonometry. This speaks well for his training at Chemawa as well as his own industry.

Next Wednesday the 2nd and 3rd grades have volunteered to take care of the literary end of the program in the school assemblies. At previous assemblies the 6th grade gave a short biography of Longfellow and recited one of his poems; the 5th grade took Tennyson and the 4th Whittier. The 2nd and 3rd grades are free to make their own selection as to author, except that they must be guided by the work outlined for their grades in the course of study. Come prepared for a literary feast.

A few days ago the third grade were puzzling over two questions concerning the diameter and the circumference of the earth that they came across in a geography test. Frank Conway was the only one in the class who knew the correct answer, and he explained proudly that he "found it in the library." Our students are using the library more than ever before. The answer to the questions asked each week in current events may all be found in the library. If you doubt about this ask the boy who is always ready with the answers—John Kalarak.

SENIOR NOTES

Our Senior quartette is going to Portland on April 30 to sing in the public library, where a lecture is to be held.

Chief Engineer Vesper has planted some fine walnut trees near the power house in memory of the Sophomore boys who are working in his department.

What a great change it is falling down from a senior to a Sophomore. Any way it does not seem to change the class spirit so far. "Victory" will always be in the lead.

Three or four "Sophie" boys attended The Older Boys' Conference last week in Salem and they said they certainly enjoyed it and found the meetings profitable.

Six Sophomore (formerly Seniors) carpenter boys in division 1 are building a garage back of the gym. The Freshmen (formerly Juniors) in the other division are working on the same.

Anna Peratrovich has been fortunate in being selected as one of the delegates to represent Oregon at the National Older Girls' Conference at Denver, Colorado. Each state in the Union sends representatives to this Conference, which takes place in August.

Percy Woodcock, a prominent senior, is the manager and captain of the Chemawa "Midgets," a team composed of a few semi-pro and "Bush League Stars" under the age of seventeen. He is hard at work trying to get games with teams from Salem, and is willing to play any team in Oregon, under seventeen years of age.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE NOTES

Wow, wow! Glad to say we are real Freshmen and to think we can graduate from the twelfth grade from Chemawa certainly makes us all feel like returning again next year.

We are beginning to learn who the champions in cake making are. We are proud to say they are Agnes Williams and Florence Murchison.

Dot Parker has invented a new way of making doughnuts—baking them in the oven.

We cooked our first breakfast this year on Wednesday morning; the breakfast proved to be a perfect success; the hotcakes and waffles were delicious.

Agnes Williams and Lavina Montgomery have the heart of a Freshman; they were willing to stay and finish the baking so the rest could go to the ball game.

Several of the girls have been acting as night nurses. This shows we still live up to our motto, "Service."

The Freshies are as green as grass. One of the Freshies said to Miss Strout, "I never did see sauerkraut grow."

The girls at the Wigwam served a dinner on Wednesday in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Wedge. Ten guests were present. Agnes Orr and Sarah Cooper acted as waitresses.

FRESHMEN.

DOMESTIC ART NOTES

Good morning, folks!

We, the class of '29, are progressing in our sewing. We were fortunate enough to have a day for renovating some of our cloths.

We hope to have our gray uniforms out by Saturday so as to wear them Sunday.

A baby layette is being made for demonstration week.

We are glad we will be given the opportunity to finish our high school course here.

The senior girls have started the costumes for the operetta.
