

COLLEGES, CHARACTER AND CAREERS

than because of the skill which they may have shown in their college examinations.

It is for all colleges, then, to give more and more consideration to these facts. The ability to work with others, ably and harmoniously, is so important today that colleges cannot afford to ignore it as an essential purpose in education.

The lower schools are not only letting go of marking systems as fast as certain conservative elements will permit, but they are putting less stress upon the amount of knowledge stored away and are undertaking movements in character education far-reaching in their scope. Committees and commissions on character education are afoot in city, state and nation. Regardless of the widely differing opinions as to how character should be trained, the feeling has become quite general in many lands that intellectual training is not the only important training that school and college have to offer.—CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR.

CHEMAWA WINS OPENING GAMES

The first game on our basketball schedule was played during the holidays against Anderson's quintet of the Salem Industrial League. It was a real opening game for our basketeers that waxed and waned till the tail end of the third period and held the excited interest of the huge crowd of spectators. The visitors had established quite an early season record and were bent on adding our scalps to their collection of prizes. The score was just about even when our team caged several baskets for a good, healthy lead. But immediately following that spurt our hoopers made the mistake that is so often fatal—they "let up" for the instant and the whistle was all that saved us from an alert, aggressive visiting team. The first half ended 11 to 11. So many new ones have made us rather dubious but we will, by careful, hard work, be decidedly stronger than we were last season. The possibilities are greater—more reserve material and more basket shooters. The final score was Chemawa 29, Anderson's 22. John Marsden, center, was our bright and shining light. His work was especially effective under the basket. Jesse Prettyman and Albert Miller, forwards; Leonard Vivette and William Jones, guards, were our starting line-up. A switch to the "T" formation in the third quarter enabled our forwards to control the tip-off which paved the way to our sudden spurt. Leonard Vivette gives promise of being a real tough guard. His basket shooting is a valuable asset. Isaac Curley strengthened the team somewhat when he replaced Jones who was removed because of personal fouls.

Last Friday evening our team won over Silverton high just by the skin of its teeth. A single point was the only difference between the two scores. Those close games are hard on close followers of the team. The little group that accompanied the team were just about as much fagged out as the players themselves. Only in the first period and at the tail end of the game did our boys lead. The first period ended 10 to 4 in our favor. Silverton overcame our lead and the half ended 16 to 12. Silverton just about out-shined us all but the basket shooting of Leonard Vivette, who topped the list with thirteen points. It was his pretty, long shot that pulled the game out of the fire for us just before the game closed. Jesse Prettyman and Albert Miller, forwards, were not in the game nor will they be able to play in association games till the first of February. Probably their absence had something to do with the team's ragged and ineffective floor work. They failed to break into the offense, their passes were bad and poorly timed and many of them intercepted or fumbled. John Marsden and William Jones were both removed from the game because of personal fouls and were replaced by "Buck" Smith and Joe Alexander who staved off several of Silverton's threatening attacks.

Thursday the team plays Franklin high at Portland.
