(FROM THE QUIVER OF WILL DUKANT.)

Truth will not make us rich, but will make us free.

Woe unto him who teaches men faster than they can learn.

Science gives us knowledge, but only philosophy can give us wisdom.

Philosophy begins when one learns to doubt one's cherished beliefs, one's dogmas and one's axioms.

Great men speak to us only so far as we have ears to hear them; only so far as we have within us the roots, at least, of that which flowers in them.

In every country where centuries of physical effort have accumulated the means of luxury and leisure, culture has followed as naturally as vegetation in a rich and watered soil. A people must live before it can philosophize.

So much of our lives is meaningless, a self-cancelling vacillation and futility; we strive with the chaos about us and within; but we would believe all the while that there is something vital and significant in us, could we decipher our own soul.

Most of us have known some golden days in the June of life when philosophy was in fact what Plato calls it, "that dear delight;" when the love of a modestly elusive Truth seemed more glorious, incomparably, than the lust of the ways of the flesh and the dross of the world.

Everything is possible to man. Time is young; give us some little centuries, and we shall control and remake all things. We shall perhaps at last learn the noblest lesson of all, that man must not fight man, but must make war only on the obstacles that Nature offers to the triumph of man.

We must give to every child, and from the outset, full equality of educational opportunity; there is no telling where the light of talent or genius will break out; we must seek it impartially everywhere, in every rank and race. The first turn on our road is universal education.

ISN'T THIS FINE?

There has just been received at Chemawa six new typewriters of the latest improved models—Underwood, Remington and L. C. Smith—and a new Sunstrand adding machine, for the Business English department to be organized at the opening of school next fall. There is also being purchased 100 steel frame, tablet armchairs for use in the Business English room, and in class rooms in the industrial buildings. Next year will find our school better equipped for teaching than it has ever been before.

Much new furniture and equipment have recently been purchased for the various dormitories and departments. New rugs, dishes and silverware have been received for the Junior Home Economics department, some new rugs for the hair-dressing parlor in Winona Hall. Orders have been placed for 500 common chairs for dormitory rooms, 100 upholstered fibre chairs for sitting rooms, and 100 bent wood chairs for music studio, also 50 armchairs for auditorium stage. Recently new rugs, chairs and davenports were placed in the large sittingroom in Winona Hall, so that altogether Chemawa is getting to be pretty well equipped and our students well provided with the comforts and conveniences of life.
