

McNARY HALL NOTES

The Senior Play seems to be the crowning event of the season by the appearances of preparations being made by boys of this dormitory. David Little Swallow has been shining his shoes for a week now and they look so bright they look like mirrors. Ferdinand Thomas, Leroy Grenier, and William "Igloo" Demmert have patented a new type of hair oil which they used for the first time in the senior play. They have mixed whale blubber with muddy water from the Missouri and snow from Glacier National Park. Everyone is hoping for the success of this new hair oil.

Perhaps by the time these notes are published McNary will have defeated Brewer Hall in the inter-dormitory track meet. Both dormitories have some good material, but McNary should win.

Isn't it great to always have McNary the best building on the campus? Some would like to know how and why reports always put McNary on top. The reason is this: Everyone must co-operate and work as a team; do only those things that are beneficial to your home and see that everyone around you does the same; respect your neighbor's room and property as your own; don't put off until tomorrow what must be done today.

One of the best reasons for the excellent condition of McNary Hall is the close competition given by Winona and McBride Halls. We admit that McBride and Winona are very well kept buildings and we are happy that we can lead such a fine list.

CARPENTER SHOP

James Walters recently built a small balcony in our shop to store our rapidly increasing stock of projects.

The carpenters are now learning to cut braces and rafters. They are just beginning the framing of a small roof made on one-half scale.

The cabinet makers are studying types of wood, its properties and adaptabilities. We have in our shop sample panels of over twenty different species of wood.

Soon we shall have a corner section full-size house complete in our shop.

EIGHTH GRADE NEWS

By mistake the name of Alice Morigeau was not sent the printers for the publication in the last honor roll.

John Craig, Clarence Cavyell and Wilbur Pepion also made the honor roll last month. Through an error their names were omitted from the last issue.

We miss our classmate, Dora McBride, who has been in the hospital for three weeks. She was always so willing to recite or talk on the subject in our class.

Tuesday afternoon, April 12, during the last period of school, 8-A-I and 8-A-II girls class went out for a walk and picked all varieties of flowers. We were sorry not to have along with us, Nurine Paul, Elizabeth Wynaco and Dora McBride who were all sick at the hospital at that time.

The civics class from the Yamhill High School visited Chemawa a few days ago. One girl remarked, "We'd be very happy to have a nice big library like this. Certainly the students here have great advantages." Another student said, "Since we belong to the civics class we are looking for things that show training for either citizenship or democracy." We wonder how many things they saw.

We fifth grade boys are going to try hard to pass our finals, so we can be in the sixth grade next year.

Joseph Saluskin was the only little fifth grader that went to Mrs. Wilcox's picnic. He had A's in his room all the time.

We are now studying Africa in our home room and we like it the best of all because it has such great jungles and such funny wild animals. We saw a lot of these animals in "Trader Horn."

Our teacher has been checking up on our hands and faces for a long time. If we come to school twice in one week with dirty hands and finger nails we will have to go to study hall. But if we have no bad marks against us before commencement she said she would give us a treat.

AUTO SHOP NOTES

The auto mechanics have received a number of very interesting and instructive booklets from manufacturers of automobile parts and equipment.

We are reviewing the year's work and bringing our note books up to date. Note books count 50 percent in final grades, so everyone is busy putting on the "final touches."
