

EMBRYO ARCHITECTS

The carpenters and machinists are making a "Grandad" micrometer for the shop math class.

Messrs. Emmons, Peterson, Williams and Thomas made tracings for the blue prints in their drafting class.

The carpentry class have now completed the isometric sketches for their shop notebook illustrations.

The embryo architects are now turning out a set of plans for a residence, the estimate for which they shall work out in the shop math class.

All drafting students are working toward ability to turn out a good and usable blue print.

NEWS NOTES

The lawn mowers are being worked over for the spring landscaping which will soon begin.

Oma Woodcock left for Portland Tuesday afternoon to enter upon the outing system. She was accompanied by Miss Newell.

Miss Margaret Hoptowit visited at her home in Toppenish, Wash., over the last week-end. Helen Shaughnessy took her place at the club during her absence.

Last Friday the Altamot had as guests Mr. and Mrs. Ryan, Mr. LaVatta, Miss Stewart and Miss Eldridge. Lorraine Dennis and Laura Walters served a very delicious meal.

The Little Flower society held their regular meeting Tuesday, Feb. 6. The Life of a Saint was read by Nellie Boe. A discussion was given on Planting a Flower Garden of Life. A very enjoyable program was given and all adjourned.

Last Thursday marked the informal initiation of the log cabin which was recently built in the woods out pigville way. Mr. LaVatta gave the boys a nice talk and the evening reached its climax when Messrs. Rickard and Larnard were called upon to give a tap dance (no excuses accepted.)

Earl Stanhope has finished the barber course here and left Friday for his home in Tekoe, Wash. Earl applied himself seriously in his work and Mr. Hall, his instructor, says that in addition to being a fine boy personally, he had developed into a skilled workman. Earl passed the state board examination for barbers with a high mark.

To the casual glance it would seem that the Chemawa athletic field is being converted into a crop-producing area but in reality the ground is being plowed up and entirely regraded. This operation is intended to eliminate the holes and shallow depressions that collected quantities of water during rainy weather as in the days of yore. The field will be graded so that water will drain off to the sides. Mr. Shawver, the agriculture instructor, is in charge of the work.

Many students and employees attended the Salem showing of the picture, "Massacre." Richard Barthelmess, as a young circus performer, and Ann Dvorak, as a Haskell commercial graduate, acted the parts with sympathy and good taste.

SENIOR NOTES

The flash pictures which were taken of the senior ball are not bad, to say the least. They are on sale and procurable from the business manager of the class, at a very reasonable price.

All hands on deck! And every senior is working for the glorification of Chemawa's birthday. If you have forgotten, Chemawa will be fifty-four on the twenty-fifth of the current month.

The annual staff is meeting at regular intervals for the purpose of making bigger and better plans for the honorable Chief of '34. These meetings are scheduled weekly and will continue to be held until the year book is assembled, set up, run off the press and sold.

The senior and sophomore girls met in the Chemawa gym on February 7, in one of the toughest contests of the season, for the honor of classes was at stake. It was a very well-matched battle. The score of the final standing was 18-19, with the class of '34 victorious.

"Moose" Parker mixed in fistic combat with a "brother" in the profession from St. Paul, Oregon. He emerged from the conflict with no apparent damage. His pal, Sam Shoulderblade, also went in for a little mix-up. When the smoke cleared away, Sammy came to the top with a darkened eye, but with that Shoulderblade grin, states "I won, though." Johnnie Spencer was also with the boys and, we are sorry to relate, he was defeated.

SENIOR BALL GREAT SUCCESS

Chemawa and vicinity gave its full support to the noble cause and the Senior Ball was attended almost one hundred per cent. The gym was changed into a fairyland of pink and green crepe paper. We imagine that this caused the seniors a great deal of trouble but the effect was beautiful.

The enjoyment of the evening was enhanced by the contribution of solos and special numbers by various members of the senior class. Music was furnished by The Rhythm Chiefs, and we might add that it was swell music. Mr. Preston of the Kennell-Ellis studios came out when the evening was in full swing and took some flash pictures.

Just before midnight when everyone was hungry refreshments were served. Home waltz was played and tired dancing feet took happy owners to their respective abodes.
