

INDIAN LEGEND

TULALIP INDIAN STORY
By ADAM BEARCUB

IN a certain good sized village lived Mr. Crane and his bride the little diver or Hoh-Kwi. They were very happy, the little diver was a good wife and the Crane a fine husband.

One day the wife pretended that she was ill and the Crane became concerned about her, for he thought that she was really quite ill. He went fishing and tried his best to get her the choicest nourishing food, and after catching a few he would hurry home and give them to his wife. After several days, he began to wonder why his wife did not improve in health, until one day he came home and found out she was carrying on a flirtation with Mr. Kingfisher and he realized that his wife had not been sick at all and had been deceiving him all the time. He could not decide how to punish her at first, but finally he decided to fly with her to a very tall cedar tree and leave her their to die.

Someone saw the little Diver up in the tree and ran to tell her parents; her parents wanted to save her if possible so they offered a high reward to the one who would rescue their daughter. When the people in the village heard about the reward, they all tried but failed because their strength would give out before they reached her. After all hope was given up a beautiful girl by the name of Woodpecker came to the amazement of all. She unfastened the cedar rope that the little duck had been tied with and saved her. The people and parents rejoiced because of the safe return of the little Diver and proceeded to award the Woodpecker and because they were grateful they gave her nearly all they owned and became poor people.

Through the waywardness of their daughter these old people had to suffer, and the lesson part of the story is that though a mis-step not only our selves, but those who are dear to us must suffer, as did the little diver and her parents, when the Little Diver became untrue to her husband the Crane.

Local News

Mr. Homer L. Morrison, superintendent of Indian education in the state of Washington and a former superintendent of Chemawa, visited here last week.

Superintendent and Mrs. Jackson went to Tacoma on business, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Noble Sanderville announce the arrival of a baby daughter. Mr. and Mrs. Sanderville are former students of Chemawa and now reside in Browning, Montana, where Mr. Sanderville is a clerk at the Agency. Mrs. Sanderville will be remembered as Miss Phyllis Applegate.

Miss Hazel Chambers, who came from Loup, Arizona, is the new eighth grade teacher. Chemawa hopes that Miss Chambers will enjoy her work here.

A bridal shower, given in honor of Miss Ruby Kiesling by Mrs. Leo Walker, Mrs. Alta James, and Viola Schultz, was held at the Walker home Wednesday evening. Thirty guests enjoyed games and Miss Kiesling received many beautiful gifts. She plans to leave next week for her wedding in California.

Forty-five sturdy football players and guests were honored with a banquet Thursday evening, held in the Home Economics building.

The Willamette Valley Vocational Association members, on Wednesday, February 8, will hold a dinner and business meeting here.

One can land on page 1 by trying to pass a truck in an early morning fog, but will be in no condition to read the account.

Yep, road hogs are sloppy drivers.

CALENDAR

JANUARY:

- Friday 20—Tri-wrestling meet; Salem, West Linn, and Chemawa—Here
- Sat. 21—Y.M.C.A. wrestling meet with Blind School—Evening
- Tues. 24—Independence vs. Chemawa—Here
- Thurs. 26—Chemawa vs. Salem—There
- Friday 27—All Stars vs. Newberg—Here
- Sat. 28—Tillamook High wrestlers—Here
- Tues. 31—Chemawa vs. Woodburn—Here

FEBRUARY:

- Thur. 1—Wrestlers to Benson Hi'—Afternoon
- Friday 2—All Stars to Salem
- Thurs. 3—Chemawa vs. West Linn—There
- Sat. 4—Nonpareil program in Auditorium
- Tues. 7—Chemawa vs. Lebanon—Here
- Thurs. 9—All Stars to Salem
- Friday 10—Chemawa vs. Dallas—There
- Sat. 11—Open