

From the Vocational Departments

AUTO MECHANICS: Walter Mesplie has been grinding the valves of a Government V-8. Stanley Wilder has finished changing the engine of an automobile.

HOME MECHANICS: These girls are nearly finished with the furniture of the practice cottage. Nellie Walters has been making initials of Myrtlewood, while the others are making cedar chests.

CARPENTRY: Most of the carpenters have been making Christmas presents. Ben Bearchum has finished a large book case for the hospital. The myrtle wood extension table for Mr. Henderson has been finished.

ELECTRIC SHOP: The electricians have installed another light in the Barber shop. The arranging of lights for the Christmas Pageant in the Auditorium has been completed.

BAKERY: The boys, in addition to general production, are learning the fundamentals of ingredients used in mixing dough, such as wheat flour, salt, and shortening. Tests have been taken by the baker students. By this, much more knowledge of baking was acquired.

TAILOR SHOP: All of the tailors cut and sewed the name CHEMAWA, on the varsity basketball suits, and PAPOOSE, on the second team suits. The new boys who are now working on pants are doing fine.

MACHINE SHOP: The machinists have been moving some of the machinery out and sending it to the commissary. Chuck Sams says he is a "conscientious objector" to work.

PAINT SHOP: The painters are painting Winona hall and the Practice cottage furniture. Foreman Robert Charles and his gang will soon start painting the interior of Mr. Showlter's office. They will soon repaper the ceiling of the library.

BARBER SHOP: The barbers have had much practice lately in cutting pompadours, since the boys have been in getting "Bunny Bennett Specials". In their spare time they have been studying correct ways to give shampoos, massages, and shaving from the Barber Science books.

SHOE SHOP: The boys have finished putting leather on the seats in the school bus. Scoop! Yellowmule works in Jim's Shoe Shop in Salem and is getting along fine. Cobblers want more work, for shoe repairing has slackened lately.

GIRLS VOCATIONS: The sophomore clothing girls are making serge dresses for themselves.

They have completed the dresses for the smaller girls. The girls have also been working on Christmas stockings.

The junior girls in the clothing class are working very diligently on the smaller girls' rain caps to finish them before vacation. They are doing nice work in knitting, and are fairly well along with knit blouses. Several of the girls have started making unlined serge suits for themselves.

The Junior Home Management class is making the plans for furnishing the new practice house living room. They have selected some pieces of furniture which must be remodeled. The girls who are now in the Junior practice cottage are Paulette Peone, and Eva Queapama.

The sophomore class of Child Care and Health have started studying child care problems.

The Senior Home Economics girls last week made a every nice selection of wall paper for the kitchen, workroom, and bedroom of the new practice house.

The girls in the Junior Productive Sewing class have finished making garments for the McBride hall girls.

The freshman class completed 600 sheets for Winona hall, and other buildings.

All of the Home Economics Foods classes are making popcorn balls for the students for Christmas.

The sophomore class in cooking is making cookies for the Christmas holidays.

The Senior cooking class has been studying about meat; the various cuts of meats, how to prepare them, and food value of meat. This class is also busy baking very tempting cookies and dainties for Christmas.

The 9C and 10C Arts and Craft classes are still at work on their cross-stitch work, mostly pillow tops and dresser scarfs for which they made their own designs. The girls are making two scarfs apiece, one of which they will keep, and the other they will turn in to the department.

The 10C have finished their attractive Christmas cards, which was one of their class projects. This class has received the beads and buckskin which the girls will work with next.

The freshman sewing girls have started on out-ing flannel pajamas. They are also making nice Christmas gifts.

In the Sophomore Child Care class, Dr. Faxon came over and they had a round table discussion on personal health problems.

The Freshman Foods girls have been making all kinds of griddle cakes. After Christmas they will start on egg cookery.
