

"Three Bright" SENIORS

The windy day of March 31, 1922, was the date on which one of our little senior girls had her first glimpse of the world at Toppenish, Washington. When she discovered that the little city of White Swan was so much larger than Toppenish, she hopped the "White Swan Special," a streamlined iron-horse, and stayed there to grow up with White Swan.

This young lady started school in the Medicine Valley Country School, and spent three years there. Then, in the fourth grade, she entered the White Swan school, and devoted six more years there. One day, a friend told her about Chemawa, and she roped a wild mustang, packed her suitcase and galloped down here, breaking all speed records. She arrived here all "rarin to go," and has been here ever since. She will finish her high school work here, and is making plans to attend Willamette University next year.

"Bugs" as she is known to all her friends, is taking the commercial course, for her greatest ambition is to be a private secretary. She has many hobbies, and her favorites are collecting pictures, reading comic books, and a number of sports, and dancing. "Bugs" always has a friendly smile and, "Hi, hon" to greet her friends. She likes to "slug good" on extra good eats, and also likes typing, and "to be different." "Bugs" has no liking for slang, although she uses it once in a while. Her motto is "Live and learn." To Theda Ashue, we wish the best of luck and happiness in her future life. May she live by her motto!

A cold blustery wind swept over the small town of Nespelem, Washington, on March 19, 1923 announcing the arrival of a cheerful, little Senior girl, Doris "Boots" Nanamkin. When she was a sophomore, Doris heard about Chemawa and how good a school it is, she deserted her classmates in Nespelem to enter here. Since that year, she has been a very studious little girl, and is now majoring in commercial. Her greatest ambition is "to be a good stenographer sometime in the near future." Her hobbies are reading Grace Livingston Hill's books, and collecting pictures of her many friends. For sports, Doris enjoys playing golf, swimming, basketball, baseball, and enjoys attending football games. "Boots" likes lots of eats (mostly Christmas candies), and finds much pleasure in cooking. Her only dislike is getting up early in the morning. She is a faithful member of the YWCA, and is a great help to her class. So, Doris or "Boots," we extend our best wishes for attaining success and happiness!

To this proud and happy senior, we join wishing much success and more happiness as he goes forth to gain his greatest ambitions, which now are—to become a professional basketball player and to be a trumpeter for an orchestra.

Being born in Lame Deer, Montana, on April 15, 1920, he later entered school there and in due time finished grade school. Then deciding that he wanted a vocational education, he came to Chemawa to learn barbering.

He is also taking commercial and must soon decide which he wants for his profession.

For Chemawa he has played two years of basketball. He received a gold basketball for being in the state tournament, and a medal for placing in shot-put in the All-Valley Track Meet last year.

This is his third year in the Lettermen's club and everyone knows him as Melvin Woundedeey.

Juniors Stage Benefit Dance

At the Junior Benefit Dance Saturday, January 11, the students and many employees enjoyed the evening dancing to the music of Mr. Mitchel's orchestra from Salem. The Gymnasium was decorated with much straw, which made everyone feel "at home" in their come-as-you-are attire.

During intermission several members of the junior class, with Miss Morse as director and reader of the play, put on a pantomime skit, "Mellerdramer." It was of the humorous type and everyone seemed to enjoy it very much. After intermission the dancing continued until 10:30 when "Home Sweet Home" was played, and another enjoyable evening was ended.

Mr. Ray Zack, Indian Evangelist, Talks to Protestants

Mr. Ray Zack, who attended college at Eugene, Oregon, was a guest speaker at the Protestant Church, on Sunday, January 12. Mr. Zack has traveled all over the United States, visiting the various Indian reservations and doing Evangelistic work.

CHILD CARE: The girls in the Sophomore Child Care and Health class are beginning a study on child care and its problems.