What is 4-H Club Work?

What is 4-H Club work? It is a junior extension activity of Oregon State College in Oregon. The United States Department of Agriculture, and Marion County all work together to carry on the work. The club is free to boys and girls who are 9 years old and not older than 21 years.

The 4-H Club teaches, through doing, better practices in agriculture and home economics. It teaches boys and girls how to meet each other, work together, play together, and achieve. Members enrolled in 4-H Club work must carry a project, keep records, make exhibits, participate in demonstrations, and learn to judge the finished product.

The Home Economics division, includes cooking, clothing, room improvement, and canning. Under the Agriculture division the care of various kinds of stock and poultry, corn, and gardening can be taking up. Which ever of these subjects a member chooses, he must strive wholeheartedly to live up to the 4-H Club motto, "To make the best better."

If you give the 4-H Club the best that you have, the Club will give you more than that in return. The members of Chemawa's newly formed 4-H Clubs are giving their best to the club. When the time comes to the exhibits, their work will probably be a reward that is worthy of any 4-H Clubber.—MARGARET SKAHAN

From The ALUMNI

Al Myers, who graduated in '39, is a Bell hop in the Winthrop Hotel in Tacoma, Washington.

Mildred Lorenz, '40, and Ann Plasteur, '38, are employed as housekeepers in Portland, Ore.

Agnes Thorpe, '37, is now Mrs. Francis Siler, and is residing in Fort Hall, Idaho.

Fred Motchman, graduate of '33, visited with friends on the campus recently. He has been in the States for about two weeks, but is returning to Dutch Harbor, Alaska, where he has been working as a contract plumber since May.

A card was received from Adam Bird, '40, with the news that he graduated last October from the Molar Barber College in Seattle. He is working in Bellingham, Washington, at the present, but plans to return to Montana soon to follow his trade.
