

Ag Wiener Roast

Ag party; that's a pleasant thought for anyone who attended the party given by the ag boys on March 24, from 6:30 until 9:30 p.m. It was an old-fashioned wiener roast, held down at the apple orchard.

It was raining a little that evening, and for a while it looked as though the party would have to be held inside, but it let up, the wind helped out, and the wieners and marshmallows were roasted outside at three nice bonfires. They tasted very good even though some of them were charred.

Later in the evening the party moved into the agriculture building, where the boys and girls danced and played games. Nice hot cocoa was served.

Guests at the party were girls invited by the boys, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Duncan, Mrs. Brannon, Miss Koske, and Mr. and Mrs. Wright Noel and members of their family.

Surprise

The apartment living room which was recently set up by the senior girls as a class project, was put into use on April 9, when the girls gave a surprise birthday party in honor of Sarah Lewis. Guests were Miss Beatrice Morse, sponsor of ten seniors, the senior boys, Mrs. Lena Cronk, head of the home economics department, and Miss Alice Seaver, instructor of the girls' sewing class.

Refreshments were coffee and a birthday cake, made and decorated by the girls with the help of Miss Seaver. It was a very enjoyable party.

Hiking is Resumed

Now that the evenings stay sort of daylight, the Winona Hall girls and the McBride Hall eighth grade girls have started taking their usual Monday hikes to Kickback. The girls enjoy the fun of walking.

The girls are told always to wear something white and to walk only two abreast so as to be safe in hiking along the highway.

Navajo Students Learn To Drive

Over the past three years, students in the Navajo program have made a very good record in driver training. In the state written examination in driving, these students have made grades above the state average.

Outstanding were the results of the examination taken by fourteen fifth year students in February. The average grade made by the seven girls of the group was 95.7, and that of the seven boys was 97.

All but two of the fourth and fifth year boys who this year have had driver training as a part of their vocational training in agriculture, have earned either a Driver's Instruction Permit or a State Driver's License. Mr. Harvey Starling and Mrs. James Johnston were the teachers of these classes.

Senior Girls Attend Capping Ceremony

Six senior girls had the opportunity on Sunday, March 28, of seeing the capping ceremony of a class of young women who are taking up nursing as a career. Mrs. Ruth Seawright, head of nurses at Chemawa, took Lorraine Farmer, Geraldine Hamlin, Gladys Hellon, Arlene Vaile, Joan Sicade, and Nettie Racine to attend the exercises at the Providence Hospital of Nursing in Portland.

The girls were unanimous in saying that it was a wonderful experience; beautiful and inspiring, and are grateful for the opportunity that was given them.

After the capping ceremony Mrs. Seawright and the girls attended the reception given at the hospital. Later in the afternoon they visited the Sanctuary of our Sorrowful Mother where they saw many interesting and historical and, again, inspiring and beautiful places and things.

Chemawa Group at PMA Meeting

Mr. Paul W. Bramlet, superintendent, Mrs. Nell V. Brannon, principal, Mrs. Lena Cronk, and Mr. W. B. Showalter, members of the school's placement committee, made an important contact with local prospective employers of students when they attended a meeting arranged for by the Salem chapter of the Pacific Northwest Personnel Management Association.

Present at the meeting, held April 13, were representatives from Salem stores and other business firms, and producers, growers, and packers of the vicinity; state institutions and departments employing workers; state and commercial placement offices and the civil service commission; and school groups working with student placement.

Chemawa's representatives had the opportunity of hearing many informed speakers, both employers and placement experts, and to participate in a very informative and practical discussion concerning the employment of young people. They were able to get an excellent overview of the total employment field as it offers job opportunities for Chemawa students. They learned of definite job openings, dates, types of work, requirements, wages, etc., which will be of value in helping students who want employment.

Perhaps the greatest benefit gained from the conference by the Chemawa group was by way of practical suggestions and materials relative to the qualifications of workers, particularly beginners. Employers know what they want in a worker, and the qualities which make for success or failure in a job. These people were straightforward in expressing their views and opinion. They furnished ideas, outlines, and blanks which will be put to use at Chemawa in the further training of students for future jobs.
