

CARNIVAL DEEMED GREAT SUCCESS

"Come one, come all", was the cry at the All-School Carnival, held in the gym on Sunday afternoon, October 26.

Students purchased tickets at the door and then used them at the various booths set up by classes, dorms, and organizations on campus.

Students had a chance to try their hand on the trampoline at one of the booths, and at another, they threw balls at a tin can and if they were good and hit the can, a Chemawa student was dunked in a barrel of water. The Freshman class sponsored a dart throwing booth where students tried to hit the picture of George Washington on a dollar bill. If they were lucky enough to hit it, they won the dollar. Inter-dorm council had a cake walk, which was very popular with the hungrier students at the Carnival. These were just a few of the 19 booths set up to provide challenge, fun, and excitement for Chemawa students and staff. Besides providing money for the booth sponsors, it made an otherwise uneventful Sunday afternoon a day to be remembered by all who attended.

HALLOWEEN HITS CHEMAWA

The Chemawa campus was filled with excitement on October 31, as students poured from their dorms to go "Trick or Treating" at their friends' living quarters. The action started around 6:30 p.m., and during this time people were everywhere, running from building to building collecting candy and also receiving some tricks from the more mischievous students at Chemawa. After having their fill of tricks and treats, the students headed for the dance held in the gym. Every imaginable costume was found there, from barefoot boys and pillow-stuffed girls to vampires and witches.

Darryl Davis and Susie Racehorse received the award for the best costumes at the dance, which was sponsored by the Ag-Science Club. The gym was decorated with pumpkins (lit up by candles), cornstalks, and hay stacks.

Everyone attending seemed to really have fun. As one student put it, "The 'Northern Lights' played and it was really groovy".

WINONA HAS SLUMBER PARTY

Girls of Winona Hall arose blurry-eyed and very sleepy Sunday morning, November 2, after their slumber party held the night before. The girls were allowed to watch television, eat, and visit as late as they wished and were permitted to sleep in on Sunday until 10:00 a.m., since most of them didn't get to sleep until the early morning hours. A slumber party is great fun once in awhile, but the Winona girls would probably agree they couldn't take it every night!

CHEMAWA RECEIVES VISITORS

Chemawa students and staff were honored by a visit from the National Indian Advisory Committee, who came to the school on Friday, October 24, to tour the school and evaluate its program. Mr. Charles Zellers, Assistant Commissioner of Education, accompanied the group.

The guests had lunch with the Student Council Officers and retired to a closed meeting where they discussed the program and the things they had seen. The Committee commented that Chemawa was a fine school and expressed hope that it will continue to be so.

Also visiting the campus this month were representatives from various colleges in Oregon.

Mr. Gerald Reese, Director of Admissions at Pacific University, came to tell the Seniors about his school in Forest Grove. A past Chemawa graduate, Miss Andrea Gamble, also came along, as a student representative.

On Monday, November 3, representatives from Oregon State University came to tell students about the courses needed to be admitted to their school and the programs that OSU could offer them.

The purpose of having representatives from the various colleges is to give the Seniors information about the schools that they might be interested in attending.

Student Assemblies Held

During the afternoon of October 28, classes were shortened so Chemawa students could attend an assembly. The program was given by a former Central Catholic teacher from Portland, Reverend Anthony Juliano. The performer told several stories and sang some songs, all of which centered around the theme "From the Ridiculous to the Sublime." Besides his humorous songs and stories, he read some poetry and ended the program with an Uncle Remus ghost story entitled "The Golden Arm."

Chemawa students attended another assembly the following Thursday to watch the installation of the Executive Council and to meet the Student Council members.

Mr. O'Brien gave the oath of office to Jeslie Kaleak - President; Phillip Titus - Vice-President; Patricia Crane - Secretary; and Wilbur Begay - Treasurer.

Mr. Azure, advisor to the Student Council, introduced as class representatives, Roy Nageak, Sophie George, Mathew Fred, and Andy Kasheriarof.

Representing the Lettermen and Pep Club are Herman Andrew and Patsy Wassillie, respectively. Robert Walker was selected as the Annual Staff representative.

Each dorm on campus has a voice in student government also. McNary is represented by Percy Frisby, Brewer by George Wilson, and Mitchell by Andrew Seybert.

The girls of McBride elected June Pablo to speak for them, while Winona sends Irene Billie to the Council table.

Also included in the assembly program was a report on the Idaho Falls Conference on drop-outs. Jeslie Kaleak and Rowland Mason, who attended the meeting held October 21-22, presented information and ideas they had received and implied that lack of school involvement was one of the major factors raising the drop-out rate.
