Feels like a smooth rock;
Taste like tree which it came from;
Smells like nothing.

MUSCLES SHOWN AT ESKIMO OLYMPICS

The Alaskan Eskimos at Chemawa showed their skill and prowess at the ESKIMO OLYMPICS held during Christmas and New Years in the school gymnasium. It all began when Mr. Marshall was talking of what would be fun for all students to take part in during the Christmas holiday. One suggestion after another was brought up until someone mentioned the ESKIMO OLYMPICS. They started to get serious about presenting one and finally decided one would be held in the gym. So, Chemawa had its first ESKIMO OLYMPICS.

The Barrow students and the Wainwright students got together and started out the games the way it is done back home in Alaska. Usually the married men and the single men compete against each other; since there were no married students, it was handled on an individual basis. The events that were scheduled couldn't all be shown, for it takes a lot of time to complete just one event.

The "One Foot High Kick" was one event which was shown. In this event, an object is hung by a string and is kicked by the competitor, who has to kick it and land on the same foot that he kicked it with. This event was won by a visitor from Fort Ord, Lester Bodfish, originally from Wainwright. He kicked it like it was one of his usual habits. The "Body Lift" was also presented. This event requires great concentration. One stick is placed under the neck and one under the ankles. Then the person is lifted until he feels he can no longer continue. This was won by John Peter Kagak, from Wainwright. The "Handwalk" was shown and easily won by Little Joe, Joe Okakok.

Not only the boys had fun. The girls had their own contests set up on the other side of the gym. They had different games like the "Hand Broom Pull", which was won by Miss Hale. She apparently had no problem, although she is not an Eskimo, she certainly had the ability to pass as one. She also won the One Foot High Kick. All the students whether taking part or just watching had fun and enjoyed it. As for the Christmas and New Years Day, without the White grass, it it still was a very merry holiday at Chemawa.
