Have you seen some students in baggy white oriental-looking outfits lately? No, it's just the Hub-Kai-Do class.

Hub-Kai-Do is the Korean form of Karate. Archie Little, a counselor at the C.A.E.C., knows a great deal about the art and has been teaching an interested group of students every day after school and on Saturdays. Thanks to Mr. Ouchi, they have twelve karate GI's or outfits to practice in.

The students know they are not learning it to go around and brag, or to push anyone around. It is an art, and the students have respect for it.

They are trying to find a bigger place or area to practice in so there will be more room for moving around and exercising.

Student Frank Martin is taking over the class while Mr. Little is away on business.
