

FESTIVAL CROWDS POURING INTO CITY—STREETS RADIANT.

ly to the general attractiveness. The illumination scheme for the bridges is practically complete, and tonight the Mayor and members of the City Council are to view the first "dress rehearsal" of the lighting plan which is to transform the ordinarily conventional steel bridges into great glittering arches of welcome that will flash a greeting to every city-entering boat and train.

The visitors to the city who look up toward Portland Heights next Monday evening will see a mountain of fairy luminae. A big lighting plan has been made by the Portland Hights club. Every yard will be dressed with electric lights, lanterns and color schemes that will transform the night appearance of the district. The celebration is called the "Feast of Lanterns."

Meantime a dense, bewildering storm is gathering on the Peninsula. It will grow thicker and more blizzard-like until Friday morning of next week, when it will burst over the city, not an erasing crescendo of hailstones, not a dashing rain, not even an Oregon mist, but a fluttering fall of millions of roses and petals that will envelop all along the line of the Peninsula rose shower, with their myriad, perfumed presence. The committee in charge of the rose shower and battle wants every rose-grower on the Peninsula to gather up all the petals that have fallen, all the roses that can be spared, and take them over to the fire hall at Killingsworth avenue not later than next Thursday evening.

Burst of Music.
A burst of music and the ringing notes of happy voices will be the first formal notification to the world that the Rose Festival has commenced and that the Rose City is ready to do honor to the king of happiness, Rex Oregonus. The Rose Musical Chorus will give its first program of the Rose Festival Sunday afternoon. One thousand voices will sing the songs of festivity. The greatest singers of the country are to be heard. Ellison Van Hoose, one of the celebrated soloists of the musical festival, has already arrived in Portland, and is a guest of the Hotel Portland. Mary Cheney, the Welsh-American soprano is to arrive today, and Oscar Ehrsgott, the New York bass, is hurrying across the country.

"After months of conscientious work, the musical festival is in splendid preparation," said Albert Ehrsgott, director, today. "Frederick Elmer Chapman has brought the adult chorus and the boys and girls to a splendid pitch of effectiveness. There is in store for the people of Portland an hosts of visitors a feast of song richness whose quality to be realized must be heard."
