OUR reigning monarchs, the kings of Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Greece, followed the body of Frederick VIII. to its tomb in the abbey of Roskilde, where lie the remains of thirty-three predecessors of the late king. Many representatives of foreign countries were present at the services in the cathedral, and in the funeral procession, of which a phonomah, state of Oregon, by this tograph is reproduced above, walked the male members of the Danish royal family-the new king, Christian X. (2); the Crown Prince Frederick (1), King Haakon of Norway (4), brother of King Christian; Prince Gustav (5) and Prince Harold (7), brothers of King Christian; Prince Axel (6), cousin, and Prince Knud (3), the king's second son. The other photograph shows the late king's coffin, borne from the royal yacht which brought it from Hamburg on the shoulders of colonels representing the various arms of the Danish service.

How Our Little Brown Brothers Amuse Sightseers In London

ONDONERS have been enjoying at the Earl's court exhibition the sights presented by a band of Igorrotes, aborigines of the mountain districts of the island of Luzon, in the Philippines. The members of this primitive people have been transplanted temporarily to the big open air show place of London, where they carry on their village industries after the fashion made familiar to Americans in various "midways" of expositions in this country. One of the most striking "stunts" which these savages perform is that of tree climbing, in which they are nearly as proficient as monkeys. The accompanying photograph is of an Igorrote ascending to one of the tree houses common in his native country.
