

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Mr. Richard Sigman of Dufur was in the city Thursday. T. H. Johnston of Dufur, was registered at the Umattilla House Thursday. Hon. E. O. McCoy was on the west bound passenger Tuesday morning. Mr. Rufus Wallace of Rufus, Sherman county, gave us a pleasant call Thursday. Mr. Frank Lee, the editor of the Klickitat Leader, gave us a pleasant call Tuesday.

Eight cars of cattle and one of horses were shipped west, from the stock yards Tuesday morning. H. C. Nielson returned from Portland Tuesday, where he has been making purchases for the spring trade. S. H. Lemon, agent of the Great Foregoing show, is in the city. His company expects to exhibit here in August. Within the last few days the price of wheat has raised in Walla Walla. It is now selling at sixty-three cents a bushel.

Mrs. C. L. Phillips has received the larger part of her new millinery for the spring trade and has it now ready for inspection. Caleb Brooks of this city, and Mrs. Georgiana Reynolds, were united in marriage by Rev. O. F. Taylor, at the Umattilla House last Saturday evening. We wish them many happy days.

S. R. Husbands of Mosier gave us a pleasant call Tuesday. He says there are twelve to fourteen inches of snow on the summit of the mountains, between here and Mosier. The little word "tis," the possessive case of the neuter pronoun "it," as much as it is used in all current literature, never occurs once in the Bible. It is comparatively new word in our language and was not in use 250 years ago.

E. N. Chandler came in town last night to make preparations for opening of the new grange store. Mr. Chandler will soon be a full fledged citizen of The Dalles and to the manor born, as it were, and the Chronicle bids him a hearty welcome. A gang of fourteen men are engaged on Bridge street, near Ninth, breaking up the pile of rock, some time ago taken out of the intersection of these two streets. The broken rock will be ground up and used for making concrete for the new reservoir in the pines.

G. H. Riddell came into town Tuesday, to meet his two daughters, who will be on a visit to friends in the Willamette valley. Mr. Riddell's school district, No. 14, levied a school tax of one mill. This amount will be sufficient, with other funds, to give the district an eight month's school. The man Thompson, who is charged with being an accessory in the shooting scrape, at the Cascades, is out on bail. His bondsmen are J. T. Peters of this city and Mr. Frizzell of the Locks. Parr has been committed to the county jail, without bail, awaiting the results of McCormack's injuries. McCormack is still very low and his life hangs on in the balance, with the chances very much against him.

Mr. Charles Schmidt of the Wasco warehouse, reports that while little business is being transacted there, the wool men are already making inquiries about the prospects of prices for the coming clip. In answer to the question, what is the outlook? Mr. Schmidt replied that the prospects for good prices and good times, all round, were never brighter. Some time since Mr. A. S. Blowers gave notice that the well known firm of Blowers & Co. was withdrawing from the firm. We are pleased to learn that Mr. Blowers has reconsidered the matter, and that the firm will continue in business. His partnership with Mr. Blowers would probably have left us, and Hood River can fly aloft to lose him. We are glad to hear that young friend Capt. Blowers' son Lawrence will occupy a position in the store.—The Glacier.

The Chronicle very heartily joins in the Glacier's congratulations. There have arrived in Portland a larger number of vessels than usual for this season, purposely to load with wheat for Europe, and we notice wheat has jumped up in price to $1.35 per cental for Eastern Oregon, which means 81 cents per bushel there. Buyers are only offering 55 cents in this city. At Walla Walla 300 miles further inland 63 cents is being paid. Why this difference in price we don't quite understand. It is not the railroad this time sure, as the rate is 10 1/2 cents a bushel from here to Portland.

Captain Donovan has just returned from a trip to Canada and the east. He visited New Brunswick where he found five feet of snow, and everything frozen up. He says the people here have no idea of the coldness one meets on such a trip. He came back by the Northern Pacific and describes the trip, part of the way, like running a train through a narrow street, from the immense piles of snow on each side of the track. He was exceedingly happy to get back to The Dalles and thinks there is no place like it. They had a boat race on the Willamette river last Friday. Two steamers, the Northwest and Bentley, bound up stream, left Portland about the same time in the morning. The race commenced shortly after the boats cleared the docks at Oregon City. The Northwest was slightly in the lead when they started and continued to lead till they arrived at Salem. During the last few miles the engines opened the throats to their last notch while the firemen did their best at the furnaces. The Northwest came in ahead, with the Bentley's bow almost touching her wheel.

The latest news from the Cascade Locks informs us that the wounded man, McCormack, is likely to die at any moment. The doctor says the point of his liver is shot off, and that his chances for life are very slim. The man himself asserts that he is bleeding internally. Parr is but slightly injured and is expected in The Dalles, under arrest, in a day or two. Both men are under the guard of an officer of the law. They have not been examined. The alleged accomplice of Parr, Thompson, waived examination yesterday, before Justice McKinnon, and was placed under $500 bonds.

Mr. Alfred Kennedy and his son Arthur are building in the yard of Mr. Kennedy's residence on Ninth St., a small steamer for plying between this city and the Cascade Locks. Her extreme length will be 45 feet with 12 foot beam—over all—and a carrying capacity of ten tons. She will be equipped with accommodations for passenger as well as freight traffic. The keel, knees or ribs stem and steepest are in position giving one a good idea of her shape and general appearance. She is to be propelled by a screw operated by sufficient powerful engines to enable her to do her work well. A little further west, on the same street, the shipyard of W. J. Jeffers, a beautiful canoe is receiving her finishing touches. She is built upon the Clyde model, stem, stern and ribs all of New York elm, imported for this purpose. The planking is a quarter inch fine, lapsteak and copper riveted. She is 16 feet long, 31 1/2 inches wide, with a depth from the hatch-combing of 12 to 14 inches, and will be rigged with a lateen sail of the latest and most approved cut. Her mounting for rudder etc., are nickel-plated. Her lines are very fine, and the whole piece of work we venture to say cannot be surpassed, if equaled, in any shipyard on the coast. Both jobs are highly creditable. Most people locate their shoe building industries at the water's edge, but these gentlemen prefer to build beneath the drip of their own eaves, within easy sound of the dinner bell. It is a plain case of the mountain coming to Mahomet.

IN MEMORIAM.

Highland Grange Passes Resolutions on the Death of a Brother. WHEREAS, It hath pleased the Almighty disposer of events, to remove from our midst, on the third day of February, 1891, Brother H. M. Baxter, now, therefore Resolved, By Highland Grange No. 200, of which he was master for a time, and served with honor to himself and the grange, he was honored, beloved, and respected by all the members thereof. He was noted for his uniformly courteous treatment of all in his presence, firm in maintaining his convictions of what he deemed right or wrong, he freely expressed them on all proper occasions, yet ever treated those who differed with him with all due courtesy and respect. His mind was of no ordinary mould. He possessed the faculty of expressing his views lucidly and forcibly, on any matter he thought proper subject for consideration. As a member of Highland Grange he was a bright and faithful member, and will long be missed from its councils.

Resolved, That our charter be draped in mourning for sixty days, and that a copy of these resolutions be furnished for publication to The Dalles Chronicle, and the Wasco County Sun, and that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased, and also that these resolutions be made a part of the minutes of Highland Grange. By order of committee, EZRA HENSON, Master.

THE TIME EXTENDED.

Further Instructions From the Commissioner on the Forfeited Lands. WASHINGTON, D. C., March 5, 1891. Register and Receiver, The Dalles, Or.

Sirs: Referring to the former instructions under the forfeiture act of September 29, 1890, I have had to advise you by the act of congress approved February 18, 1891, said act is amended "that the period within which settlers, purchasers and others, under the provisions of said act may make application to purchase lands forfeited thereby, or to make or move to perfect any homestead entries which are preserved or authorized under said act when such period begins to run from the passage of the act shall begin to run from the date of the promulgation by the commissioner of the general land office of the instructions to the officers of the local land offices, for their direction in the disposition of said lands; "Provided, That nothing herein shall extend any time or enlarge any rights given by said act by any railroad company."

The instructions to your office were promulgated by this office February 3, 1891. Very respectfully, (Signed) Lewis A. Grover, Commissioner.

The Benevolent Society.

The society of the "King's Daughters" met at the residence of Mrs. Samuel L. Brooks yesterday afternoon and transacted important business. The society has been in existence only a month or so and yet in that time has done much good work. The members will meet again next Tuesday afternoon at the residence of the president, Mrs. Harris, on the hill. They have a bright boy of 12 years of age that they are anxious to provide a home for. It is preferred that he be taken by some farmer in the country and any person desiring a good boy could obtain the particulars from Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Brooks or any of the members.

A Fair Flower Paded.

We regret very much indeed to hear of the death of little Ada Vanderpool, the only child of Mr. Willard Vanderpool, of Dufur, at the age of about five years. An report has reached us the child became sick about ten days ago with a complication of those two dread scourges of childhood, scarlet fever and diphtheria. It was supposed the crisis had passed last Sunday, and hopes were entertained of her complete recovery, but she took a relapse to which she succumbed this morning at 4 o'clock. The blow is an unusually hard one. The child was singularly bright and winsome and her death will throw a dark shadow over the hearts of the parents who loved her so well. We extend to them our deepest sympathy in their bitter sorrow.

Jack Hickey, an old timer of the Dalles, has just returned from the Argentine Republic. While there he was compelled to secure the necessities of life, by sheep-shearing at the munificent remuneration of a cent and a half a head, paid in currency based on mortgages on real estate, worth about forty cents on the dollar in gold. While so engaged, they fed him on meat straight, without bread or anything else. He reports their methods of shearing to be very primitive. Little girls and boys of eight to twelve years of age hold the sheep while being clipped. He considers that country a good place to stay away from, and was glad to get back to God's country.

CHARMING DUFUR.

A Description of the Thriving Suburb of The Dalles, and Some of its Industries.

It is by no means the least part of the Chronicle to help, with all its might, to build up and advance the material interests of that great section of the Inland Empire from which it more immediately draws its sustenance and support. We say "great" not so much in the sense of geographical extent, although that is by no means insignificant, as great in all elements that contribute to the material advancement of a happy and prosperous people. Only a few years since the vast rolling prairies, bounded by the John Day river on the east, the Columbia on the north, the timber line of the Cascade mountains on the west, and the present southern boundary line of Wasco county on the south, were one extended cattle range, and creek bottoms alone thought fit for agricultural purposes. Little by little at the first touch of grass land was turned over by the plow, more as an experiment than anything else, until in a short time it became evident that the soil was rich in all the elements of plant food, and as far as grain raising was concerned, excelled in productiveness the supposed richer lands on the river bottoms. Today in all the northwest portion of this extensive region the stockman has given place to the husbandman, and the landscape is everywhere dotted with comfortable, if not costly farm houses. The immense quantities of grain handled yearly by local flouring mills, or shipped for exportation to the Columbia river, testify to the fertility of the soil, and fully account for the relatively prosperous condition of this young agricultural community. In the center of what still remains of this territory within the confines of Wasco county, stands the little town of Dufur. The town site was originally owned by Dufur Brothers, but whether the town took its name from the honored father or his not less honored sons, is a matter of little moment to the Chronicle or its readers. The town has all the advantages of a splendid location. It is about fifteen miles south of Dalles City, and on the main road leading to Tygh Valley and Warm Spring reservation. A pure mountain stream, known as Fifteen Mile, that rises far among the hills tops, flows through the town, and supplies every household with an abundance of pure and wholesome water. On the north and south the hills rise with gentle activity, effectually sheltering the little town from the fiercer blasts of a northern winter; on the east the valley of Fifteen Mile slopes away towards the Columbia, while it stretches on the west in a landscape of matchless beauty, till it is lost in the foothills of the Cascades. Apparently at the head of the valley, and rising far up among the clouds, as a solitary white-robed sentinel, and as if to guard the peace and tranquility of the village, stands Mount Hood. In such a center of natural advantages, and in such a location of scenic beauty, stands the town of Dufur. Whatever nature might have intended, it was far from the thoughts of the original owners to locate a town there. It was never boomed into existence, but rather like Topsey it "grew" of its own accord.

ABOUT TWELVE YEARS AGO. C. A. Williams obtained an unwilling consent to locate an open ground, on which to build a small country store. The business grew upon his hands. In a year or two the people of the surrounding neighborhood petitioned for a post office. They got it. Then they pressed the Dufurs to lay out a small townsite. Fifteen blocks were surveyed and staked off and soon sold at from $75 to $100 a block. When these were all bought up and occupied, the people wanted more. Eight more blocks were added, and all bought or contracted for before they were even surveyed. Then twenty more blocks were added and all sold, save one, reserved for a donation to the school district, when the people are ready to enlarge their present school facilities. Thus in the short space of a few years the town has grown from a solitary hamlet and dilapidated school building to its present constantly increasing dimensions.

THE BUSINESS OF DUFUR. The town has two large general merchandise stores, where the farmers can obtain everything to be found in the larger towns, two drug stores, one saddler's shop, one shoemaker's shop, two blacksmith's shops, one carpenter's shop, two wagon repair shops, one barber's shop, one notion store, one millinery store, two resident physicians, two resident midwives, one fine graded school, two church houses, one public hall, one Odd Fellow's hall, two excellent hotels and two livery stables. The town is also the location of the S. B. manufacturing company, whose proprietary medicines are winning an enviable and well deserved reputation all over the Pacific coast. Half a mile below the town is located the famous Dufur Rolling Mills, whose flour is admitted on all hands, to be fully equal to the best Walla Walla product and second to none anywhere. But the town has no saloons within its borders, and they don't want any. The Dufur Brothers, who owned the original town site and who still own all the lands adjoining, very carefully provided for this by inserting a clause in each deed of sale, binding the purchaser, his heirs and assigns from ever selling liquor on the premises, as a common beverage, on pain of the property reverting to the original owners. The absence of the grosser forms of vice, peculiar to larger communities, together with educational facilities of a very high order have made the town a VERY DESIRABLE PLACE.

For parents to send their children to obtain an education. Possessing, for residence purposes, all the advantages of larger towns, with fewer of the disadvantages farmers and others in easy circumstances, have bought Dufur property, and built themselves comfortable homes, where their children can be educated, or where, perchance, in declining years, they can enjoy the luxury and comfort of a well earned rest. As many as sixty families are thus domiciled in one happy community, and constant accessions are being made. The town has, unquestionably, a bright future before it. It may never be line of railroad running south from The Dalles west, of necessity, touch it, and with railroad facilities, combined with all its present natural advantages, no more desirable place, for business or residence can be found anywhere.

Mr. Johnson's Verdict. THE DALLES, OR., March 11th 1891. EDITOR DALLES CHRONICLE: In the issue of the Times-Mountaineer of last week appears a communication or "editorial" under the title "Third House," in which allusions are made to me personally in discussing the merits or provisions of senate bill No. 20. I am at a loss to know why my name should be publicly connected with a newspaper controversy over a question whether Senator Hilton had complied with the wishes of the county court of Gilliam Co., in the reduction of the Sheep Inspector's salary. So far as I am concerned, it is a matter of no interest to me whether he did or did not, but as a matter of record, it is but fair to state that the bill was amended so as to give the commissioners' court authority to increase or decrease the Inspector's salary as, in the judgment, the good of the public service may require. "Third House" is in error however, in his statement that "it went to the governor among the very first bills and received his signature at once." The bill was not returned to the senate from the house till late on the evening of February 20th and I gave the bill to Mrs. Lou Sampson, (Senator Hilton's clerk), for enrollment, and it was not returned to me till the morning session of February 21st, and was then reported back from the committee on enrolled bills, along with Senate Bills Nos. 21, 94, 172 and 161, in time to receive the signatures of the members of the house and the senate, just before the final adjournment. This all wise quill driver says that Mr. Gourlay, as clerk of Senator Watkins' committee "should know better than almost anyone whether this bill was enrolled and sent to the governor." In this he is mistaken too; it was no part of Mr. Gourlay's duties to know anything of the kind. He simply performed the clerical work given him, with neatness and dispatch, and never saw Senate Bill No. 20, nor did he know who enrolled it. But it seems that Mr. Gourlay is not the only objective point of attack of this contemptible vilifier, who is too cowardly to sign his name to the scurrilous article referred to, but from a sheltered woman sleeping god, charges the writer with having deserted his post as chief clerk of the Senate Enrolling committee, and gone to Pendleton or elsewhere armed, with warrants of arrest for malcontents, for which he added fees and mileage to his salary as clerk. All of which is false, and without foundation in fact. The records of the U. S. Commissioners' court at The Dalles and marshal's office at Portland will show that I have performed no duties, and received no fees or emoluments as a Deputy U. S. Marshal, since January 17th, 1891 up to the first of the present month, and my two days absence, while the legislature was in session, was in obedience to a subpoena to appear as a witness in the U. S. circuit court in the case of U. S. vs. Stone & Hyde, February 2nd and 3rd, during which time there were no senate bills in the hands of the committee for enrollment, as the records of O. E. Miller chief clerk of the senate will verify.

A. G. JOHNSON.

DOUBTFUL LEGISLATION. We have serious doubts, as to the wisdom of the act passed by the last Oregon legislature, giving the power to any justice of the peace in the absence of the county judge, to commit a person suspected of insanity to the state insane asylum. The law is liable to grave abuse. It is undoubtedly already too easy to send persons to the insane asylum, and this law has the tendency to make it easier still. The average Oregon justice, in by no means a foundation of judicial wisdom. He is not necessarily "primum inter pares"—chief among equals. Quite frequently, especially in the sparsely settled districts, where better men would not be bothered with the office, the justiceship is placed in the hands of men remarkable for nothing but senility and ignorance. In a matter of such importance the closest circumspection and soundest judgment are necessary. Hundreds have been confined in lunatic asylums, for various reasons, who should never have been there, and it is neither easy nor sound legislation to make way to get there easier than it is already.

Is Disease a Punishment? The following advertisement, published by a prominent western patent medicine house would indicate that they regard disease as a punishment for sin: "Do you wish to know the quickest way to cure severe colds? We will tell you. To cure a cold quickly, it must be treated before the cold has become settled in the system. This can always be done by using our medicine. It is a fine medicine to man give timely warning and plainly tells you in nature's way, that as a punishment for some indiscretion, you are to be attacked with a cold unless you take care to ward it off by prompt action. The first symptoms of a cold, in most cases, is a dry, loud cough and sneezing. The cough is soon followed by a profuse watery discharge from the nose, and a profuse watery discharge from the nose. In severe cases there is a thin white coating on the tongue. What to do? It is only necessary to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in double doses every hour. That will greatly lessen the severity of the cold and in most cases will effectually cure it. It cures what would have been a severe cold within one or two days time. Try it and be convinced. 50 cent bottles for sale by Snipes & Kinney."

Jerry Simpson's Reprieve. Washington Dispatch to New York Herald. "Is it true that you don't wear socks? Won't you let me see, please?" and a pretty woman, who thus addressed Jerry Simpson at the capitol today, glanced curiously at the latter's feet. "Madam," replied Simpson, gravely, "I'm a believer in reciprocity. Do you wear socks? If you'll show me yours, I'll show you mine."

The lady said "Oh, my," and fled precipitately, but Jerry remained to study further the methods of legislation.

Mr. Frank Gabel, of Wapinitia, came into town yesterday to hire five or six men to help him in the lambing season. He reports about three inches of snow and that it rapidly disappearing.

We regret to hear that the wife of Senator Watkins is still suffering quite severely from an attack of erysipelas. She is not so well today as she was yesterday.
