ARTESIAN WATER.

From the East Oregonian, we learn that steps are being taken in Umatilla county to adopt some concerted action for the purpose of sinking artesian wells. It is suggested that the county make a standing that an equal amount, or more, be raised by private subscription in and around the town nearest the place where to the scheme by the fact that artesian water was struck last week, in the North Yakima country at a depth of only 400 feet with a daily flow of 250,000 gallons. The East Oregonian names the sum of $5000 as that which would probably be required to start the work in Umatilla county. Will the time ever come when a movement of this kind will be started in Wasco county? There are thousands of acres of land here that, with sufficient water for irrigation, could be made to produce anything that can be grown in a similar climate.

DALLES GENEROSITY.

The Dalles Portland & Astoria Navigation company finding that Portland was not responding to the invitation to subscribe to the stock of the company with any liberality that would indicate that that city was interested in the matter, and finding that money is still needed to get ready for business, sent out a committee through The Dalles this morning sum of $2,000 dollars for a line of boats and in about five minutes bad raised the following sums: French & Co., $2000; B. John McCallister and Robert McDaniel, living near Dickey's mill, Josephine county, got iuto a row last Thursday about some logs which were being hauled across the latter's land. During the scuffle McCallister was cut in the jaw by a pocket knife which McDaniel had in his hand.

An irrigating ditch to run between Yreka and Little Shasta is to be constructed at a cost of about $300,000. The flume will be twenty feet wide by four deep, and it will not only irrigate thousabout 10 cents, but there is very little, if any, of last year's crop in the country, and this year's crop will not be ready for
