THE DALLES, - - - OREGON. FRIDAY, - - - JANUARY 8, 1892.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

County court week.

A number of road supervisors of the county are in the city making their annual settlements with the county clerk. The firemen of Jackson Engine company No. 1, are talking of giving a grand firemen's ball sometime in the near future.

Kumor has it that the engineer of the Baker has received orders to fire up in order to pump her out and save her from sinking.

Mr. Sandrock has retired from the firm of Young, Kuss and Sandrock. Messrs. Young & Kuss will continue the business at the old stand.

It is now reported, on the authority of a special representation of the government at Chicago, that China will make an exhibit at the world's fair.

George McLeod and J. A. Vaughan of Kingsley came into town Monday and left for home Tuesday. They report about six inches of snow on Tygh Ridge and good sleighing.

Carl Gottfried for a long time in the employ of H. Herbring, left Sunday evening on a three months' visit to his home in Ragnsborg, Bavaria. Report has it that he will bring a wife back with him.

There will be Evangelical Lutheran services at the chapel on Ninth street next Sunday at 10:30 a. m. Sunday school in the afternoon at 2:30. Parents and children are cordially invited by pastor and people.

We understand that the steamer D. S. Baker will be brought back to the mouth of Mill creek, and hauled on the beach of the river for repairs. P. Carens has arrived in the city to superintend the work.

J. O. Mack lost a valuable brood mare Monday. She had broken one of her stalls at the fair ground during the night and was found dead in the field inside the track in the morning. She was in foal by Royal Kisbar and her time was nearly up.

We regret to hear of the serious illness of Mrs. Ursula Michell of this city. Mrs. Michell has not been feeling well since the great fire and an attack of la grippe has given her many friends serious apprehensions regarding her recovery.

The Electric Light company have just received two dynamos of 800 lights each in addition to those in use at present. They will also, in a few days add a 50 light arc plant in place of one already in use. The company proposes to give the people lights which are preferable to any other light, save day light.

L. L. McCartney left at this office day a sample box of raisins which he dried from his Muscat grapes, raised on the Thompson's addition to this city. The land on which the grapes were raised—and there is no better grape land in the world—was sold three years ago for $35 an acre. It is less than a mile from the heart of the city. The grapes were raised without irrigation and did not need any.

At this session of the county court all necessary changes in the boundaries of road districts or voting precincts will be made. The requirements of the new election law will demand four voting places in this city instead of two. At least one new voting precinct will be created in the Hood River valley and possibly some changes will be made in other places. Sealed bids have been received for furnishing the county with voting booths, and the present court will decide as to this purchase.

G. W. Gilmore, of Klickitat county, would like to know how it is that it takes six days for the Union Pacific to haul six bushels of wheat from Biggs station to The Dalles. Mr. Gilmore holds a shipping receipt dated January 1st, and also a letter dated the day before, informing him of the shipment. He has come to The Dalles to get the wheat—the last time to-day—and still it has not come. The first time he brought his team across on the ferry at a cost of a dollar; now he wisely takes the precaution of leaving his team on the other side. Mr. Gilmore is justly annoyed at the delay and says such things happen very often.

The Board of Trade Letter.

Editor Chronicle:

My attention has been called to an item in the Wasco Sun under the heading "An Unauthorized Statement," relative to the issuing by the Board of Trade of a circular letter relative to congressional aid for the construction of a portage railroad from The Dalles to Celilo. Permit me to say that while no formal meeting of the Board has been recently held, a number of the prominent members of the Board of Trade came to me and requested me to prepare and circulate a letter addressed to the congressmen from Oregon, Washington and Idaho, asking them to use their influence to secure an appropriation for the construction of a portage road from The Dalles to Celilo. In compliance with their request, such a letter was prepared, and over 100 copies have been sent to the leading towns in Eastern Oregon, Washington and Idaho, accompanied by a request that as many signatures be obtained to the letters as possible, and that they be returned to me by the 20th of January.

As to the statement that there is no such organization as The Dalles Board of Trade, I have to say that I have never heard that the Board had ceased to exist. It is not true that the portage question was ever settled by the Board of Trade, either for or against. The Board of Trade was asked, some time last August, what the people of the city would do toward the construction of a portage. A committee was appointed at that meeting to canvass the matter with the business men of the city. Very soon after and before the committee were prepared to report, the fire of Sept. 2d occurred and nothing was done thereafter. I was chairman of that committee, and as I understood that the proposed portage road had been given up, so far as the company that had submitted the matter to the Board was concerned, I have never called the committee together. I do not understand that the action or want of action on the part of the Board of Trade had anything to do with the abandonment of the construction of the portage road.

B. S. HUNTINGTON, Sec'y Board of Trade.

Old Comrades Meet After a Separation of Twenty-one Years.

During Captain Lewis' late trip to Washington, finding himself delayed at Chicago, he bethought himself of visiting Libby prison, which, as the reader is doubtless aware, has been transported bodily, and placed on exhibition in that city. The familiar sight of the old prison in which the captain himself had been incarcerated, naturally set him to talking and to a stranger also visiting the prison the captain pointed out the celebrated Rose tunnel through which he had made his escape and then proceeded to recount the hardships endured by himself and four companions, till after two days and nights' incessant tramping the captain, weak from hunger and sickness, fell down exhausted and begged his companions to seek their own safety by leaving him to his fate. Then as he told the stranger how his companions, with tears in their eyes, bade him goodbye, a third gentleman who had been listening intently to the captain's story, stepped forward and said: "That's just the way it happened. Don't you remember me? I am one of the four. We gave you up for dead, and many a time I have rehearsed the story and told that you must have died and that only two of us were now alive." Said the captain, as he took his old comrade by the hand, "I'm the liveliest corpse you ever saw." The stranger's name was Captain Wood, but Captain Lewis, in recounting the incident, had forgotten the name of his regiment.

Kingsley Items.

Plenty of snow and the sleigh bells are heard in all directions. The Kingsley Literary society is progressing finely. They held their regular election on January 2, and the following officers were elected: J. A. Vaughan, president; Fred Busknel, vice-president; Sophia Roth, secretary; John Roth, jr., treasurer. The attendance was good considering the rainy night. We wish them success.

Rev. Holgate will preach at the Kingsley school house, Sunday, January 10th at 11 a. m., and 7 p. m., and also Monday night following at 7 p. m. Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

J. A. Vaughan and George M. McLeod were in town Monday and they report the roads very muddy. They are of the opinion that everything in town is lively enough for this time of the year.

The gallant young sleighman of Kingsley had a sad accident the other day by allowing some one else to drive his team dash. The horses ran away kicked the board out of the sleigh, and broke the pole. Look out George or you won't have any sleigh next time.

A Chapter in the History of The Dalles. Concluded.

We had almost forgotten to mention that Max Vogt "begs to inform the public that he is still at the old stand, next door to Bloch, Miller & Co., and that he keeps constantly on hand a large stock of toys, Yankee notions, musical instruments, genuine meerschaum pipes, cigars, etc., and Ad. Edgar & Co. were conducting the United States mail line between The Dalles and Canyon City, dispatching stages every Tuesday morning for Canyon City and all intermediate points, "carrying the United States mail, freight and passengers at prices to suit the times." George A. Liebe was running a blacksmith and wagon shop at the corner of Third and Laughlin streets. William Snyder offers for sale a well-established restaurant and saloon in Dalles City, as business elsewhere compels him to leave. Snyder & Liebe were conducting a bakery and grocery store on the corner of Washington and Second streets, and Waldron Brothers were in the drug business on Main street.

Turning to the literary part of the paper we notice on the first page a column and a half letter from Portland, signed "S. J. R.," and dated February 15th. The writer tells of the delightful time he is having in Portland, "for navigation being closed, business of all kinds suddenly cleared, freights, cargoes and passengers accumulated at Astoria that threatened an inundation of the same when the river opens, if it ever does." The writer describes the grand times he had skating with "Cousin Mary" and two other girls and gives a graphic description of an effort on his part to skate himself into the affections of his best girl which effort resulted disastrously. Returning to the subject of the weather, which the writer says is "cold in a manner that surprises the oldest inhabitant" he gives the following illustration: "The other morning I encountered Bridget—the servant-girl—in the hall, and asked 'How is the weather this morning, Bridget—any warmer?' 'Indeed sir,' she answered, 'it's cowlider all the time; it is not long ago I turned some bilin' water from the tay kettle into the hollow of my hand and before I could get to the door it was frozen solid.' There is a column of miscellaneous items, the selection of which bears evidence that Mr. Hand knew how to make a paper that would interest all classes of readers. Here is one that will do to repeat. 'Dr. Adam Clark, who had a strong aversion to pork, was called upon to say grace at dinner where the principal dish was a roast pig. He is reported to have said: 'O Lord, if Thou canst bless under the gospel what Thou didst curse under the law, bless this pig.' Another tells of a little girl of five years, who was listening to a preacher praying so lustily that the roof rang with the strength of his supplications. Turning to her mother, the little one whispered, 'Mother, don't you think if that man lived nearer to God he wouldn't have to talk so loud?' Still another is so good that we cannot resist the temptation to reprint it. 'Ben W.—served in the revolutionary war, and had been in the habit of repeating his long and tough yarns so often that at last he believed them himself. Ben would give a personal anecdote of every battle of the war, in which he himself always figured as the hero. On being asked if he was in the battle of Monmouth, he replied: 'I guess I was, I had my right hand pocket full of powder and my left hand pocket full of bullets, and I had my father's double-barreled ducking gun, seven feet long! Sir! Seven feet long! I put in a handful of bullets and every time I set her off I knocked the British down, sir, fifty at a time! General Washington rode up to me and said, 'Ben, dostop; you're doing 'em too bad!' I touched my hat to the general and said 'Well General, if you say so I'll cease firing, but I think I ought to kill a few more of the scoundrels.' With that the general sprung from his horse and throwing his arms around me exclaimed 'Ben don't call me general; call me George.'"

The local column informs us that the democracy of the city had lately held a primary and that two full tickets were in the field. One faction was termed Radical and the other Conservative. The Radicals had carried the east precinct of five delegates, while the Conservatives elected thirteen delegates from the west precinct. There is nothing in the paper that would indicate that the republican party had any standing or being in The Dalles. Attention is called to the fact that the best way to go to the Willow Creek and Burnt River mines is by the Canyon City road. There is no danger from Indians as the military has driven them all out of the country. Houses are found at convenient distances all along the road where there are excellent accommodations for man and horse. Among these are mentioned Ward's at Cross Hollows, Moppin's at Antelope Valley, Wallace's at Carrant Creek, Sutton's at Bridge Creek, Myer's at Alkali, Allan and Stone's at the Mountain, Boyd's at Rock Creek and Brackett's at Cottonwood. The editor offers to stake his reputation against a Confederate dollar bill that a man can get a meal at any of these places that cannot be beat in any hotel in the city. The Pioneer oil mill had just started at Salem and R. W. Helm had brought a sample of oil to O. S. Savage's paint shop and Mr. Savage had promised to give it a trial. Captain J. H. D. Gray had purchased the steamer U. S. Grant and was going to take her to Astoria, expecting to find sufficient business near the mouth of the Columbia to keep her busy. J. T. Jeffreys had gone to San Francisco to purchase material to commence the publication of the La Grande Sentinel. On the 3rd of March, instant, the steamer Idaho had succeeded in cutting her way through the ice to the wharf boat at the terminus of the railroad and no further trouble from ice is anticipated between here and the Cascades. Captain Coe informs the editor that the ice in the upper Columbia, at Heligait, is piled up about forty feet above the water in one solid mass and that it will be some eight or ten days before boats will be able to pass up the river. The only evidence the paper furnishes that there was a preacher in the city is furnished by a paragraph which says that several ladies and gentlemen called at Rev. Mr. Condon's last night, and it is supposed some one had a license.

The "Telegraphic Summary" shows exciting times in Washington, President Johnson had just been impeached. A dispatch dated February 22d says: The excitement in Washington is greater than at any time since the assassination of Lincoln. In the previous August President Johnson had removed Secretary of War Stanton from office. The senate had passed, by a strict party vote, a resolution declaring that the president had no authority for his course in the removal of Stanton. Stanton had had Thomas arrested for an attempt to gain possession of the war office. After debating at considerable length, the question of impeaching the president, the house, on the 24th of February, adopted the impeachment resolution by a vote of 126 to 47. A committee of two—Stephens of Pennsylvania and Bingham of Ohio—was appointed to go to the senate and at the bar thereof, in the name of the house and of all the people of the United States to charge Andrew Johnson with being guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors in office." The committee appeared before the senate on the 25th and made announcement of the intention of the house to exhibit articles of impeachment against President Johnson and demanded that the senate make order for the appearance of Andrew Johnson to answer said impeachment. On March 5th the committee again appeared before the senate, followed by the members of the house, when Chairman Bingham announced that the committee was ready to present the articles of impeachment. The sergeant-at-arms ordered silence on pain of imprisonment, the articles of impeachment were read, and the managers and other members of the house retired. A dispatch dated March 2nd announces that Governor Woods of Oregon had addressed an immense audience at Concord, N. H., and had delivered one of the best speeches ever delivered in New Hampshire, which leads the editor to note that the "personal friends of our governor in this city are exceedingly jubilant over his recent success." Another dispatch reports the destruction of Barnum's museum in New York City on March 3rd. The paper shows that its editor had a fine staff of able correspondents; but the length of this article admonishes us that we must forego any extended notice of these. We close with an extract from a letter from Canyon City signed "Old Pike" and dated February 26, 1868. The extract may serve to show that however much times may change, politicians remain eternally the same. "The politicians of each party," says "Old Pike" "are active—both confident of success; and even among my limited acquaintance there are some fifteen or twenty aspirants for every office—forn constabulary down to senator; and I reckon they will all get office, for I must acknowledge that it beats anything that I ever saw—every aspirant imagines that the success of his or their party depends on his getting the nomination for this or that office, and so it goes, all alike."

Another Pioneer Gone. Died, at Kingsley store, New Year's eve, December 31, 1891, after a severe and lingering passage from The Dalles, Dem I. John, aged 2 years, 9 months and 1 day. Mr. John complained somewhat on his trip homewards and was obliged to stop over night with our genial host at Eight Mile, A. J. Wall, but arrived home the following day comparatively in good spirits. He retired at his usual hour but was suddenly awakened by a choking sensation. Dr. Boynton was called who immediately removed the lump when blood seemed to flow freely from his mouth, but in spite of all the remedies available the patient finally succumbed by bleeding to death. Although Mr. John was comparatively youthful, yet he was amongst our first settlers having crossed the plains with an ox team in '49, he leaves quite a large family behind him including a number of friends to mourn his sudden demise. A large concourse of his admirers assembled to pay the last sad rites and conduct his remains to their final resting place. The postmaster has the sympathy of the entire community. DAN MCGINTY, JR.

MARKET REVIEW.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 7, 1892.

There has been little activity during the past week in trade, and as a consequence our merchants have been busy in taking account of stock on hand, and balancing up the past year's business. In a good many instances old accounts are being carried forward into the new year, to be settled up after the harvest. There is not much inquiry for money on time, nor does there seem to be much need, except from a distance where men are launching out into new enterprises. Our banks and brokers are disinclined to give accommodation on securities, beyond reasonable expectations or certainties.

Provisions and produce are in good supply and our quotations remain unchanged, with the exception of potatoes. They are slightly higher, selling at 60 to 65 cents per hundred pounds. There is a fair supply of eggs, at 30 to 32 cents per dozen.

The wheat market is very quiet. Prices remain the same as last week, but it is anticipated that better prices will be paid in the near future, as the Portland market is getting well reduced in the quantity on hand and more tonnage is on the way and near port which will require immediate dispatch. Foreign markets are feeling a firmness in future, and much better quotations are anticipated.

The partial failure of the fur seal catch has had a healthy influence on the fur trade of the interior and there is a better feeling therefrom in consequence. Long furs are being sought for by the fashion, instead of the seal furs so much in favor recently. In our market, furs have been called for by our buyers, one house having on hand a very large stock of them and will ship an invoice east in a very short time.

In real estate there are not many transfers reported, but dealers and speculators anticipate an active season as the spring opens, as there is more inquiry at present than formerly.
