CHICAGO, March 18 .- There is a great deal of displeasure manifest in all departments of the World's Fair management, but in none so highly as the transportation directory which have built upon the expectations that the Illinois Centrol railway, which has lead them to believe all along that the road would deliver its World's Fair passengers at any point, the directory might choose within the grounds. It will save itory law. our road the cost of elevated tracks into the grounds if we land the passengers outside; besides, we will get a good site for a station at your expense." Of course it doesn't make any difference to the Illinois Central that it will get more benefit from World's Fair business than all the other roads in Chicago combined. Mr. Fish doesn't care if people are landed where they will see nothing but a big board fence and the roofs of the exposition for their first impression. He doesn't even care for the fact that under his proposition passengers would descend from the trains at a point nearly a leading banker and philanthropist died 1.000 feet from the nearest World's Fair today. structure, the woman's building. ## Murderers Hanged.

New York, March 18 .- Two men were hanged yesterday at Oxford, England, for murdering the game keeper on the Pitson estate; and Franz Schnieder was officially strangled in Vienna, for the murder of a servant girl. When Schneider approached the gallows his strong frame trembled and it was evident that his brutal nature was subdued and that he was in agony and fear of the fate awaiting him. While being pinioned to the gallows he struggled and shricked so that the noose was quickly thrown around his neck, and, as he swung free, two assistants grasped the hanging man by the arms and legs and pulled downward with all their strength, and thus he was strangled to death. No cap was used, and every expression and change of color in the man's face was discernible. It was so horrible that the spectators were compelled to turn away.

Will Employ Elephants. NEW YORK, March 19 .- A Berlin letter furnishes some personal details concerning Dr. Finsch, who meditates going to Emin Pasha's assistance with an armed force raised and supported at his own expense. It says: "Dr. Finsch is barely 35, is of medium height, but strongly built. He has made long journeys in the Cape, Chile and Peru. He is a German-American, a botanist and an ornithologist, and he has inherited several million dollars from his father. The great expedition he is now fitting is destined for Lake Albert and Wadelia, where Emin probably now is." It then continues: "The 200 Soudanese whom he hopes to enlist, with the khedive's permission, are to carry small-bore magazine rifles. Dr. Finsch has bought four tame elephants for £1,000 each in Bombay. They are to carry the guns and other heavy baggage." The employment of elephants in African exploration is something new, and ought to simplify greatly the problem of carriers which has caused so much trouble in early expeditions.

He says the Columbia river canal at the cascades should have been constructed as quickly as the "Soo," and for $1,750,-000, which amount he says has already been expended, and as much more depresent rate will be completed in about portance he says, than government subsidy of railroads.

British Mutineers. VANCOUVER, B. C.. March 21 .- An incident that will probably result in a man-of-war having to make a trip home occurred here Saturday. This port being within easy access of United States soil, it has been the rule that every ironclad of old England that anchors here suffers from an epidemic of deserters. This has resulted in a standing reward being offered to any police officer who returns a deserter to the man-of-war. Today Chief of Police McLaren and Officer McLeod took five men on board the Daphne who had been arrested for desertion. The putting of these men in irons enraged the sailors, who made an attack on the chief of police after the other officer had descended the ladder.
