T. Sidney Cooper, the English animal ainter, says that he often made valuapainter, says that he offen dat places ble studies in Cumberland at places where Scotch drovers halted with their cattle for the night. On such occasions he often had a chance to see illustrations of an animal's intelligence as well as of its physical perfection.

One day when there was a pouring rain a man consented to sit for me at the Chicago. The best wishes of a host of friends will follow him to his new home. his collie with him and both of them were dripping wet, so he put off his plaid and laid it on the floor by the dog.

I made a very successful sketch of the wan, but before I had finished it the dog grew fidgety with the wet plaid, and his master said, "Tak' it awa' mon; tak' it awa'!"

The dog took the end of it between his teeth and dragged it out of the room.

After I had finished the drover's portrait I asked him if he thought his dog would lie quiet for a time, as I wished to sketch him.

"Oh, yes, mon," he answered, "he'll do anything I say to him. Watch! Watch!" he called, and then "whustled" for him, as the Scotch say.

As the dog did not appear we went to-gether to look for him, and found him sitting before the kitchen fire with the of his intelligence, and the master re-

"Ah, he's a canny creature, sir! He knows a mony things, does that dog, sir. But come awa', mon; the gentleman wants to mak' your picture."

So we returned to my room, and the handsome collie sat for his portrait.— Chicago News.

Mrs. Astor's Lingerie. The cedar chests in the Astor mansion which contain the superb underwear of the queenly Mrs. Astor are perfect house hold ornaments in themselves, with deep engraven gold lockers with the initial "A" wrought in finest carving upon its surface. Inside the chest, neatly folded in webs of choicest linen, are the dainty garments of society's queen. Each week, as they leave the ironing sheet, they are laid within the chests to await the bidding of the owner. Every article of this superb wardrobe is stitched by hand. and no materials but the purest and finest of linens and cambrics are used. They are all elaborately trimmed with lovely point and duchesse laces, and the initial "A" is daintily embroidered on

In the same orderly manner Mrs. Astor arranges her footwear, which is equally as exquisite; only the cedar chests have apartments molded in which each slipper and boot fits perfectly and keeps its shape.

By the way, Mrs. Astor has a very pretty foot for an old lady. Her ankles are small and shapely and her toes are extremely narrow. Her daughters, Mrs. Coleman Drayton and Mrs. Orme Wilson, have neither of them such pretty feet, and they are eternally envying their mother her beautiful feet and adornments.-New York Cor. Charles Dickens and the Dog. "Every one remembers Dan Brosna han, the old sexton of St. Patrick's," said Mr. H. A. Preston. "Dan had a little dog, a homely cur, with the most plebeian blood in his veins, but a remarkably clever animal. He would follow the sexton everywhere, and the only way to restrain him was behind closed O. D. TAYLOR, The Dalles, Or. doors. One night about twenty-three years ago Charles Dickens gave a reading in Carroll hall. Dan was on hand to look after the hall, rigged in a dress coat out of deference to the great occasion. He had forgotten the dog, but the dog was on hand.

elist came to this passage, "Bow-wow. Columbia River Steamers. wow," barked the little dog.' He gave it a realistic renderies. it a realistic rendering, and almost with his words came a responsive and lifelike echo, 'Bow-wow.' There stood Dan's little yellow cur, directly in front of Chief Justice Chase, and before the great men of the nation, mocking their guest. Dan dragged the dog out, terribly mortified, but Dickens said it was one of the finest compliments he ever received."-Washington Post.

No Excuse for Late Hours. There would seem to be no excuse for the late hours which society prescribes for its ceremonies. Late evening parties for children are admitted to be injurious. But we are all children or ought to be, so far as the laws of health are concerned. We do not, as many think, by age earn a right to violate the laws of health. Nature takes pay for it in one way or another.

One difficulty at the foundation of our social life is that we do not admit amusements as necessary to our lives. We do not set apart time for them, but insist if forced into them by fashion. upon taking them out of time that ought to be given to rest of mind and body. The day must all be given to business, up to its latest available hour, and then we take from hours that should be given to sleep time for social duties.-New York Ledger.

Glacier Ice.

Glacier ice is not like the solid blue ice on the surface of the water, but consists of granules joined together by an intricate network of capillary water filled fissures. In exposed sections and upon the surface of the ice can be observed "veined" or "banded" structure veins of a denser blue color alternating with those of a lighter shade containing air bubbles. The cause of this peculiar structure has been the subject of much theorizing among investigators, but hitherto the greatest authorities consider that the explanation of the phenomenon is yet wanting.-Goldthwaite's Geographical Magazine.
