A Gilliam county paper petitions its readers as follows: "We respectfully ask all our readers to patronize only the business men whose advertisements appear in this paper."

A newspaper that will promulgate such narrow-mindedness as this deserves to have all of its patronage withdrawn. Let not such a paper ever pronounce upon the evil of trusts or the curtailment of liberty of any kind.

A business house that does not advertise should be allowed to die peaceably. But there may be reasons of a personal character for not advertising which is no business of the general public, but whom this paper would make a catspaw to fulfil its petty spite.

The uniformity which distinguishes the utterances of republican and democratic papers of the Pacific coast since Grover Cleveland's action on the Geary bill gives additional glitter to Mr. Weaver's candidacy in 1896. Even Tom Geary himself would have come out as a poppet if he could have anticipated Mr. Cleveland's suspension of the provisions of his bill.

It seems that Gov. Penoyer is thoroughly aroused over the action of President Cleveland and intimates that he will be a prime mover in an impeachment trial, before the next regular session of congress. The assumption of Cleveland has evidently brought down upon that functionary's devoted head more than the thunderings of the press, and between his anxiety in the day time and his coming tribulations throughout the watches of the night his peace of mind is destined to undergo a severe wrench.

The Washington hotels are suffering this summer through the loss of a large transient custom which they usually enjoy from the great number of tourists that visit the capital annually. They are taking in the world's fair at Chicago instead. From spring until winter, usually, Washington is full of these travelers, and it has been the special objective point of newly-married couples. Josh and bride will this summer take in Chicago and will in turn be taken in to an extent that will prove a revelation.

Roseburg wants the capital removed from Salem to Albina. Against which place has it the greater grudge?—Portland Telegram. The state has had to contend with Roseburg politicians altogether too much to allow very much dictation from that quarter.—Salem Journal. The probability is that the question will be a prominent one before the next general election, in which we will all take part.

It was discouraging on the dress reformers to have a woman from Syria remind them that the reform movement is slipping backward more rapidly in Syria than it is going forward in this country. The same may be said of Japan or Persia, and of innumerable semi-civilized countries. Everywhere the common-sense dress of women is giving way to the mode of Paris.

The law concerning the location of all state institutions at Salem promises to be harder to enforce than the Geary act, for lack of a sufficient appropriation. Will somebody please figure up what it will cost to move the portage road at the Cascades, which is a state institution, to Salem, and report before the next session of the legislature.

It is reported that the annexationists of Honolulu have considerably decided to subside for the present and await the action of the United States. "Tis well." "T'would be unseemly indeed for Hawaii to annex herself to the United States sans ceremony, even as the impudent Jersey mosquito annexes himself to the neck of the lank Jerseyman.—Tribune.

President Cleveland, the Duke of Veragua and the Liberty bell are the biggest things in Chicago so far.—Boston Herald. Well, hardly! Wait till you settle your load bill.—Chicago Dispatch.

OUR BIRTHRIGHT.

At the time of the framing of the clause in the constitution that all state institutions should be located at Salem, the companion proviso was that the seat of government be located at Salem. The whole plan was originated and was engineered by wire pullers of Salem and its immediate vicinity to the end that Salem would thereby have a political and financial prestige assured. The measure is outrageously unjust and selfish and was so in the beginning. The fact that all the principals in this maneuver are now dead or, if living, have long survived their usefulness, does not the less prove it an injustice, and it is now time that the vast section which has since become populated east of the Cascades and south of the Calapooya range should assert their rights. It was all well enough when Salem had the balance of power to enforce it to decree that all state institutions should be located at Salem, but now that the birthright of Eastern and Southern Oregon is being unfairly taken, it is not fitting that they should calmly suffer the infliction. To regain our rights, then, a constitutional convention should be called in the near future, looking to a revision of all objectionable features, and, independent of the present party lines, an issue made between Salem and the balance of the state whether it shall continue to hog everything or divide more fairly. Whether, indeed it would not be better for the state to locate the capital itself at Portland.

Salem is the capital of Oregon, and, according to the constitution of the state, all public institutions must be located there. This rule has not been followed, and so Salem has taken steps to compel the location of such institutions at the seat of government. The people who pay the taxes and the voters of Oregon have some feelings in the matter, and it is probable that Salem will find that it has made a very unwise move in attempting to stir up this subject. An injunction to prevent the location of the Soldiers' Home at Roseburg is the first step taken. One to defeat the act of the legislature in locating a branch asylum in Eastern Oregon will follow. Then an attempt will probably be made on the Weston normal school, the Monmouth normal school, the state university, and the several charitable institutions scattered throughout the state. The result will be Salem will lose its state capital, and it will go to Portland.—West Side.

We can assure the West Side, as well as all other sections of Oregon interested, that the people of this part of the state are being worked up to a white heat over the advantage taken of Roseburg by an antediluvian clause of the constitution, which is now as unjust as it is impolitic. Salem has started a leak that will engraft them. Mark the prophecy.

The world's fair was closed again yesterday. The management is being pulled and hauled one way and the other by the different powers like a rag at the sport of a pair of mischievous puppies. Every Sunday so far has witnessed a change from that preceding. It is thought now that it will remain closed for the season, as Gen. Olney said to the secretary of the United States Christian Endeavor Society Saturday that as the appropriations by the government to the fair were on condition that the fair should be closed that day, it was the duty of the national commission to see that this was carried out. Two weeks ago the attorney-general instructed the district attorney at Chicago to secure an injunction restraining the management from opening the gates Sunday. Mr. Olney said further that the government exhibit would be closed that day, and that the national government would see that the entire exposition would be closed by applying to the district court of Chicago for an injunction.

The Six Companies will withdraw all Chinese they can get from the vineyards and factories of California and assemble them for a time across the border in Mexico or British America. They expect a great clamor will result for their return. In this they may be surprised. There are thousands of idle Americans in the market, many of whom would work, though not at the same wages that a Chinaman does, unless compelled by starvation. But with a scarcity of laborers, the market price would raise, augmenting, in turn, the price of products and manufactures, and it is possible this would result in a new era of prosperity, turning popular sentiment against the re-establishment of Chinese labor, and leaving the Six Companies to care indefinitely for their sheep-like charges. There is now on, a practical trial of Chinese against American wit.

The instance of that handsome young woman who fell in love with Carlyle W. Harris after he was condemned to death, broke her engagement with a worthy young man and plighted her troth to Harris, is only one of myriads of instances which tend to prove that women hold out poor inducements for virtue in men.—Exchange.

The readjustment of the pension system has begun, and it is calculated that under the new administration a check is going to be given to the rapid growth of the pension list, even without the assistance of any new legislation. When the pension appropriation bill was passed at the last session of congress it was expected that the amount appropriated would be about $15,000,000 short of the pension expenditures for this fiscal year, and it was anticipated that a deficiency of that amount would have to be provided for at the coming session of congress. The average number of original pension cases passed on each month is expected, however, to be only about one-third what it was under the former administration of the pension bureau, and that instead of a deficiency there will be a surplus of about $6,000,000.

Mrs. Lease says that science will learn to concentrate the life force found in corn, wheat and fruit so that a small vial of the extract will furnish a man subsistence for many days. It appears to us that something of the kind is already sold in flasks and small bottles.—Telegram.

The Infanta Eulalia may have thought that in this democratic country her royalty would pass unobserved, but the way she has been flattered and feted and toadied must prove eminently satisfying, even to her royal demands. She is good enough to express herself as grateful for the courtesies extended her.

It is said that Secretary Carlisle is determined to remove every republican holding office under the department in the state of Washington.

Putting 100 cents worth of silver in a dollar will settle the finance question, free coinage and all.

The execution of the Hebrews, Rosenzweig and Blank, took place today near Wilkesbarre, Pa. These were the first Hebrews to suffer the death penalty, not only in the United States, but in North America. They murdered Jacob Marks, a peddler, on Dutch mountain, in March, 1892. The executed men were also peddlers.

The will of the late General Manuel Gonzalez, ex-president of Mexico, gives none of his vast estates to his wife, from whom he had been separated for several years. She attempted to secure a reconciliation with her husband before he died, but all her entreaties were unheeded by him, and he would not even permit her to visit him during his last illness. She has employed able attorneys to contest the will in her behalf.

The reports of the committee on temperance of the Presbyterian Assembly, now in session at Washington, contemplate with shame the spectacle of a "vast national grog shop" at the world's fair. It favors the establishment by congress of an impartial commission to inquire concerning the liquor traffic, such as has been provided for in the bill passed several times by the senate, but defeated by the liquor interest in the house. The report emphasizes the statement that the church is not a political organization, but if the question of morals becomes a question of politics also the church is not precluded on that account from dealing with it. The report also protests against the system known as the army canteen, in which it is claimed officers and soldiers are detailed as saloon-keepers.

THE DUCHESS OF TECK.

Popularly Known in England as the "People's Polly."

The Mother of Princess May Who Was to Marry the Duke of Clarence and May Yet Be Queen of the British Realm.

The duchess of Teck, after the princess of Wales, is the most popular member of the royal family, and, what is more, she has always been popular through a period extending over fifty-five years.

Born in Hanover, Princess Mary of Cambridge did not come to England till she had entered the domain of girlhood, but the moment she did come she took every heart by storm, says the Chicago Record. She was known as the "People's Polly," and wherever her pretty rosy face was seen there was a chorus of admiration and praise. Years went on and Princess Mary was the belle of many seasons. The queen was absorbed in the duties of state and her young household, and the duchess of Cambridge and her daughter represented royalty in London society. Built, as all the world knows, on a generous scale, many were the harmless jokes and remarks which the young Juno-like princess called forth. At one time it used to be asked: "Why is the queen's first cousin like a certain besieged town?" The answer was: "Because she is So-vast-a-Poll."

There was once a proposition made of marrying Princess Mary to the brother of the prince consort, but devoted as she was to Great Britain and the English she could not bear the idea of settling in Germany. At last to everybody's great surprise, her engagement to the duke of Teck was announced, and shortly after they were married with fitting pomp, in the little church of Kew, where not so long ago they celebrated their silver wedding. Since their marriage the duke and duchess of Teck have lived a simple, unaffected family life, both working hard

DUCHESS OF TECK.

In one way or another. The duchess is absolutely indefatigable. She and her daughter, Princess "May," ever since the death of the duke of Clarence, spend five days out of seven each week in performing some kind of public duty, and often at great personal inconvenience to themselves.

During the last few years the Tecks have inhabited the white lodge, a pretty, old-fashioned looking house in Richmond park, said to have been the theater of the scene where Jennie Deans "plended the desperate" cause of her sister Ellie before Queen Caroline, again. It was in the room which is now the duchess' boudoir in the white lodge, that Lord Nelson drew out roughly his plan of breaking the enemy's line when dining with Lord Sidmouth, then the ranger of Richmond park.

Although the duchess has two ladies in waiting, her most faithful companion and secretary is her own daughter, Princess May. She takes down a great many of her mother's letters from dictation, transcribing them afterward on the little writing table which stands in a corner of the duchess' sitting-room.

Among the charities in which the two ladies take the keenest interest are the Society for the Relief of Distressed Irish Ladies, the Needlework Guild, the Royal Cambridge Asylum for Soldiers' Widows and the Addlestone Village Homes for Prisoners' Children. The latter institution was really started by the duchess and bears her name. Besides a large and ever increasing circle of friends, the duchess and her daughter are very popular with other members of the royal family. Like the princess of Wales, H. R. H. is a very careful mother, and the first visit her daughter was ever allowed to pay alone is believed to have been that which she paid to the queen just before her engagement to the duke of Clarence was announced.

Possessing much of the queen's eloquence and clearness of enunciation the duchess on the many occasions on which she has to speak in public always delivers thoroughly appropriate, little speeches, and her brevity and good sense ought to be a lesson to many a long-winded member of parliament and other more or less important personages who are called upon to attend public ceremonials.

Jews in Jerusalem.

Within ten years the number of Jews in Jerusalem has trebled, half the present population being of that race. Colonization societies in southern Russia and Rumania have moved many families on to farms in Palestine, buying agricultural implements for them so that it is estimated by a member of the Palestine exploration company there are now two thousand Jews tilling the soil where there was not one ten years ago. It is strange to hear of electric lights and telephone factories and water works in Jerusalem.

Wanted to Be Dissuaded.

An American paper published in Paris recently contained the following unique advertisement: "A young man of agreeable presence and desirous of getting married would like to make the acquaintance of an aged and experienced gentleman whose cold dissuade him from taking the fatal step."

POSTAGE STAMP COLLECTORS.

A Field Actively Covered by the "Philatelist."

"All the world's a stage"—at least in the eyes of the born dramatist. To the mind of the born "philatelist" it appears to present itself as a vast field for the exercise of the energies of the postage stamp collector. From the most monthly of the Philatelic society of London we gather that the vice-president of that society, accompanied by the honorary secretary of the Brighton society and one other enthusiastic member of the latter body, is now on a tour around the world in quest of these cherished trifles and meeting with sympathizing souls in various parts.

Mr. Castle's latest letter descriptive of his mission is dated from Bombay, which has, it seems, a society of its own, and has left on the minds of Mr. Castle and his companions "the most favorable philatelic impressions." Meanwhile numerous other philatelists, as will be seen, are "posting over land and ocean without rest," impelled by the same absorbing passion.

One chivalrously stands forth in defense of Prince Edward Island from the unmerited contempt of the indolent philatelists who have spoken disparagingly of its postage stamp productiveness; another takes Fiji in hand, while a gentleman who has examined the great work of Mr. Tiffany and his associates, just completed, on the subject of "The Stamped Envelopes and Wrappers of the United States," reports that the list includes no fewer than sixteen hundred and forty-three varieties.

In many countries the rainbow is spoken of as a great bent pump or syphon tube, drawing water from the earth by mechanical means. In parts of Russia, in the Don country, and also in Moscow and vicinity, it is known by a name which is equivalent to "the bent water pipe."
