ON A FREE WOOL BASIS.

When the campaign was on last summer, democratic papers east and west were voluble and dogmatic in asserting that the tariff does not help the western wool grower. To their own satisfaction they made it appear that the woolgrower who contended for protection was a foolish fellow, and that he really needed a democratic administration and free wool to make him quite prosperous. Here is what the Boston Herald said in its wool report last Friday:

The wool market here has not improved in the slightest degree from the extremely depressed situation noted a week ago. The factors that make the market dull are not improved. Tariff agitation and the possibility of reduced duties on wool unsettle the woolen goods market, to the extent that manufacturers are at a loss as to what they shall do. The possibilities of free wool also make it imperative that dealers shall buy the new clip at figures that will admit of its being sold on the basis of free wool, and none of the dealers are going to buy at any of the prices higher than the basis of free wool, in so far as it is possible to know what a free wool basis is.

The Spokane Review evidently believes the tariff is not the true cause of the depression as the following editorial commenting upon the Herald's article shows:

Now that the market has been reduced to a free wool basis, as admitted by the leading tariff reform journal of New England, why doesn't the band begin to play and the procession to move? Why don't the woolen manufacturers "reach out and conquer the markets of the world," according to democratic antilection predictions, instead of refusing to bicker on a free wool basis, as they are reported to be doing by the Herald? Why don't the spinners hum and wool advance in price, as promised by democratic papers who assumed to know all about the question last fall?

The world's fair will remain open Sunday notwithstanding the influence of the radical religionists and the saloon keepers. The interest manifested by the saloon keepers is easily understood. A man cannot be attending the exposition building and in a saloon at the same time, but if he could not attend the fair there would be some chance of his making a call on the saloon keeper. The opposition offered in the name of religion is not so easily explained. In fact there has not been any explanation given other than that it is the outcome of the old narrow puritanical spirit which holds more to the letter than to the spirit of the law. Sunday should be not only a day of rest and religious observance, but a day on which innocent recreation is allowable. If a visit to the fair comes within that limit, the opening of the fair to provide innocent recreation on Sunday afternoons cannot be considered a desecration of the Sunday. In view of the fact, too, that many thousands of visitors to the fair must be of the class who pay no respect to the religious character of the Sunday, it seems a matter of common prudence to provide them with a means of spending the day innocently instead of leaving them to their own inclinations and the numerous temptations certain to be placed in their way. Then again, it is a hardship to deprive so many thousands of honest working people of their opportunity to see the fair. Hence the fair should be open Sunday, as more evil is likely to result from Sunday closing than from the opening.

Germany is a thorough old country. In anticipation of the coming of cholera the utmost preparations have been made. For instance, all the wells of Berlin have been examined, and out of 800 one-fourth have been declared unfit for use and one-fourth more doubtful. Similar examinations are to be made all over the country. That reminds us that there are a good many people in this city who are still using well water. It ought to be stopped, if necessary by ordinance, because filthy water is the sea in which cholera floats with more joy and less friction than in any other.—Oregon Blade.

The worst thing about getting appointed to a fat office in Oregon is the fact that the successful man has to have his picture printed in the Oregonian. Hon. T. J. Black was made to look something like Scrooge after his last battle with the deputy marshals.—Roseburg Review.

An executive order was recently issued by the president detailing certain army officers to act as Indian agents at various posts. These places are plums at which many western democratic workers have looked longingly for some time. The appointment of army officers to fill the places is considered by many as a step in the right direction, and meets with the unqualified approval of officials who have watched the matter for years and have deplored it, while unable to remedy the wrongs or check the progressive steps from bad to worse. It is believed that while it will take many years to undo the evils of the past—and there are crimes in our treatment of the plains Indians that will never be atoned—the army will prove more just and more efficient than any other branch of our service. There is another feature which is regarded as admirable from an economic point of view—making agents of military men will give employment to numbers of officers who have had too little to do. It is understood to be the policy of President Cleveland to hereafter appoint Indian agents from civil life only when he is unable to find an available army man.

The American Farmer says there are fully 1,000,000 wool growers in the country and they form the bulk of the constituency of a very large number of congressmen. They hold the balance of political power in many states. If they will only unite and present a firm front to their adversaries, they can prevent this destructive blow (free trade) to their interests. We urge them to do so—to follow the example set by other farmers who have much less at stake than they have. Let them circulate petitions, hold meetings, stir up the local press, and let their congressmen know that they are expected to oppose free wool to the utmost. They cannot do this too soon or too vigorously. The advocates of free wool are well organized and have plenty of money and influence. But they cannot withstand the 1,000,000 wool growers of the country if these will rouse themselves to concerted action in defense of their interests. Every wool grower who feels that he is not making too much money out of his business as it is, should constitute himself a committee of one to promote the crusade in defense of American flocks.

An ocean steamer twenty feet longer than the Great Eastern is to be constructed by one of the intercontinental lines. It will be 700 feet long; the Great Eastern was 680 feet long. The new steamer will have an engine of 40,000 horse power, which is 5,000 more than the new Campania. The Great Eastern's engines were of but 7,500 horse power, which was the cause of the failure in navigation. It is said that the new steamer will make 27 knots an hour, which is not improbable, for it would have to go but little over seven times its own length to cover a mile. Besides, considerable over a quarter of a mile would be gained by counting from the leaving point of the stern to the arriving point of the bow.

There is a misapprehension existing that it is necessary for the president to give thirty days' notice by proclamation before convening congress in special session. The truth is that there is nothing in the constitution or laws prescribing in what manner he shall convene congress. There is a custom, which grew up in the old days of horseback and steamboat travel, slow mails and no telegraph communication, of allowing fifteen days for a notice to reach a member of congress and fifteen days more for him to reach Washington; but it is a custom only and not a law, and any president could disregard it if he chose.

A critical public has observed that the Montana statue of Justice is bow-legged. The artist says it isn't his fault, because Ada Rehan was built that way. Miss Rehan might retort that the criticism evinces a low conception of high art, the curve in Miss Justice's leg being significant of the range habits of Montana, where everybody rides a broncho, and where everybody has a curve of the lower limbs.

Hogs ought to bring good prices this year. The decrease in the total number of hogs for the kingdom of Great Britain this year is over 1,000,000. The shortage in Ireland is estimated at 1,200,000 head. The abnormally high price of bacon and pork, as contrasted with other meats, will it is thought, greatly stimulate hog breeding.

The government has lost nearly $11,000,000 on the silver bullion it has purchased since July 1890. It would have been money in Uncle Sam's pocket if he had bought two or three silver mines on his own account when the pig-silver carnival was started.—Philadelphia Ledger.

If President Cleveland is at a loss for means to remedy the financial stringency, let him subscribe for some of our Oregon papers. The Oregonian alone publishes a new plan almost every day, that, if followed, would make wealth burdensome.

Rate cutting still goes on with every probability that it will be a battle to the death. So far the Union Pacific seems to be suffering the most, judging from the reported falling off of business and their horizontal cuts down of expenses.

IS DEATH EVER INSTANT?

Testimony of Surgeons and Scientists is to the Contrary.

It is questionable if such a phenomenon as instant death is known to the scientist and investigator. Physicians and surgeons tell us that death by gunshot is the easiest mode of terminating life; yet, rapid as such a mode of taking off must be, the body has leisure to feel and the time to reflect, and, on rare occasions, even to act. On the first attempt of one of the adherents of the Spanish monarch to assassinate William, Prince of Orange, the ball passed through the bones of his face and brought him to the ground. In the instant which preceded stupefaction, however, he was able to frame the notion that the ceiling of the room had fallen in and crushed him.

The cannon ball that plunged through the head and tore out the brain of Charles XII did not prevent him from seizing his sword hilt. The idea of attack and the necessity for defense were impressed upon his mind by a blow which we would naturally suppose too tremendous and instantaneous to leave the least interval for thought. Another question in this connection is that of probable pain. Although numerous instances can be cited in support of the view that the mind acts in cases of so-called instant death, it by no means follows that the infliction of a fatal blow is attended by the least semblance of pain or a single pang of fear or regret. Unless death results immediately, however, the pain may be as varied as the nature of the injuries.

The San Bernardino bank, the First National of San Diego, and the Washington National of Spokane have asked permission to resume. The East Side bank of Los Angeles opened its doors Saturday.

Governor McConnell of Idaho and president of the trans-Mississippi congress, appointed Senator Mitchell, of Oregon, to act with Senator Stewart, of Nevada, as a committee to present the free-coinage resolutions adopted by the congress of the United States senate.

The Post says Senator Dolph and family expect to leave on the 30th inst. for a tour of the lakes, after first having visited Chicago and the exposition. A month will be spent at Lakes Mackinaw and Cayuga en route to the North, returning to Washington in the autumn in time to place the children in school.

Harvey Wilmer Hudson, a 7-year-old boy living with his parents on Raleigh street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, Portland, was drowned off the docks at the foot of Everett street, on the west side of the Willamette river, at 3:10 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The alarm was given almost immediately, but he drowned before assistance reached him.

The Oregonian Correspondent.

"I am very sorry to know that some of the democrats of Oregon take their politics from the Oregonian," said Dan Murphy to a Telegram reporter, who saw him upon his return. "The dispatches sent here by the Oregonian correspondent in Washington are for the sole purpose of creating discord in the ranks of the democracy of Oregon. When the article published in the Oregonian stating I had no more influence with the administration reached Washington, I asked Mr. Dun why he sent such dispatches. He replied that he was a consistent republican, and that if he could get the democrats to fighting it would be better for the republican party in Oregon. I imagine that many other dispatches were sent for like purpose. The contents for the offices coming to Oregon, in the main, were gentlemanly, and I think after the appointments have been made the defeated candidates will accept the situation gracefully."

One on Governor Penney.

Wild man: "Whoo-o-pee! I'm the winged and unassisted terror of the chaparral, the double-headed dragon of the swamps, the superheated aerolite of the Sierras ricocheting through space at my own sweet will; I breathe the cyclone, drink the waterspout, and dine on the blizzard. Whoo-o-pee!" Nervous citizen: "Officer, why don't you arrest and confine that dangerous lunatic? He'll hurt somebody." Officer: "That hasn't no lunatic. That's the governor of Oregon takin' exercise."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Dr. M. J. Davis is a prominent physician of Lewis, Cass county, Iowa, and has been actively engaged in the practice of medicine at that place for the past thirty-five years. On the 20th of May, while in Des Moines en route to Chicago, he was suddenly taken with an attack of diarrhoea. Having sold Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for the past seventeen years, and knowing its reliability, he procured a 25-cent bottle, two doses of which completely cured him. The excitement and change of water and diet incident to traveling often produce a diarrhoea. Every one should procure a bottle of this Remedy before leaving home. The Conductors' Picnic.

The conductors' excursion to Bonneville yesterday was in all respects a success. About 10 o'clock a train well filled drew in from Heppner in charge of Conductor French, and taking on an additional car filled with Dalles people, started for the picnic grounds, which it reached about noon. A long train load of Portland people had already reached the grounds, and the Union Pacific band of Albina was discoursing music of the kind which dancers delight in, and soon the pavilion was filled with terpsichorean devotees. Those who did not care for dancing found amusement in various ways—some in reading books in shady spots on the river bank, others in making short voyages in the steam launch, and other in the swings and lounging about through the woods, while one and all waged an increasing warfare on the hungry mosquitoes that thirsted for the blood of the excursionists. Several left the train at the locks and spent the time in a tramp to Bonneville, reaching there in time for the homeward train.

In the afternoon a train left for Mtnomah falls, giving the excursionists from the eastern part of the state an opportunity to view this magnificent bit of scenery. The train en route came very near running over a man who had fallen across the track in a drunken stupor, but he was discovered just in time to stop before the engine reached him. He was loaded into the train and carried back to Bonneville. A noticeable fact was the absence of liquor from the grounds, and consequent scarcity of the drunkenness so usual at the average Sunday picnic.

At five o'clock the train started homeward, filled with a tired, but happy crowd, who had enjoyed the day immensely. The railroad boys never do things by halves, and the excursion will long be remembered as one of the best of the kind.

A BIRD WABBLER.

The Epworth League Promise an Exceedingly Novel Entertainment.

The Epworth League, ever on the alert for something novel to amuse the public, are making negotiations to secure some time in September Chas. D. Kellogg, who, it may be certainly said, gives an entertainment which has no parallel. He is a "bird warbler" and is pronounced simply wonderful. This individual has warbled like a bird from his earliest infancy, but never appeared in public until the year 1888, since which time his fame is growing world-wide. His gift is due to a peculiar formation of the throat and lips, which makes it possible to produce the marvelous tones and effects for which he is famous. From the lips back to the rear wall of the throat it measures five and one-half inches, something like two inches deeper than the average. The passage along the outside of the lower jaw is also unusually large, while the under lip is not tied to the gums in the ordinary manner, enabling him to form a reservoir for air which gives him great power. The marvelous trills made by him are executed by a rapid flutter of the upper lip. He has great flexibility of the tongue and lips, combined with a very unusual control of the muscles that regulate these organs. He has warbled by closing the lips perfectly tight and sending the sound through the nostrils, producing high harmonic tones, reaching two octaves above D, Alt, so that an audience of eight thousand people could distinctly hear him. (This feat was accomplished at Chataqua, N. Y., Aug. 7, 1890.) Mr. Kellogg produces the notes of several birds and blends them in all the confusing and commingling harmony of the unrivaled nightingale; but he does what no feathered songster ever did, or even can accomplish, being capable of interpreting in its own language, the most difficult musical compositions.

La Grippe.
