A picturesque pole kitten has visited as frequently during the summer. He is very gentle and unassuming in his manners and would evidently toke up his abode among us with a little coaxing. Our numerous feline gentry defer to him and we have thus far shown him much courtesy, feeling that despite his simple ways, if enraged, he would be terrible as are an army with banners, and could in a flash exert an influence more depressing than the McKinley tarif. He is a living illustration of the absordity of horn blowing in general; silent influences being so much more powerful.-Skamania County Pioneer.

in a recent issue of his paper: "Forty in 1877, and was afterwards promoted to years we have been convinced that the exposure of the face of the dead at funerals to the gaze of the public was as unseemly as in some respects revolting. We do not know how the custom came into vogue nor why it continued. If the deceased was so near a friend as to make the sight something to be desired, it is well for that friend to go to the home of the dead, and, in the quiet of the chamber of death, take the last sad mute farewell. Unless it is in the discharge of some duty to the dead friend or some member of the household, we never look at the face of a dead friend. We are so constituted that we preserve in our memory the thought of our dead friends as we last saw them. It is much better, for ourselves at least, to preserve in our than the dead. It is not pleasant to hold through the years the dead form of a loved friend. For ourselves only we speak, when we say, we want no open coffin and tread of feet and gaze of seems to us unseemly. There is more of morbid curosity in it all, as it strikes us, than any respect to the dead or living friends. We hope to see the custom become much less common than it

The Portland Banks.

We have received notice this week that the banks of Portland have decided to not receive checks on outside banks, and already our citizens who do their banking business with banks nearer home have begun to feel the inconvenience of this arrangement. It is evidently the intention of the Portland banks to precipitate a run on the interfor banks, with the object of capturing their trade. Merchants of this and adjoining counties should cooperate to defy this combine, and when paying for goods purchased of Portland wholesale men, issue checks on their home banks as usnal. If the Portland merchants will not accept these checks, our home merchants can find wholesale men in other cities who will be glad to get their trade, where the banks are not so particular, and carry money enough to accommodate the legitimate demands of business. In view of the recent drop in Ireight rates from eastern points, it would seem as though Portland were trifling with a bomerang. - Fossil Journal.

Palmer, of the Onarga lowed the doctor's prescription. Mr. Leader and Review, gives the following Denny was appointed a consul to China consul-general at Shanghai, and was perhaps nearer to the viceroy, Li Hung Chang, than any other foreigner. So broad-minded and liberal, so clearsighted and trustworthy, it was not a matter of wonder that he became very intimate with the rulers of the Orient, and his services were successfully petitioned as the adviser and director for the king of Corea. Judge Denny, as much as any other living man, has made America, in the estimation of China, Japan and allied countries, a reputation for fair statesmanship, liberal views and generous consideration.

With a natural love for sport, it is not to be wondered at that the many beautiful birds of China, with their brilliancy of plumage, should awaken a desire to have them introduced in the United States, and in 1881 he imported 18 hens and 10 cocks of the ring-necked pheasants, which have now become fairly plentiful throughout the Willamette valley, and proving that the climate is favorable to their development.

On another occasion Mr. Denny brought 90 pheasants from Japan of different varieties, 32 golden, 8 silver, 16 copper, 12 Japan green pheasants and the remainder of another variety. These some of them have thriven enormously. There are 13 varieties of pheasants in China known to Mr. Denny, and in making the salection for a colony for the United States there was much to be the United States there was much to be considered. The Swinness pheasant SPECIAL: :: PRICES has a brilliant plumage; the Elliot, Amherst and Darwin pheasants are less showy and more destructive; the handsomest is the Reeves pheasant, having a predominance in color of old gold, with markings of white and brown, and having a tail five or six feet long. The names of these pheasants were all derived from Englishmen who were first to discover them; of course they have their proper ornithological names, properly catalogued, and warranted to be unpronounceable. The pheasant which has been known as the Chinese pheasant is no more Chinese than these twelve other varieties, and since the others were named after English discoverers, it is due Mr. Denny, who not only discovered them, but conferred an inesdiscovered them, but conferred an ines-timable blessing upon his countrymen by introducing them, to name them CHRONICLE, and should be adopted by every nevspaper on the coast. The bird is valuable on account of its insectdestroying proclivities, and the introduction of a number of them on the Warm Springs reservation would satisfactorily solve for the Indians the cricket pest. An instance will suffice of the estimation in which they are held by the Chinese themselves. While Mr. Denny was out hunting with an interpreter attendant, he came upon a Chinese small farmer, who requested him to spare them, although they were quite plentiful.

"Why," said Mr. Denny, "they are in your cabbage patch." "True," said he, "they are, and they eat a little of the cabbage, but here is what they are after," and turning up the under side of a cabbage leaf, the Chinaman caught hold of a long green worm and held it up to view. "Now, one day than the birds will in three months." Mr. Denny left for Arlington on the 1 'clock train, but promises to stop on his return trip. He is an old timer in The Dalles, and was one of those men, here thirty years ago, who maintained that this section of country was good for something else be sides bunchgrass and sanflowers, and that the barren hillsides south and east of us would some day grow fields of waving grain. His prediction has achieved a glorious fulfillment. Oregon takes the lead at the world's fair for her fruits, and Wasco county secures first honors of Oregon for her horticultural display. Mr. Denny has lived a long life of usefulness, and it is fitting that he should retire to his Oregon home to spend the remainder of his years. May they be many and pleasant, is the sincere wish of THE CHEONICLE.
