

MAKES ITSELF FELT
—the great, gripping, old-fashioned pill. Not only when you take it, but unpleasant from first to last, and it only does a little temporary good.

The things to take its place are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. One of these at a dose will regulate the whole system perfectly. They're tiny, sugar-coated granules, scarcely larger than mustard seeds. They act in Nature's own way. No reaction afterward. Their help lasts and they do permanent good. Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, Sick or Bilious Headaches, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured.

They're the cheapest, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction or money is returned. Nothing can be "just as good."

Miggles—What! are you actually in the agonies of love again this late in the season? Piggles—Yes. "The last throes of Summer," as the poet says, dear boy.—Town Topics.

Daisy—Doesn't Jack swear he will reform if you marry him? Delia—Yes, that's just the trouble. I'm afraid he'll not be the least bit fascinating.—Town Topics.

Deafness Cannot be Cured
By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

"Was his first novel a success?" "I imagine not. He has just written a second, entitled 'Hard Times.'"—The Scribbler.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton Druggists.

SOME ODDITIES IN ETIQUETTE.

What is Considered Proper and Improper in Different Countries.

In Holland a lady is expected to retire precipitately if she should enter a store or restaurant where men are congregated. She waits until they have transacted their business and departed. Ladies schismrise in Spain to receive a male visitor, and they rarely accompany him to the door. For a Spaniard to give a lady—even his wife—his arm while out walking is looked upon as a violation of propriety.

No Turk will ever enter a sitting room with dirty shoes. The upper classes wear tight-fitting shoes with goshes over them. The latter, which receive all the dirt and dust, are left outside the door. The Turk never washes in dirty water. Water is poured over his hands, so that when polluted it runs away.

In Syria the people never take off their hats or turbans when entering the house or visiting a friend, but they always leave their shoes at the door. There are no mats or scrapers outside, and the floors inside are covered with expensive rugs, kept very clean in Moslem houses and used to kneel upon while praying.

In Persia among the aristocracy a visitor sends notice an hour or two before calling, and gives a day's notice if the visit is one of great importance. He is met by servants before he reaches the house, and other considerations are shown him, according to relative rank. The left and not the right is considered the position of honor.

In Sweden, if you address the poorest person on the street, you must lift your hat. The same courtesy is insisted upon if you pass a lady on the stairway. To enter a reading room or a bank with one's hat on is regarded as impolite.

JOINTS AND CARTILAGE.

One of the Wonders of Nature in the Human Body.

Why do joints work so easily and never give us any pain? In a fresh joint its appearance in life can be readily studied. In the ball and socket joint, says the London Hospital, the round end of the bone, as well as the cup, are covered or lined with a smooth substance called "cartilage," or "gristle" kept moist and smooth with synovia. Cartilage contains no nerves, and has no feeling; if it had, we should have pain when we moved. The bones are kept in place at the joints by very strong bands or ligaments, in hinge joints a number of these bands are fastened above and below, but in ball and socket joints they also surround the joint, forming a cap, in which the joint moves freely. In disease this smooth cartilage gets worn away, and the ends of bone rub together like those of a skeleton; the pain is great, because the bones have nerves, though the cartilage has none. A bone without cartilage is like a decayed tooth with an exposed nerve. In a healthy tooth the nerve is well covered, and gives no pain, and in a healthy bone the nerves are there, but they are only felt when the cartilage is worn away.

The Good That Remains.

How many are there who are valuing themselves by what they have, and not by what they are! What they may have talent, or money, or position; it matters not what, but it is not their very selves. True worth cannot be separated from a man's real self. Money, position, even intellect, may go; but the sterling, i. e., the moral, worth will remain. A sultan of Morocco is said to have discovered that one of his viziers was becoming too powerful. He therefore summoned him to tea, and complimented him on his great wealth. The vizier becoming vain, boasted of the number of his houses, wives and slaves, and the sultan rebuked him saying that he was too rich. To show the man exactly what he was worth, his majesty had him taken by the soldiers to the slave market, where he was put up for sale and received only one bid of eightpence. All his property was also taken from him. The price which we put upon ourselves and our fellow men put upon us are two very different things.

Death by Electricity.

The Digest gives an account of some experiments on the effect of alternating electric currents on animal organisms, described in a paper read before a recent medical congress at Rome, Italy, and which corroborate the views of D'Arsonval, referred to recently. The current used was an alternating one, and it was found that animals subjected to from fifteen hundred to two thousand volts were not easily killed, and that death resulted mostly from asphyxia caused by the sudden stoppage of respiration. Frequently breathing started again spontaneously, and the animal recovered completely. In no case was there any physiological change noted, though in a few there were mechanical lesions, in themselves cause for death. This further confirmation of D'Arsonval's formula. "A man shocked by electricity should be treated as if drowned," renders it still more important that the electrician should make himself acquainted with the proper means of resuscitation from the effects of electric shock.

A Momentous Proceeding.

In Mr. Montague's "Tales of a Nomad" he says that in the old days the Boer seldom used his pen, but when he did there was a regular commotion in the house. "Hush. Be quiet all of you. Drive out the ducks and the geese, and the pigs and the fowls. Father is going to write his name." And then the old gentleman, with elbows squared on the table, would seize the pen with a flourish, and putting on a determined look, as if he were going to tackle an adversary, would bend down his head until it nearly touched his left arm, write his name with many a splutter, and then, throwing down the pen and pushing the chair, would look round with an air of mingled pride and resignation and say: "I have done it."

HUMORING THE GREAT PETER.

How the Sovereign of Wurtemberg Carried Out His Little Joke.

It seems that the czar, who has determined on retaining his incognito in traveling through Europe, absolutely declined to take up his quarters at the royal palace at Stuttgart, but insisted on going to an inn. Having learned of this prior to his arrival, says the New York Home Journal, the Wurtemberg sovereign caused all the hotel and inn keepers to remove their signs. Over the principal doorway of his palace he had a huge sign hung out stating that within there was cheer for man and beast at cheap prices, and that the name of the hotel was the Konigsbau.

On the czar's carriage and retinue entering the city the postillions, previously instructed by the Wurtemberg officials, drove straight to the palace, and there, standing at the main entrance, was the sovereign, fat, burly and jovial, arrayed in the traditional costume of a boniface, with a white apron and cap, etc., while the various princesses, princes, nobles and dignitaries of his court were costumed as waiters and waitresses, ostlers and other servants. Peter the Great, greatly amused by this witty and kindly manner of humoring his wishes, entered thoroughly into the spirit of the joke, which was kept up until the following day, when he proceeded on his journey. Noticing that the postillon mounted on the wheeler of his traveling carriage was a man of singularly unkempt appearance, his clothes ragged and covered with mud, he made a remark to one of his attendants that there was at least no mistake as to the social condition of that man, and that there could be no danger of his being a nobleman in disguise. And yet, when at the end of the first stage, the postillon came to the carriage door to receive his gratuity and raised the cap from his head, the czar to his astonishment recognized in him the heir to the Wurtemberg throne, who had assumed this disguise for the purpose of speeding his father's imperial guest.

A DEVOTED MOTHER BEAR.

She Sacrificed Her Life to Save Her Helpless Young Ones.

During an exploring expedition in the Arctic regions several years ago, said an officer of the navy recently, some of the men in our party used to spend considerable time in hunting the polar bears. I joined a party of hunters one day, but the pathetic sight I witnessed deterred me from ever seeking that kind of sport again. We were in an open boat, and had not gone far before we sighted a big bear with two cubs lying on the ice not far distant. When we drew near enough the sailors threw them great lumps of sea horse flesh, and these the old bear divided between her cubs, reserving only a small portion for herself. Then, when all three were happily feeding, the sailors fired, killing the cubs almost instantly, and severely wounding the dam. It would have drawn tears of pity from any but the most unfeeling to have marked the affectionate concern expressed by the poor beast in the last moments of her expiring young. Though she was dreadfully wounded, she tore another lump of the sea horse flesh in pieces and laid it before them. When she found they would not eat she laid her paws first on one and then the other and tried to raise them up, all the while moaning piteously. Finding at last that they were lifeless, she raised her head toward the boat and uttered a growl of despair, which the men returned with another volley of bullets. Then she fell between her cubs and died licking their wounds.
