THEORY AGAINST FACT.

Senator Hill opened the campaign in New York Thursday at Syracuse. In his opening remarks he said:

"In a country like ours, which is governed by political parties, and not by royal families, the existence of at least two great parties is essential to the general welfare. There must necessarily be a difference of opinion on some public questions, and such differences honestly entertained furnish no excuse for coarse abuse nor bitter personal reflections. I propose to conduct a creditable canvass in behalf of my party, which has honored me with its leadership, so that at its conclusion, whatever the result may be, I shall be able to retain at least my own self-respect, and I hope, as well, the present respect of my adversaries. Facts and arguments are weapons which I shall invoke, rather than vilification and vituperation. In great political contests, measures and not men should be essentially the controlling factors."

However much we may disagree with the opinions, theories or practices of Senator Hill, we honor him for the sentiment expressed. Abuse is not argument, and noise and fury and vituperation are poor weapons indeed. Politically the population is pretty evenly divided between the republican and democratic parties. For the sake of this argument we will assume that it is evenly divided. That each party, and the individuals who compose each party are conscientious in their beliefs, we believe to be absolutely true. We do not believe that either party, or the members of either party, would willingly do anything which they believed would injure the country. We do not believe a republican would advocate a protective tariff if he thought that system was doing what the democrats claim for it. Nor do we believe that any democrat would advocate free trade if he believed its effects would be injurious to the country. Neither party can injure the country, its trade or prosperity, without injuring itself and every member of its party, as well as those of the other.

So much for that; yet it is because of this belief that we see no possibility of the country further clinging to the democracy. Because of this belief we predict a sweeping victory for the republican party throughout the entire north. The level-headed democrats realize that however attractive the theories of free trade may have been; however sonorous the rounded perorations about trading with the world may have been, that the facts and the theory do not coincide. The free-trade picture is not true to the free-trade fact. The theory was a romance founded on sentiment, the realization is a sorrowful story founded on fact. That is the democratic condition. On the other hand was the protective tariff fact. The country was prosperous, the capitalist found investment for his money, the laborer employment for his hands, wages were good and employment to be had for the asking. This was the protective tariff fact which the dissatisfied traded off for the democratic theory. The change has been tried, with what degree of satisfaction the parties who caused the change can say for themselves. The American voter is honest, and he is intelligent. He realizes the mistake and will walk up to the polls cheerfully to rectify it, just as soon as the opportunity is given him. Therein lies the certainty of democratic downfall and therein lies the assurance of republican victory. Abuse will not change the facts. It will not aid or strengthen either side. The campaign is one of measures and of principles. It is a fair, square issue, not between pure and good men on one side, and impure and evil ones on the other; but a trial of conflicting systems, with the American people in the jury box, can there be any doubt as to the verdict?

FOREIGN COMPETITION.

Minister Zeballos of the Argentine Republic says a remarkable stimulation of the wool industry of his country has resulted from the enactment of the tariff law in this country. Raw wool has made heavy advances in the Argentine markets, similar to the rise in London and Paris, and extensive preparations are being made for the wool exports to this country. Mr. Zeballos is just back from New York, where he found merchants were largely increasing their wool orders, and new steamship lines were being projected to handle the new trade. The minister said this country bought $2,000,000 of the coarse grade, long combed Argentine wool last year, but the trade promises to reach $6,000,000 this year. The trade in fine Merino wools promises to triple in the same manner. Minister Zeballos says the increased price of wool overcomes the fears felt by American wool-growers that the foreign competitors would pull down the price and kill the American wool production.—Pacific Farmer.

STICK TO THE TRUTH.

We re-print a couple of political squibs from the Pendleton Tribune of Friday last:

"A bushel of wheat bought twenty pounds of sugar under McKinley protection. It buys only ten pounds of sugar under the first step toward free trade. How much will it buy with the absolute free trade that is promised to the farmer?"

"With a crop of 800,000,000 bushels of wheat in 1891, under McKinley protection, the average price was 83 cents per bushel. With a crop of only 400,000,000 bushels in 1893, under democracy, it averages only 52 cents. Put this in your pipe, farmers, and think it over."

We will say that the Tribune printed both the above articles under a head that indicated they had been clipped. We judge from their style they were taken from the American Economist, a protective tariff paper that by its asinine editorials is doing more to injure the cause it pretends to uphold than any half dozen papers openly advocating free trade. The battle between protection and free trade can be fought and settled only on the basis of common sense. Such asinine statements as those above quoted excite only the contempt of intelligent people. Every sensible man knows that the price of wheat is not affected a particle by our legislation; that the product of other countries has crowded our wheat out of the market, and left us with a burdensome surplus. Such papers as the Economist are a disgrace to the party, as well as an injury. If we can find no better arguments than those offered by it, then is the republican party in hard times indeed.

Two years ago the democratic orators were howling from the stump and the democratic newspapers were insisting through wearisome columns that the republican tariff was what kept wheat down, and that it was going to be a dollar a bushel when the democratic party got into power—and the balance of the millennium arrived. Those who repeated that story knew it was false, and the party is now apologizing for its "mistakes."

There is no necessity for the republican party going outside of the plain, palpable truth. If we cannot win on that, we do not deserve to win.

GETTING TOGETHER.

Yesterday's Telegram tells a great truth in the following:

"The spirit of getting together seems to have taken hold of the Oregon people at last, and if it can be kept alive long enough great good must result. Our business men are just beginning to get acquainted with each other, and for the first time are learning that they must depend on each other for help. And what is still more singular, the business men of Portland are just beginning to inform themselves of the resources of this great state of Oregon and of the possibilities of its future development. Past prosperity had spoiled us. We had too much of it. When every one was making money and everything was coming everybody's way there was no inducement for the business interests to get together and work on the co-operative plan. In this respect the hard times have been a positive benefit to us. They have taught us the necessity for cultivating a spirit of mutuality, and that we are a community in fact as well as in name. The business men's excursions, which have been inaugurated lately, are doing great help in this direction. By an association of business interests and mutual co-operation greater things can be accomplished than if left to individual effort. When we quit relying on outside effort and learn to depend on ourselves the future prosperity of this section will be assured. A community of people who are helping themselves will usually attract the favorable attention of those who are looking for safe investments."

If the hard times will serve to awaken Portland's business men to the necessity of reaching out for trade, and also that the interests of Oregon and every part of it are also Portland's interests, it will have accomplished great good. Complaint has been made time immemorial that Portland took no interest in Eastern Oregon or its development, and this charge was made more often in connection with her apathy, if not enmity to the opening of the Cascade locks. We believe she was careless of its interests because she did not realize how her own prosperity and progress were interwoven with ours. At most her sins were of omission.

While Eastern Oregon has felt, and felt keenly, what it conceived to be an inimical course on Portland's part, it holds no grudges. We realize that the growth of Portland is our growth, and her prosperity ours. We are pleased indeed to note that this fact is also becoming known to our brethren of the metropolis, and hope the day is near when "Oregon" will mean the whole state, and when united in efforts for the common good, her citizens will make her all that her splendid situation and grand possibilities will permit.

We do not know how often we shall have to state that we will not give space to obituary poetry. Nearly every death that occurs in this neighborhood stirs in some one a divine effluvia and forthwith they insult clean, white paper with the veriest rot, devoid of sense, devoid of measure, and imperfect of rhyme. We will not willingly be a party to taking advantage of the dead. Once more we reiterate we will not publish obituary poetry. We don't want it, and respectfully request that it be not sent to this office.

We have received the first copy of the Sun, the long expected daily started in Portland. Everybody connected with the paper is a stockholder, it being a co-operative institution. The paper is neat and contains a large amount of reading matter with a full page of telegraphic matter. The paper is independent in politics, and declares its intention of paying particular attention to local news. We have always believed there was room in Portland for another good daily, and the Sun starts under circumstances favorable to its filling the place.

The Pendleton Tribune says that the sheriff sold fourteen good horses last week to N. H. Cottrell, for $25, or at the rate of $1.78 1/2 apiece. The Alliance Herald lays the blame on John Sherman and the demonization of silver. If its idea is correct and silver was restored to say $1.20 an ounce, those horses would have brought $5.57. As the Herald claims the horses were worth $100 each, will it kindly explain what caused the $96.43 deficiency in price over and above the full silver value.

We observe in Secretary McBride's advertisement for bids for furnishing stationery, an item of "12 dozen fine pen knives." This may be all right but why the state should furnish the legislature with pen knives is a mystery.

The board of railroad commissioners passed through last night. Their special car seemed to be in good condition, and they made a close and thorough inspection of the road to Heppner today.

GRAND PIONEER BALL.

GATHERED THE OLD-TIMERS AT THE LOCKS.

Coon with Huckleberry Sauce, Virginia Reels and Old-Fashioned Quadrilles, the Features of a Pleasant Evening.

"There was a sound of revelry by night, and lamps shown o'er fair women and brave men. A thousand hearts beat happily; and when music arose, with its voluptuous swell, soft eyes looked love to eyes which spoke again, and all went merry as a marriage bell."

'Twas at the pioneer ball of Saturday, Oct. 13th, the healthiest, happiest lot of ripe veterans of the Oregon vintage of 1850; men and women who could tell you all about the Indian fighting, the sieges in block houses, and the vicissitudes of pioneer life, and who said they were sixty, seventy and one or two, as old as eighty-one years of age, but whose feet tripped as merrily and whose eyes shone as brightly in the grand march, to the time of "Auld Lang Syne," as any of the youngsters who had gathered to do them honor. It was indeed, as one of them expressed it, a "red letter day" in their lives. The old settlers gathered from all along the middle Columbia, some who had not met before for years.

"Don't you remember old Ame Underwood, Mrs. A.," said one. "Oh, go 'long—is that you, Amos." And such hand-shaking, and such talk of the days when Phil Sheridan was a gay lieutenant and fought Indians at the block house.

But to return to the ball. The grand march began at 9:30, to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne," led by Dr. H. A. Leavens and Mrs. Atwell, pioneers of 1852 and 1850; then Put Bradford, 1850, Mrs. Leavens, '59; Mr. J. F. Imams, '52, with Mrs. St. Martin, '50; Mr. Amos Underwood, '52, and Mrs. Reid, '52; Mr. J. A. Bull, (aged 81) '50, with Mrs. Jones; Mr. John Woodward, '53, and Mrs. Bergeron; Mr. J. W. Stephenson, '53, and Mrs. Harper, '52; Mr. and Mrs. Stevens of Cape Horn, '52; Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Dobson.

These pioneers were followed by fifty couples, and forming sets, the old people showed the young ones how they used to dance when Oregon was a wilderness, and right well they remembered, for they danced all night; that is, some of them did, doing full justice meanwhile to an old-time supper of coon and huckleberry sauce.

The large dining hall of the government mess house was crowded with dancers, and one who counted said that twenty-one sets danced at one time. The ball was a grand success, and the only regret expressed was that some of The Dalles pioneers were not present with them.

Moster Musings.

Mrs. Cramer will leave next week for the Malheur to spend the winter with her son George.

Now, correspondents, that the summer's rush is over, I hope to soon again hear from you all through the columns of THE CHRONICLE, which from private sources, I am enabled to say, has a very wide circulation throughout Wasco and neighboring counties.

Mrs. Fred Lusso and sister Florence of La Grande arrived Monday night and are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Harlan. Mrs. Lusso is the wife of the unfortunate brewer who was killed this spring on mountain division.

New comers continue to arrive and the country is fast settling up. Mr. Bing and family are the last arrivals and have purchased a quarter of school land on Upper Rock creek. A brother of Mr. Bing's has also arrived from Michigan and will settle near him.

James Hunter has finished building two immense wagon bridges across some of the uneven places on his Tyrolean ranch five miles south of Mosier. The highest one is thirty-five feet from the ground. His remarkable industry speaks truly for his Scotch extraction, a people whose dauntless perseverance has made the land of the thistle a garden spot of creation.

Indian summer has come, that pretty season which though apprehending winter, yet gently mellows its icy promise by a touch of summer's tenderness; and disguises the death of the forest leaves by clothing them in a wealth of color far more beautiful than when they breathed the air and sunshine of perfect life. Nature's God is tender, merciful and beneficent.

Mrs. J. H. Mosier is circulating a petition, which has been numerously signed, asking for appointment as postmistress, vice J. H. Mosier, deceased. There are no rivals for the office as far as known. Its duties are onerous and the salary small. When the solitary store and rough pine shacks around it multiply to the extent that a first-class office is demanded, with a salary of $10,000 per annum, we will petition for the removal of the pasture fence and bid for the world's fair.

E. N. Phillips was again arrested on Monday, the 14th charged with threatening the life of Elijah Husky. He was bound over under $600 bonds to keep the peace, which were furnished by Jas. Brown, and once again the defendant is given a respite from the clutches of M. Dichtenmuller, the constable of Mosier precinct, whose acquaintance has had a good chance to ripen into that familiarity which breeds contempt.

The numerous Phillips cases, together with the wholesale stealing which has been going on of late, bids fair to occupy a good share of the November term of circuit court, if the thieves can be located. Louis Davenport has lost about twelve sacks of seed wheat, which the thief could have had for the asking and without trouble or danger, for the generosity of the squire is proverbial. He would give away everything he has, even to his best suit of clothes. Geo. Salinger's barn was also invaded Saturday night and a saddle, bridle and blanket stolen, together with three sacks of corn.

A bull belonging to Mrs. Bachelor of Mosier met with a sanguinary death Sunday and, apropos, Frank Weidner, whose rifle ended its existence, is possessed of enough forbearance to entitle him to pose with the three Graces. The bull has been a terror to the neighborhood for some time, recognizing no rights which he was bound to respect, indifferent to fences, careless of the rights of the owners of the fields they enclosed, aggressive, belligerent and dangerous. Two weeks ago he gored Lee Prather's pigs to death and he has frequently disputed possession of the road with passers-by. Friday night he tossed over with his horns about fifty yards of fence on Mr. Weidner's farm, and demolished twenty-six shocks of fodder worth, with the corn in them $1 a shock. He ran Mr. Weidner's children in the barn the following day and even refused to vacate the premises when the irate owner tried to drive him away. Instead of shooting him then and there, as many would have done, he saw the justice of the peace, who, after hearing the facts, ordered him to kill the animal at once, and Sunday afternoon Mr. Weidner at a distance of seventy-five yards, accurately drove a rifle ball between the eyes and into the brain, killing him instantly. This rids the neighborhood of a very great danger as the bull would sooner or later have killed some one.

REGULAR. "He fell in love with her when she was riding a bicycle, I believe." "No. It was when she was falling off it that he lost his heart."

ECZEMA From early childhood until I was grown my family spent a fortune trying to cure me of this disease. I visited Hot Springs, and was treated by the best medical men, but was not benefited. FROM When all things had failed I determined to try S. S. S., and in four months was entirely cured. The terrible eczema was gone, not a sign of it left; my general health built up, and I have never had any return of the disease. I have since recommended S. S. S. to a number of friends for skin diseases, and have received many testimonials. S. S. S. Never fails to cure, even after all other remedies have failed. Treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free to any address. SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.

An interesting sketch. Nothing appears so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood, and in an instance, a young girl named Virginia, who had been terribly afflicted with eczema, had lost the entire use of her right arm, and was in such a condition that we had to carry her from bed and wash her hands for her. In fact, we feared at times that she would never be able to do anything. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she had taken only three bottles of Nervine she weighed 100 pounds; her nervousness and general debility were entirely gone, and she attended school regularly, and studies with ease and success. She has recovered completely, her appetite is splendid, and she can now attend to her own daughter's health. When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent me a bottle, and before the first day of the next week was almost immediately cured. Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee. It is sold by Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from opium or dangerous drugs.
