WHAT SHALL COME AFTER HIM?

Man is at best an egotistical creature. Surpassing all other forms of animal life in intelligence, it is quite natural that he should draw the line betwixt his reasoning powers and the instinct, which he accredits the balance of brute creation with. Not only does he claim for himself that he is the highest type of animal creation that has ever existed, but he claims also that nothing higher is possible. The autobiography of the world, as written in the rocks, will not bear out this self-aggrandisement. In times so remote that we write of them only as an aeon, an indefinite period extending over thousands of years, and distinguished from some other indefinite aeon by the subsidence or upheaval of a continent, or some other change of the visible world; in these remote times, when the first of these indefinite aeons, of which the sedimentary rocks tell us, held sway, there was but one form of life. In the Laurentian and Huronian age the protozoa alone existed, a form of animal life so low that it would be as difficult to tell as it is with the sponges whether they belonged to the animal or vegetable kingdom.

In the Cambrian and Silurian ages a higher form of life had been called into existence, as we can prove by their remains found in the Trenton and Niagara periods. These show in the earlier system of the Paleozoic aeon, which in the Devonian system also shows a still higher type of life in the fishes, which in turn, followed by the Carboniferous systems, shows a still further advanced form of animal life in the amphibians. The Jurassic and Cretaceous ages of the Mesozoic age bring reptiles and birds upon the scene, followed in the Tertiary system by mammals, and these in the Quaternary system, which is our own, by Man.

Is it possible the end of all progress has been attained, and that the perfection of animal life has been reached in man? If so, the perfection of nature is imperfect indeed. It may be hundreds of years before the superior animal, yet in the womb of the future, shall be brought forth to rule the earth in place of man, whose history shall be in turn written in the rocks for the future, and yet higher animal to read; but we have no reason to doubt but that that time will come. The human mind cannot grasp the immensity of time since the first protozoan held sway on the earth the highest type of animal life. The first mammals existed in the Tertiary period, which is a very recent one; but yesterday, as compared to the Huronian, and yet that was long ago. To illustrate: Here at our own doors nature has written the history of that later period. The high plains on each side of the John Day river were formed in the Tertiary period, the one before that in which we exist. At one time there were vast marshes, which have been slowly filled with mud washed from the hills which have been worn away. In these mud banks the bodies of the animals that existed at the time have been preserved, petrifying or fossilizing as the mud turned to rock. In time those mud banks were covered to the depth of nearly two thousand feet, and after that was done the John Day river, patiently working, wore away the overlying rocks, cut its way down, down a thousand, fifteen hundred, aye, two thousand feet, and again brought to light the bones buried so long ago. It took a long time for nature, by her slow processes, to first cover and then uncover those relics of a race of animals extinct, as far as this country is concerned, at least. It took a long time to print and bind that book, and an equally long one to open its pages. But this happened, counting time as geology reckons it, but yesterday.

What shall succeed man? We do not know; but that wise Nature which prepared the earth for its inhabitants in turn; which, starting with nothing, has produced man, must not be considered powerless to make a yet more perfect creature. Well may man, realizing how brief his rule of the earth has been, and how vast the time that other forms of life have been the "lords of creation," exclaim with Solomon, "Who shall show him what shall come after him?"

The czar of all the Russias is dying, and the end can be but a few days distant. His physicians have given up all hope, and the Russian ministers at the different courts have admitted that the end is at hand. Under common circumstances the death of a great ruler erves to unsettle business affairs and to create diplomatic tangles, but in the present case the dangers are unusual. The succession is not settled, and its settlement involves vast interests. Europe will be fortunate indeed if the settlement is made without bloodshed.

A SOCIETY CIRCUS.

Portland is to have a circus, gotten up by local talent, with a menagerie of local lions and other animals. It is going to be worth seeing too, for it will have three rings, all in full blast at once, with bare-back riding, chariot races, club swinging, trapeze work, and gymnastics by the athletic clubs of Portland. Hon. L. L. Hawkins will drive the Deadwood stage, which will be held up, of course, by Indians, and they in turn will be annihilated by a company of U. S. soldiers, this last act being the only thing of the kind on record.

Cleopatra will be represented, of course, by some handsome journalist, and the charioteer will be Mr. Scott (not H. W.). The giraffe will be represented by Brother Tozier, because he manages to see everything, and who, if not always first in pursuit of an item, is always necks best. The giant will be represented by a republican; the bearded lady a populist, and the wild man from Borneo, tattooed until his skin retains not a particle of its original color, will be a democrat; the skeleton, so thin that he has to put on an overcoat to make a shadow, will be a prohibitionist, while the dwarf will be represented by Governor Pennoyer. The child phenomena, who knows everything, will be, we don't know who, maybe Sidney Dell, while Punch and Judy will be Hon. Jo Simon and Portland's mayor. Of course the above is only our private guess, but suggested as probable from the fitness of the persons named for the parts. Then they are going to have an "it," a nondescript which whoever can identify can have. It is said to "look like an animal, but it might easily be identified as a bird or fish." This is probably a life-size representation of President Cleveland's opinion on the Wilson bill, before and after taking.

Besides all this there are to be peanuts and peach-bloom lemonade, and everybody's going, and we wish we could be there. The circus is to come off Tuesday, Friday and Saturday evenings of this week, and the proceeds will go towards swelling the coffers of the First Regiment, O. N. G.

A dispatch from Colfax states that Doc Harrington and J. Ed Nessley have been bound over to the superior court of Whitman county, on a charge of stealing cattle. Nessley is a newspaper man and has edited the Rosalia Rustler, the Spangle Record, the Oakesdale Sun, Peoples Advocate, the Tekoa Blade, and was at one time connected with the Spokane Spokesman. There is no telling what a man will do, or won't, after having a newspaper experience of that kind. A man is excusable in getting his "wee" and "ours" mixed, even to the extent of swiping a "beef critter."

The czar of Russia is dying, and it is a close race between he and his second son, George, as to which will pass away first. The czarina has had a stroke of apoplexy, said to have been brought on by too close confinement at the bedside of her husband. The general idea in this country that Russians have no love for their rulers, is perhaps exaggerated. The whole population is praying for his recovery. The law-abiding because they love and respect him, and the anarchists so that they can kill him.

The latest dispatches state that the czar has a cancer, and that he has lost thirty-two pounds in the last ten days. Another dispatch from Vienna states he is dying of arsenical poisoning; while yet another says he has spasms, apoplexy, heart failure, uraemia, Bright's disease and delirium. Every additional doctor called in finds some new disease, and as all of them, or any, are fatal, there is no show for him.

The democracy fear that Congressman Wilson cannot carry his district, and as he is the father of the tariff bill they do not want to see him downed. As a result they are concentrating their forces in the district. Two years ago Wilson was elected by a majority of 1051, in a total vote of 42,563, a very small margin and one that it will not require a very great change to alter.

Mr. Nathan Straus, the Tammany nominee for mayor of New York City, has declined the nomination, and Mayor Grant, the present incumbent, was named in his place. Mr. Grant was at first inclined to refuse the nomination, but, like his larger prototype, Hill, he was induced to make a sacrifice of himself.

David Bennett Hill is proving himself a wonderful politician. Out of the warring factions he is rapidly forming a solid phalanx, and those who have been most bitter against each other are united in their support of Hill. It is no safe bet that his candidacy will meet with defeat.

The Herald and New York World have joined the other democratic papers in fighting Tammany. Hill has a hard row to hoe with the disensions in his party but if anybody can heal them he can.

IN THE LINE OF DUTY.

Recently a negro was convicted of raping an aged white woman at Washington Courthouse, Ohio, or rather, being charged with the crime, and fearing mob violence, he entered a plea of guilty so that he could be sent to the penitentiary at once, and was sentenced for 20 years. The public feeling, however, had become so strong that a mob undertook to lynch him. The sheriff hearing that this would be attempted called out the militia, and when the mob came, they were first warned to keep away, and failing to do so but making an attack on the jail, the militia fired on the mob, killing five and wounding several. For this act the militia has been pretty generally condemned.

It seems strange that innocent citizens should be shot down to protect the life of a self-confessed fiend, but there is another side of the case from which to view it. When courts become corrupt, and when criminals escape through the connivance of the officers of the law, mob violence becomes admissible for the reason that the entire people are greater than the law, because they make it. In this case there was no excuse for the mob, for the criminal had been given the greatest punishment the law permitted. The officers of the law had done their entire duty. The sheriff who had charge of the prisoners had been elected by the very people who attacked him to carry out the law and one of his sworn duties was to protect the criminal in his charge and deliver him to the prison authorities at Columbus. The militia was formed for the purpose of assisting in enforcing the laws of the state, when the usual peace officers were unable to do so. They were at the jail to protect the prisoner and to uphold the law, and were performing their sworn duty. The mob knew they were there, knew that the prisoner had been given the full limit of the law, and yet desired to punish still further the criminal for his violation of the law, by violating it themselves. We cheerfully admit that hanging is not a sufficient punishment for the crime the negro committed, but that the penalty is not more severe than it is the fault of the people themselves. And again if the militia will not obey the orders given it, or if it is permitted to do its own thinking, to fire when it feels like it, and to disobey orders when in its opinion they are wrong, then the sooner the system is abandoned the better. The soldier who does not obey all lawful orders, becomes simply a guerilla and a criminal. If the killing in Ohio will serve to deter other acts of mob violence the unfortunates will not have died in vain. We might add that had the militia refused to fire, they would have been severely condemned by those who now condemn them for obeying orders. California and Washington have each had a case of the kind and the punishment the militia received for refusal to obey orders and the general condemnation of the public for not doing so, were sufficient to brace the nerves of their brethren in Ohio.

The crime in question suggests its own punishment so prominently that the wonder is it has not been put upon the statute books. There is no punishment too severe, but whatever the law prescribes must be sufficient, and if that is not satisfactory, change the law.

Reggy held her close to him and whispered, "Angel, we must part!" The beautiful fiancée of an hour swooned dead away till revived with a small bottle, and the rest of that awful sentence. "—our hair a little to the left now, or we dudes won't be in it this fall!"—The (dis)appointer.

AROUND THE CIRCLE.

Politics are running high in the East, and there is a grand swinging around the circle act, that has not been equaled since Andy Johnson's time. Governor McKinley is the boss swinger, flitting from one state to another as a canary flirts from one perch to another. From Maine to Louisiana, back to Missouri and Kansas, on through Iowa and Illinois, he has streaked like a meteor. Tom Reed is the second best swinger, though way yonder the first best talker, and is dealing some regular sledge hammer blows. Ex-President Harrison is gyrating in a much smaller sphere but he is making "Posey county" solid, sure. Vice President Stevenson is also flying around the outer edge of an ellipse, but his itinerary is not ornamented with those enthusiastic crowds which greet the republican presidential possibilities. Still he is doing effective work in Suckerdom, though he can scarcely hope to carry the state with him, not this year. Congressman Wilson's string broke and he flew off at a tangent, landing in London but he is back again in his own district and is not swinging any more. He has a contract at home. But a couple of weeks longer and the show will be over, but just at present the political kaleidoscope is at its prettiest.

At New York last night General William Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, was formally welcomed in Carnegie music hall, which was crowded to the doors. On the stage were all the commanders, captains and officers of lesser rank, while for a background there was a row of flaming banners. In his address General Booth said that the army's flag floated in forty-one colonies, while there were over 1,000 officers, all trained ministers, on the rolls. He spoke highly of the work accomplished by women. Preceding the meeting in Carnegie hall there was a big mass meeting in Union square.

And now Congressman Breckinridge is making stump speeches in Kentucky. The redoubtable colonel is dead, but he is so blamed tough that mortification couldn't touch him and so he has not found it out yet. He is a picturesque old winner, and being dead and damned should have self respect and decency enough to remain buried where his erstwhile friends placed him. The trouble with the disgruntled old corpse is that he insists on traveling around wearing mourning for himself.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure in the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. One day the children were having an object lesson on the blue heron. The teacher called attention to its small tail, saying, "The bird has no tail to speak of." The next day she asked the scholars to write a description of the bird, and a little German girl wound up by saying: "The blue heron has a tail, but it must not be talked about."—Babyhood.

It Should Be in Every House

J. B. Wilson, 571 Clay St., Sharsburg, Pa., says he will not be without Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, that it cured his wife who was threatened with pneumonia after an attack of "la grippe," when various other remedies and several physicians had done her no good. Robert Barber, of Cooksport, Pa., claims Dr. King's New Discovery has done him more good than anything he ever used for lung trouble. Nothing like it. Try it. We have made arrangements with the San Francisco Examiner to furnish it in connection with THE CHRONICLE. Having a clubbing rate with the Oregonian and N. Y. Tribune for our republican patrons, we have made this arrangement for the accommodation of the democratic members of THE CHRONICLE family. Both papers, the Weekly Examiner and SEMI-WEEKLY CHRONICLE will be furnished for one year for $2.25, cash in advance.

Do you want THE CHRONICLE and San Francisco Examiner for a year? If so send us $2.25 and you can have them, 150 papers for $2.25 or less than a cent and a half a piece. If you would rather have the New York World, we will send you that and the SEMI-WEEKLY CHRONICLE one year for $2.25. The World is also a semi-weekly so you will get 208 papers for $2.25.

Not in His Line. A short time ago, says the Louisville Courier-Journal, a young lady who was troubled with a boil on her nose which grew so bad that she thought it necessary to call in a physician. She had formed a dislike for the family physician, so her father suggested several others, and finally said that he would call in the physician with the homoeopathic case, who passed the house every day. They kept a sharp lookout for him, and when he came along he was called in. The young lady modestly showed him the disabled member. The little man looked at it and said: "Why, that's pretty bad." "Well," she said, "what must I do?" "If I were you, I answered, "I would send for a physician. I am a piano tuner."

Cholly Quickwit—Who was that round-shouldered, ill-dressed little old I saw you with this morning? Ethel (drearily)—That, sir, was my fiancé. Cholly—Good tawd! You don't say. What a magnificent contrast you will make.—The Diplomat.

Mrs. Ray—How does your husband express himself when he comes home late from the club? Mrs. Ray—He doesn't express himself at all. They send him home in an ambulance.—The Toper.

Miss Prudeleigh—Sir, how dare you? Mr. Kattler (who has stolen a kiss)—Excuse me, I never would have done it in my sober senses. Miss Prudeleigh—Oh, indeed!—The Malaprop.

"That was a finished sermon," remarked a lady as she came out of church yesterday. "Yes, but I was afraid it never would be, said her husband.—Philadelphia Record.

"Quite a change in the weather isn't it?" "Yes," replied the populist with a grin. "Greatest season for flaps I ever saw!"—Washington Star.
