FORTY CARS OF WOOL

WHAT A BOSTON NEWSPAPER SAYS OF IT.

J. H. Sherar Astonishes Boston People With a Sample of Wasco County Wool.

Very rarely, if ever, has there been so large a lot of wool exhibited in one open pile in Boston as it has been our privilege to examine this week in the warehouse of Messrs. Denny, Rice & Co. in Boston. Certainly it may be truthfully said that never had a line of Oregon wool of such magnitude been on sale in any one exhibit before, and this great quantity of wool—nearly three-quarters of 1,000,000 pounds—arranged and displayed upon a single floor of a warehouse designed exclusively for wool, constitute a sight which probably could not be witnessed in any city of the United States except Boston.

This wool is most remarkable for its superior condition, its length of staple and strength of fibre, and is an example of what may be done under proper and favoring conditions in our great sister state of the Northwest. Much of it is coming wool, not to be surpassed by the best grown Australian.

WELL-BRED WOOL.

For all characteristics which manufacturers appreciate, except of course extreme fineness of fibre, we do not see how this wool can be excelled by the product of any wool-growing section. Perhaps we have been too apt to regard the wools of Eastern Oregon as lacking in "blooded qualities" (which term those will understand who are familiar with wool), but an examination of this line will dissipate any prejudice one may have had in this respect.

This shipment of wool belongs to J. H. Sherar, Esq., of Sherar Bridge, Wasco county, Oregon, one of the pioneers of that section who went there in early days when Indians held almost exclusive possession, who by his energy and enterprise has done much to develop the country, and to forward the wool-growing industry of the Northwest.

CAREFUL PERSONAL EXAMINATION. Mr. Sherar's own clip of nearly 100,000 forms a portion of the above described line. The balance is all of carefully selected clips purchased by him. Following the shipments East each season (this year comprising some forty cars) Mr. Sherar makes the trip to Boston, where he gives personal and most careful attention to the different clips as they are opened. Not a bag passes the grader's hands that he does not see, and in this way he is able to report intelligently to his constituents as to the merits or demerits of their respective shipments, and give them the best information to be obtained as to how to make their wool most acceptable to the manufacturer.

This lot of wool is the product of considerably more than 100,000 sheep. Previous to the recent tariff agitation, this wool would have brought in a secured condition, 82 1/2 @ 85c. per fine, 60 @ 62c. for No. 1, and 55 @ 57c. for No. 2. Today, these grades range at an average of 35c. per secured pound. As this represents an average decline of about 25 cents per secured pound, and the 800,000 pounds or more in the grease represents about 300,000 secured pounds, it follows that the growers must accept $75,000 less for this lot of wool than they would have received before the late decline in prices.

THE SHEEP'S NATURAL HABITAT.

The section of Oregon from which this wool came is unsuited for miscellaneous agriculture, and is a normal habitat for sheep. Hence Mr. Sherar is naturally a republican and protectionist, and not friendly to the doctrine of free raw materials, and sees in free wool only destruction to wool growing industries in the United States. Nevertheless, in the hope of a speedy return to the protective policy, he will stand by his sheep and will increase his flock by raising all of his lambs the present year.

Mr. Sherar leaves next week, with his wife, who always makes the eastern trip with him, for his extensive estate near The Dalles.

For Adjutant General.

Lieutenant Charles E. Roblin of Salem, is mentioned as the probable successor to Adjutant General Mitchell. We have no acquaintance with Mr. Roblin, but have no doubt that he is the upright and capable gentleman his friends claim him to be. In spite of this we do not believe Mr. Roblin will get the appointment. Geography is against him. Salem has the governor and that ought to be enough. Besides we have up here in Eastern Oregon a man who was and is evidently intended for that office; a man who saw years of active service, who is thoroughly posted on military matters and one whom Eastern Oregon almost unanimously pushes forward for the place. That man is Capt. John W. Lewis, and we defy the "Lord" to find a better.

Williams Found Guilty.

The jury in the case of the State against Wm. Williams, who was charged with stealing 140 penknives from the store of Mays & Crowe, brought in a verdict last night of guilty, but recommending the prisoner to the mercy of the court. The testimony was to the effect that Williams was seen on the outside of the store early in the morning, one witness testifying that he heard him say to the man on the inside of the store, James Egan, "For God's sake come out of there, you will get in trouble; people are going by here all the time." Williams claims that he is a cook; that he met Egan up country and they came in on a freight train together; that they separated, and after an hour or so, as it got daylight, he came down town to see if he could strike a job at some of the restaurants; that in passing Mays & Crowe's store he saw Egan helping himself to the knives in front of the window, and that he spoke to him as the witness described, and that he had nothing to do with the robbery.

Egan, who pleaded guilty, corroborated Williams' testimony, and the jury's "recommendation to the mercy of the court" shows that some of them at least had doubts as to his guilt.

Dr. Wallace Under Oath.

Rev. George B. Wallace, of the First Congregational church, has been subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury, it is understood, to give evidence in regard to gambling and gambling houses. In his sermon on "Gambling in Portland and the Parties Responsible for It," delivered last Sunday, he stated that a gambler in prison said that District Attorney Hume had selected him out of a party of three or four for conviction, simply because he had fought Hume at the recent election. He also stated that he understood the gamblers pay $3,500 per month into the hands of a gambler named Williams, who turned the "pot" over to some one, who guarantees them protection. He also wanted to know if the district attorney or any other person has the right to make new laws to protect gamblers.

It is probable that Mr. Hume is desirous of procuring the authority for the alleged information possessed by Rev. Wallace in regard to gamblers and gambling, and to ascertain who the prisoner is who made such a grave charge against him. His object seems also to be to ascertain how much of the broad assertion made under the shelter of the pulpit can be substantiated on examination under oath.—Oregonian.

Court Notes.

The case of the State against Wm. Williams was on trial this morning, with H. H. Riddell for the defense.

James Egan was arraigned this morning to answer to the indictment against him charging him with stealing pocket knives from Mays & Crowe, and entered a plea of guilty. He will receive his sentence Friday.

In the case of Peter Godfrey against W. S. Myers and T. J. Driver, the default as against Driver was set aside and he was allowed to appear and answer.

The case of the Portland Savings Bank against P. T. Sharp and others was on trial before a jury yesterday afternoon. The jury brought in a sealed verdict giving plaintiff judgment for $80, attorney's fee, which was really the only matter in dispute.

The grand jury yesterday evening returned two true bills, one against James Egan, charging him with stealing and carrying away 140 pocket knives from Mays & Crowe's store, and the other against William Williams charging him with the same offense.

In publishing the list of bills allowed by the commissioners court last week, we made a slight mistake. The bills for witnesses before Justice Fligg in the Root case, about a dozen in number, were put over until next term for the reason that the law only allows eight witnesses. The commissioners were willing to pay all the law allowed, but as they did not know which ones to pay, the whole matter was returned to Justice Fligg for correction.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Wednesday

Mr. Henry Troh was in the city yesterday, coming from Canas Prairie.

DIED.

Near Nausens, Nov. 6th, 1894. Mrs. Mary A. Harris.

She was born in Marion county, Tennessee, in 1821 and came to Oregon in 1875. She lived a consistent member of the Free-will Baptist church for 57 years. Her husband survives her, and three sons and two daughters are left to mourn her loss.

Among the charitable societies in The Dalles, which are all doing a noble work, perhaps less is known of the efforts of the Women's Relief Corps than of the others, as their work is along a different line, though accomplishing the same ends. They are at present busily engaged in preparing a box of comforters, clothing, literature, etc., to be sent to the soldiers' home at Roseburg, and yesterday about sixteen members of the Corps met at Fraternity hall for the purpose of having an old-fashioned "quilting bee," only tarrying in their work long enough to enjoy a lunch at noon. The box is to be sent in care of Mr. Varney, which will no doubt reach its destination safely, unless the Salemites put an injunction on it as it passes.

Yesterday Dan Maloney and Frank Clarke got in an altercation, winding up with Maloney making a savage attack on Clarke and beating him badly. Clarke had a warrant issued for Maloney's arrest, but up to date it has not been served on account of his keeping out of the way of the officers. We do not know what the row started about but as we hear the story it does not redound to Maloney's credit. The trial of the case may bring out the full particulars of the affair, but at present no one seems to know anything concerning the matter, except that Maloney gave Clarke a cruel and brutal beating.

The grand jury last evening returned "not a true bill" after investigating the charge against Alvin Sigman of Dufur, who was accused of cattle stealing.

Three Misses Doe were arrested this morning at an early hour for disorderly conduct. They deposited $20 for their appearance, which now belongs to the city.

The grand jury this afternoon returned a true bill against Wm. Smith for stealing a horse, and another against James Hagan for larceny from a dwelling.

Jim Crate, Frank Heater and Charles Brewster were arrested this morning about 4 o'clock for disorderly conduct. Their examination takes place this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The ladies of the Methodist church will give a flower festival at Mrs. C. L. Phillips' next Tuesday afternoon and evening. There will be a short program. Admission 10 cents.

Wheat is bringing a better price here, without any apparent cause for it, as the price in Portland has not advanced at a corresponding ratio. The Wasco warehouse paid 35 cents today, and we are told 37 cents for a couple of choice lots.

The secretary of the treasury issued a call for $50,000,000 gold for which he desires to dispose of a new issue of government bonds. No upset price has been fixed, but it is thought they will realize nearly sixty millions.

In Skamania county the question of moving the county seat from Stevenson was voted upon, and by a vote of 136 against 104, Stevenson retains the county capital. It will be four years before the matter can come up again, and in that time Stevenson will be a thriving little city.

The Regulator will not be tied up, although that old chestnut of a rumor is again going the rounds. Owing to temporary interference with the portage road no large amounts of freight can be handled for a few days, but the boat will continue to run just the same.

Mr. Ed. Martin received a telegram this morning announcing the death of his brother Thomas Martin, at San Francisco yesterday morning, of heart disease. Mr. Martin resided in Oregon from 1880 to 1888, being in business in Portland most of that time, and was well known throughout the Northwest. Having been in the best of health his death was entirely unexpected.

Water was turned into the Bull Run pipe line at the head works at 10 a. m. Monday, at about half the full volume. As there was a considerable quantity of water already in the pipe, it was expected that the water would reach the Mt. Tabor reservoir last evening. An examination for leaks has been made along a portion of the line, and it is probable that a more critical examination will be made as soon as the full pressure is on, and all leaks found will be attended to before the water is allowed to run into the reservoir at full head.

The water through the Bull Run pipe line reached Portland this morning. It was turned into the sewer as the dirt and waste accumulated in the pipes in laying them was not wanted in the reservoir.

A somewhat curious incident lately happened at the power house of the Electric Light company in this city. Of course a large quantity of oil is used on the bearings of the powerful 250-horse power machinery. The wastage of oil, being run off, has by chance settled on top of the water in an old well, and it was discovered that about two barrels of this oil, after being filtered, could be used again on the machinery. In fact to a small extent, those in charge of the power house actually "struck oil."—La Grande Chronicle.

J. T. Bourk and O. D. Taylor have had a suit before Judge Stearns in Portland, the former suing the latter for $1,500 on a note, and the latter settling up that he paid the note by building a house for the plaintiff in North Dalles. Judge Stearns has the matter under advisement.

The motion for a new trial in the case of the estate against Wm. Williams was argued this morning and the motion overruled. Williams was then sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. Judge Bradshaw was strictly impartial, giving him the same sentence that Egan, his partner got.

Last night was the coldest of the season and when the sun came out this morning only the very hardiest vegetation had the hardihood to stand up and enjoy it. The chrysantheums are still smiling, but they are alone. The poplars have shed about all their leaves, and the first breath of a breeze will retire the balance.

Why does Butts look sad? The reason is plain. He had a prize turkey almost as large as any condor. It was the delight of his eye, both of them in fact, and he had often in gazing at his favorite bird let his thoughts wander to the bright Thanksgiving day, when he should absorb a portion of him. He will never see him more, for he was but is not for someone took him.
