LIFE OF A TRAINED NURSE. Many Duties Fall to the Lot of the Self-Sacrificing Women

The number of books, with their big, unpronounceable names which nurse in training have to study frighten away all rattlebrained applicants, leaving only the studious, determined and reliable, says Donahoe's Magazine. Heroines they are, every one of them who finishes the course, as anyone must see who has lived among them and watched them through each busy day, dressing wounds, bandaging and making bandages and rollers and linings of splints, cooking and serving delicacies, dressing the newly born and preparing the dead for burial and making the rounds with physicians and surgeons, from whom they receive their practical training. In addition to these few duties mentioned out of the thousand and one that will suggest themselves, they must attend lectures, recitations and demonstrations, and prepare for their own examinations, which in some schools occur each month, but generally every three months. Even from this brief showing, it will be seen the life of a trained nurse is a ceaselessly busy one, helpful and truly noble, but in no way a sine No one but the fairly educated and cultivated should enter the profession, since nurses should have these qualifications quite as much as the mechanical skill in order to render them agreeable to the class of people who commonly employ nurses. none but the patient and self-sacrificing need enter the profession expecting to rise to the rank of a Plorence Nightingale; at least, that is the conclusion of one who has lived with them, studied their life and profited by their training.

TALKING WATCHES.

An Ingenious Contrivance for Imitating

the flyman Voice. For many years there has been a demand for something in the way of a pocket timepiece that would indicate the hour by sound. A French watchmaker has invented a watch with a phonographic attachment, and instead of striking the hours the timepiece murmurs them in a gentle tone or chirps them in cricket-like sounds, but, in either case, clearly andible and unmistakable. The attachment is described as "a circular plate of vulcanized rubber with striated furrows, and a point resting upon the furrows and traversing its sinuosities." By an ingeniously devised system of irregularities in these depressions or furrows the tones are varied and made to produce such words as: "Ten o'clock," "Half-past one o'clock," and the like. Aiarmclocks with strong and piercing tones are to be made, and one may be shouted to with such orders as: "Get up!" or Here, you boys, get out of that, or it'll be the worse for you!" or similar emphatic orders. The next thing in order will be dials that will call out the hour when sick people may take their medicine, or when certain housebold duties may be performed. It is said to be possible accurately to reproduce a given voice, and that one may have the voices of individuals phonographed and they may be put away for future reference and as possible entos of those who have passed

HE WAS A SNEEZER.

The Man in the Car Who Cansed Joy to Three Foolish Girls. Three shabby girls and a shabby man got into a north-bound car at the post office the other day, and soon after the man sneezed. He and the girls were strangers to each other, but the sauciest of the three girls laughed when he sneezed. The man took no notice of her, but soon he seezed aguin and aguin, and then all three of the girls giggled, and so did the man. In the next three blocks the man succeed half a dozen times, and at each sneeze the sanciest of the girls said something and the others laughed. By this time the other passengers were interested, and everybody awaited the man's sneeze. He kept it up at intervals for the next half mile, and everybody in the car roared at each rplosion. New passengers got in to ad the whole car in convulsions. Staid persons tried first not to but when the man's face twitched as his sneeze hung fire and the sauciest girl cried: "Watch him go off," even they had to join in the fun. Passengers came and went, but the man and the three girls remained. Everybody came in sober and ment out laughing, and after the thing had been going on for three miles the pussengers who got in at the post office were in doubt whether the man and fever or was only an excellent facial contor-

WATER COOLED WITHOUT ICE.

The Weekly Chroniele.

Pueblo Indians Secure the Desired Result by Means of Evaporation.

Of course, everyone likes ice water.

It is an American habit, and, patriotically an American habits are ally speaking, all American habits are good. But if people only knew it, says the Washington Post, there are better ways of keeping water cool than put-ting ice in it. And the water that is cool without being cold is twice as cooling to the drinker, to say nothing of being several times as good for the Advertising rates reasonable, and made known stomuch into which it is put. One of the samplest ways of cooling water is by evaporation. The Pueblo Indian of our southwest, with his untutored The Daily and Weekly Chronicle may mind, discovered this fact hundreds of be found on sale at I. C. Nickelsen's store, years ago, and has been using the discovery in his quiet, unobtrusive way ever since, while we of the higher civilization have been buying ice, depleting our pockets and spoiling our diges tion at the same time. The Pueblo Indians never discovered the art of glazing pottery, and the result is that all their earthenware is more or less porous, and when filled with water absorbs it sponge-like, keeping the outside always moist. This moisture evaporating cools the vessel and the water it contains, just us one can feel the coolness that comes from a breeze on the body when wet with perspiration. In the dry air of the southwest, where the Pueblo Indian finds his home, this evaporation is very great, and the result is that the pottery ollas are used by whites, Indians and Mexi-cans alike to hold cool drinking water.

Anyone who has traveled through the southwest cannot fail to recollect the old brownish buff-colored olla with its curious Indian decorations in conventionalized pictures of birds, beasts and fish that were sure to be found in the fork of a dry cottonwood branch standing just inside the door with a yellow calabash, or if, in a very modern ouse, a tin cup hanging from a nail on the door jamb. And water from it after a long, dusty ride in the boiling sun tasted many times better than the coldest ice cream soda he ever paid ten cents for in the states. It may have been what Col. Tom Ochiltree terms the large, elegant thirst that added to the supposed virtues of the olla as a water cooler, but the scientists of the National Museum will tell you that the cooling qualities of the porous pottery are quite as real as imaginary. In the better class of Mexican houses the chipped and battered olls in its picturesque rustic support will usually be replaced by a more daintily ornamented. earthen one shaped like an army canteen, suspended by a gray Mexican searf in the draught of a window, or a highly ornate bowl of a couple of gallong enpacity, swung in the same way in a netting of twisted yucca fibers. But the cooling principle is always the

WATCHING A GROUSE DRUM.

The Noise Said to Be Made by the Wings

Against the Body. Early in October 1 had the only opportunity which has ever present itself in my twenty years of experience in forest and field of studying the method employed by the cock partridge in producing that peculiar sound known among sportsmen as drumming. says a writer in Forest and Stream. was out with my gun looking for quall quite early in the morning and was working toward a small wooded swamp, where I knew the birds found infe shelter at roosting time, as well as from the gun when flushed by dog, for no hunter, no matter how ardent. would have the temerity to brave the sucis-holes and wild brier vines. Henring the call of a quail, I stopped to listen and locate him positively. I stood facing a stone wall, distant about oix rods, on each side of which grew hazel bushes. Suddenly out of those on the opposite side sprang a fine old wall directly in front of me, tail leign, Deceased. spread, ruff standing out and crest raised-the picture of alertness. What a chance for an artist. I hardly Between us was a small breathed. alder bush, tall and slim. This was the only shelter, yet the bird did not seem to notice me, for after standing a moment he began preening himself, eming to enjoy the rays of the sun. which shone warm and bright. I stood and writched him thus for probably ten minutes, and was considering whether to let him go altogether or flush and try a shot, when he stopped, shook himself, atretched one wing and leg. Then the other took a best around and the other took a best around a safety of the store the other took a best around the other took around the other took at the other took around the other then the other, took a look around and. slightly raising his feathers, as a setting hen when disturbed raised his wings a little above a horizontal line body. increasing the time until it ended in a flutter, as it seemed. This I watched him repeat; the third time I moved slightly; he spotted me and moved also. I am perfectly satisfied moved also. I am perfectly satisfied on one point, however, that the mysterious noise, as some term it, is produced by striking the wings against the body. As many will admit, who have had the opportunity to observe, the sound is more pronounced and distinct at a distance than very near it, where it has a muffled, fluttering sound. Many theories are advanced on the subject, among them one to the effect that the bird stands on a hollow log and strikes it with his wings, thus producing the sound from the log.

Buried in Teeth.

A dentist died in a rural town in England recently, after spending over fifty years in pulling the molars of his fellow citizens. He had made it a hobby to keep all the teeth which he had drawn in the course of his professional career, and took great pride in the col-When his will was opened it was found that he had ordered the collection of teeth to be placed with him in his coulin for burial. His heirs fulin his coffin for burial. His heirs fulfilled his command, and almost thirty thousand teeth were put into the coffin with the dead dentist. If some archeologist of the future century shall happen to open that grave, he will have "food for thought" and some difficulty, perhaps, in explaining the presence of so many teeth.

A Racking Cough

Cured by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Mrs. P. D. Hall, 217 Genessee St., Lockport, N. Y., says:

"Over thirty years ago, I remember hearing my father describe the wonderful curative effects of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. During a recent attack of La Grippe, which assumed the form of a catarrh, soroness of the lungs, accompanied by an aggravating cough, I used various remedies and prescriptions. While some of these medicines partially allevisted the cougling during the day, none of them afforded me any pelist from that spasmodic action of the lungs which would seize me the moment I attempted to lie down at night. After ten or twelve such nights, I was

Nearly in Despair, and had about decided to sit up all night in my easy chair, and procure what sleep I could in that way. It then occurred to me that I had a buttle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I took a spoonful of this preparation in a little water, and was able to be down without coughing. In a few moments, I fell nalsep, and amobe in the morning greatly refreshed one feeling much better. I took at as resided of the Pertoral every night for a week, then gradnally decreased the dose, and in two weeks my cough was cured."
