AN EVIDENCE OF GENIUS.

the Americans acknowledged no limit to its powers, and gave a specimen of its latest efforts in opening graves and stealing the coffins which were resold. At the same time another case crops up, it being that of a Mrs. Geisicker, whose husband died some time ago and whose body was cremated. In the course of time the widow became fluancially embarrassed and applied to a friend, a Mrs. Beisner, for a loan of $25. Mrs. Beisner was strictly business and demanded security, but Mrs. Geisicker was short of securities as she was of money. She was a thritty woman, however, and the the inculcating of shifty ideas. Mrs. Gesicker therefore offered to deposit with Mrs. Beisner the little box containing the ashes of the late lamented Mr. Geisicker, to be held in trust until the $25 was forthcoming. This was acceded to and the remains were handed over to EDITOR CHROSICIE. the money lender to hold until the sum was returned. Whether a cold mercenary idea struck Mrs. Gelsicker that she had let the ashes go too cheap, or whether her conscience troubled her for having the old man's remnants in soak issued and Mrs. Beisner was arrested. The judge was somewhat puzzled but advised Mrs. Beisner to return the hasremedy by a suit at law to recover the
