FUN WITH A SEA TURTLE. An Experience That Netted Some Profit

to the Old Sea Captain.
"I am reminded," said an old coast ing captain to a Washington Star man recently, "of an experience I once had with sea turtles on the edge of the gulf stream, about sixty miles from Hatteras. I was part owner and captain of the Mary Lyle at that time, and was coming up from Savannah with a half cargo of rice, when, one morning, the lookout yelled to me to come up on deck and look at the sea turtles. When I got up and looked over the rail, the whole ocean, as far as I could see ahead of us, was covered with turtles. They were tremendous fellows, and were paddling along lazily in the opposite direction to that in which we were going. It didn't take us long to rig up a windlass and tackle and begin pulling some of the old fellows aboard We picked the biggest, as the came, and in the course of three hours we had caught twenty-six, about all that we could handily dispose of about the ship. Only nine of them lived until we reached New York, and we sold them for good prices. The shell of one that weighed four hundred and seventy pounds is now in front of an eating house on Houston street, New York. I would hate to say how many turtles were in sight of the Mary Lyle that day, for fear somebody might think I was fish-yarning, but they came by us steadily for five hours, and when we got well into the school it extended as 'far as the eye could reach on all sides, and there was a turtle to about every forty square feet of water, and I didn't see one that weighed less than one hundred and fifty pounds."

DEADLIEST KNOWN POISON. Shophanthidin, from an African Plant. an Atom of Which Is Dangerous.

To the best of our knowledge, says the Brooklyn Eagle, the most deadly poison is that which was discovered by Prof. Frazer, of Edinburgh, Scotland, and known as shophanthidin. He separated it from the African poison plant, shophanthus hispidus, by means of ether and alcohol. As little as a onethousand-millionth part of an ounce of erystallized shophanthidin produces a distinctly injurious effect upon the heart, and a very small quantity is fatal. Another deadly poison is cyanogen gas, the principal ingredients of hydrocyanic or prussic acid.

At ordinary temperatures it is simply a gas, but can be condensed by cold and pressure into a thin, colorless liquid and becomes a solid at thirty degrees Fahrenheit. The inhalation in its gaseous state of a most minute quantity would cause instant death.

Frenchmen of the old school did attimes tremendously polite things, such vine at Hampton Court palace is esas breaking their necks to pick up a lady's fan, or setting fire to a house to dry her when caught in a shower of rain, or running through the body anyone who should dare to say that her foot was large or her nose red. In our days Frenchmen are not such idiots, and yet they sometimes do exceedingly foolish things in the polite line. This story, for example, is related of a Count de Leconiteux.

In descending the staircase of the opera one night a lady of his acquaintance had a lace dress of considerable value torn by a man treading on it.

After an exclamation of impatience "Have you a pin?" "Madame," he said, "I don't carry a pincushion, but here is one," and he drew from his breast a valuable diamond. "Sir," said the lady, nettled probably by his retort about the pincushion, "I cannot accept a diamond from you." "Well, then," so that now the vine and its main stems returned he, "here is a pin without a diamond;" and breaking off the jewel he threw it out of the window and presented the simple pin.

On an Indian Hunting Tour. The most exciting and by far the most interesting hunting expeditions I ever went on, said Capt. M. P. Wallace, an ex-army officer, to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "were those with the Indians while I was stationed on the plains. The consummate grace and skill of the men and the speed and agility of their ponies were well dis-played on such occasions as these. Frequently the hunt would be signalized by some daring feat of bravado. On one occasion I saw an athletic young Indian ride his horse up close to the side of a big buffalo bull and spring from the horse on to the back of the buffalo, ride the savage creature several hundred yards, and then with his knife give it its death stroke."

Lived a Lifetime in Twelve Years.

The most remarkable instance of rapid growth was recorded by the French academy in 1729. It was a boy six years of age, five feet six inches in height. At the age of five his voice changed, at six his beard had grown, and he appeared a man of thirty. He possessed great physical strength, and could easily lift to his shoulders and carry bags of grain that weighed two hundred pounds. His decline was as rapid as his growth. At eight his hair, and beard were gray; at ten he tottered in his walk, his teeth fell out and his hands became palsied; at twelve he died with every outward sign of extreme old age.

LAND O' DROUTHIE CRONIES.

Convivial Caledonia's Curious Inns and Hotels and Some Facts About Them. Robert Kempt has gathered together nany interesting historical items and quaint anecdotes about the inns and must be confessed the historical side begins very late, for in olden days inns were practically unknown over the border, travelers being received in private houses as guests. Consequently there is no record of such ancient London hostelries as the Tabard, in Southwark; the Mermaid, in Bread street, or the Blue Boar, in Eastcheap. When Defoe went to Scotland he had difficulty in finding an inn at Aberdeen, and this in spite of a royal edict issued by James I. in 1424, to the effect that in all borough towns where there was considerable traffic, hostelries should be established, but these institutions did not flourish till very much later. Mr. Kempt gives some amusing information as to the pains and penalties enacted in the fifteenth and seventeenth centuries regarding the hours of closing, drunkenness, etc. The inns of Aberdeen are accorded a whole chapter, for there is much to say about those of the last century. They practically formed open clubs for the wits and learned men of the hospitable city. Over very modest repasts and potations, grand symposia were held; the philosophers lived low, but thought and spoke

Dr. Johnson seems to have appreciated the Aberdeen inns; he found them almost as congenial as his haunts in Fleet street, and certainly far better than the Scottish houses of entertainment. Among other interesting items of information Mr. Kempt points out that whisky is a comparatively modern beverage, and that in olden days claret was almost as much drank as ale. The regent Albany is supposed to have made claret popular. In 1480 red Gascony wine sold in Aberdeen at sixpence a pint, and later on claret and port wine could be had at eighteenpence a bottle. Indeed claret and port in those early days could be procured cheaper in Scotland than most parts of England. In the cities and country side are many inns with historical interests attached to them. In the Invercauld Arms hotel, Braemar, is the stone on which the standard of Mar was raised in 1745, the beginning of Prince Charlie's wild escapade. Other inns are associated with-names venerated in Scottish history and literature. There are many inns in the Highlands closely connected with Burns, the Ettrick Shepherd, Sir Walter Scott and other kindred giants of old. Scott mentions that it used to

While in the public mind the great teemed the most remarkable, even that is excelled in dimensions by the still greater vine at Cumberland lodge, Windsor Park, says the London Daily News. Not only these giants, but Caleb Brooks, Plaintiff, probably all other vines in the kingdom, have to give place for extent and productiveness to that most remarkable vine which is just at the present moment carrying the enormous quantity of ight hundred and fifty-two bunches and a total weight materially exceeding half a ton.

This is growing at Manresa house, Rochampton, in a vinery two hundred and twenty-four feet long by eleven she turned to the count and said: feet wide. The vine was planted by the present gardener, Mr. Davis, as a cutting, onto a wall outside more than stand partly across the house, just twothirds up its length. There are seven main rods or branches running horizontally each way. These are allowed to carry laterals, or fruiting shoots, on the upper sides only, so that the grapes, now fast becoming black (for the varicty is the black Hamburg), hang the entire length of the roof in straight, even lines, instead of up the roof, as is commonly the case. Over two thousand bunches were cut after they had set. The value of the crop, estimated at two shillings per pound-which is, as good grapes go, perhaps not a high figure - would be one hundred and twelve pounds sterling. Probably no other tree of any kind in the kingdom could produce such a sum in fruit an-

Where Was He Brought Up?

Who says there is no American language? Harper's Magazine gives the following story as evidence that in some portions of our land a tongue is spoken that is distinctively our own. Prof. F., of Harvard, tells the tale. He was at a picnic, and after the affair was well under way a carpenter, a sturdy New Englander, appeared on the scene with several planks, out of which he proceeded to construct the dinner-tables. Noting the thickness of dinner-tables. Noting the thickness of the planks, the professor chaffingly inquired why it was necessary to use such heavy timber. "Why?" returned the carpenter. "Why, in order that not when dinner's half eat tables might squash and victuals leave us." It was some hours before the professor was able to translate this satisfactorily, but he finally discovered that it could be done.
