ENOUGH OF EXPERIMENTS.

United States senator to succeed Senator Dolph over shadows in importance all other matters at present because it that question is settled no business of islature. Under common circumstances sturdy democrats. it would not matter so much what par-Tongue, and of dozens of other of Ore that the retirement of Senator Dolph, which must take place some time would not be a severe blow to the state or the of men. It is a question of measures. Behind the candidates are the principles they represent, and it is for the legislature to choose not men but principles.

a sound national financial system, for a that every dollar in circulation, whether of gold, silver or paper, has been as good as every other dollar. This system, Mr. Fulton, and those who believe as he does are determined to change. They tell us that with silver given free coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1, the country will be more prosperous, money will be more plentiful, the financial conditions will be greatly improved, values will be increased, and in fact, that the free coinage of silver will prove the great panacea for all the ills the country has been suffering. They tell us all these things, but however honest they may be in that belief, can we believe them? As far as this country is concerned the matter would be an experiment-nothing more. The country has been trying one experiment, one that we were told would bring prosperity, that would set th wheels of industry whirling, the factory chimneys smoking; "the tin bucket brigade" was to be happy, employed and contented, the farmer was to receive larger prices and a condition of affairs was to be brought about that would be little short of the millenium. We were told that all these things would follow the change of the tariff laws, and we were told so by people who were just as sincere, just as brainy, and just as certain, as those who make such positive assertions concerning the incalculable benefits that are to follow the change of the coinage laws. We know how that experiment worked. The wheels of industry somehow did not whirl, the factory chimneys did not smoke, "the tin bucket brigade" was not employed, and in fact the tariff experiment worked in an exactly opposite manner from that marked out for it. That experiment, and its results we have still with us. Do we require another just now?

Then there is another side to the mat ter. Grant, for the sake of argument, that Mr. Fulton is the peer of Senator Dolph in every way, which think you can best serve the interest of the state just now? Senator Dolph as chairman of the river and harbor committee, a position Mr. Fulton could not hope to obtain next term if elected, is in a position to accomplish great good for the state. The opening of the Columbia, a matter of vital importance to Eastern Oregon, Washington and Idaho, will receive a set-back that will require years to regain if Oregon's senator no longer holds a position on that committee. To us it seems that the state will receive a deadly blow if Senator Dolph is retired. We care not whether Mr. Dolph is an iceberg or a glacier, for we look beyond the man to the principle he represents, and we feel certain that a political iceberg is as safe as a political volcano, especially when that volcano is in as active a state of eruption as it seems to be at Salem just now.

THE KIND OF MAN WANTED.

Senator R. C. Bell, at a Jackson banquet in Indianapolis on the evening of the 8th, delivered a short address to his democratic brethren on the subject "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" He paid his respects to President Cleveland in the following language:

"At all events we should have a candidate for this high office who will be in sympathetic touch with the great masses of our entire country-North, South, East and West-a man who does not draw his inspiration almost wholly from capitalistic circles or centers, and who is not so impregnated with their selfish and provincial ideas as to be almost non-receptive and impervious to all others; a man who is wholly free The legislature has been organized, its officers elected in both houses and busifrom all suspicions of being in any way ness has commenced. "We want a man who before his midticular man represented Oregon in the life has crossed the summit of that Apsenate. Mr. Fulton is a man in the palachian range with steps and face prime of life, of large abilities, talented, turned toward the setting sun; we want strong in body and mind, and would be a man who is at least as much at home an honor to his party and the state. on our boundless prairies and broad The same might be said, (though in our grain fields as on the steam yacht of an opinion in a lesser degree) of Thomas Eastern millionaire; a man who is not out of the reach or influence of his own gon's bright and brainy men. # A PIONEER GONE.

Ex-Governor Chadwick died at Salem Tuesday evening of heart failure. He was at the time in apparently the best of health and was at the dinner table when the summons came. He was born in Middletown, Connecticut, Dec. 25, 1825. and came to the Pacific coast in 1857, Ex-Gov. Moody coming in the same ship. He was member of the constitutional convention and has been prominently identified with the political history of Oregon for nearly forty years.

Senator Brownell has introduced bill amending the act creating the railroad commission and abolishing said commission. As populists, democrats and republicans each had a plank in the platform demanding the abolishing of this famous commission, it looks as though it ought to abolish. The commissioners individually are each very pleasant gentlemen, and it is to be regretted that they will be out of a job, but at the same time $15,000 a year is a whole wad of money.

The Portland sun yesterday contained the pictures of Governor Lord, State Treasurer Metschan, Secretary of State Kincaid, Attorney General Idleman, State Printer Leeds and Superintendent of Public Instruction Irwin. The thing that makes this fact worthy of notice is that unlike the usual newspaper picture, the influence of the gentle chinook and thereon by the county court of Wasco these are all remarkably good. As to who pretty well satisfied. Without mentioning names it will be sufficient to say that it bears on its face the ear marks of a gigantic job, for the purpose of getting hold of the 200,000 acres of school land contained in the reservation, or rather the lieu lands the state would be allowed to select in place of them. Had the scheme worked, the originators thereof would have selected the 200,000 regardless of its value for $1.25 per acre. That scheme did not work for the reason that a governor, who however cranky he may have been thought, was honest and wide awake to the interests of the people. | you have already published. Governor Pennoyer steadily refused to allow these lands to be selected until the legislature should meet, in order that the price of these lands could be placed at 2.50 per acre, thus eventually putting $500,000 into the permanent school fund, instead of putting $250,000 therein, and the other $250,000 into the pockets of the speculators. As to what the government will do with it, it is not vouchsafed to humanity to know. The government had no use for it, the state had no use for it, the people had no use for it, and did not want it, and now that it is created even its creators have no use for it. The government has not interest enough in it to attempt any supervision of it or care for it. We know of no possible use it can be put to unless, indeed, it be put up as a bonus for some railroad, and so letting the fittle go with the large, the hide with the horns, and the tail thrown in, the whole public domain be turned over to the railroad corporations. That strike can be settled, and settled right in two hours.

Governor Pennoyer delivered his final message yesterday and soon after, Governor-elect Lord took the oath of office and became governor of Oregon. He at once proceeded to read his inaugural address, at the close of which the joint session dissolved. It is not often that Pennoyer and Lord address an Oregon legisnoyer and Lord address an Oregon legis-lature on the same day. Indeed it has TT Nicholas, board Indian paubeen heretofore considered that the latter was an unknown quantity about the statehouse.

There was something the matter with the Portland Sun's stereotyping machinery this morning, and the result would be ludicrous if it were not that it is gruesome. The second batch of pictures, on the third page show that nearly every member there represented was a scrofulous, scorbutical fellow, and looked like the cuts in a quack advertisement. We take back what we said about that Orey gonian cut of Senator Dolph recently, and swear we never said it.
