It commenced snowing heae about noon, and has kept it up steadily all afternoon. At Bridal Veil there is a strong down-stream wind, and if there is much of a snow fall there another blockade may be possible. The Oregonian today says that this storm is general all over the Pacific coast, from Mexico to Alaska.

Tnursday's Daily

Four drunks up before the city recorder this morning, and received the usual fine, which of course, they did not pay.

Do not forget that all county warrants are made payable to order now, and that to transfer them they must be indorsed.

The French troupe gave their last perwill probably be some time before they stop here again.

There will be preaching in the Christian church Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. by Elder J. W. Jenkins. All are Fayne, F R Graham, W S cordially invited to attend.

Owing to the continuation of the protracted meeting in the M. E. church at Russell, Mrs A Dufur, Elder J. W. Jenkins will not Thomas, Wm Wand, Geo preach there Saturday and Sunday as announced.

The Regulator is having an overhauling, and is found in good condition. The bulkheads are being repaired and caulked, so that, even should she knock a hole in her, she will not sink.

Owing to the commissioners' journal being in use all day by the county clerk, who is making out the warrants from the same, it was impossible to get the remaining bills for publication today.

Noting the effort being made to establish a wool scouring plant here the East Oregonian says: "The people of The Dalles are becoming thoroughly alive to the advantages of having a wool scouring mill at that place. Pendleton is greatly the gainer from the presence here of one Oregon."

The Tax Levy.

The county commissioners made the tax levy today as follows: State, 3 mills, purposes, 12 mills, county road purposes, 1 mill; total state and county, 21 mills. Of the levy for county purposes the onetwentieth of one mill will go to the G. A. R. relief fund. It will be seen that the tax rate is the same as last year, but as the assessments are reduced from fifteen to twenty per cent, the rate as compared to last year, is quite a reduction.
