The grand jury today returned not a Broadbent. The charge against him was adultery, and as his wife refused to appear against him, under the peculiar laws of the state, the prosecution had to be dropped. Before discharging the prisoner Judge Bradshaw gave him quite a lecture which, if heeded, will be of lasting benefit to the defendant. Among other things he called his attention to the fact that wifely forbearance under certain conditions ceased to be a virtue, and warned him against again being forced to rely on it for his liberty. WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8, 1895. men can give good advice, but the wisest of men cannot compel the acceptance of their advice. Ex-Speaker Reed's substitute for the Cleveland gold bond bill, which declarations of senators made an impossibility before it was voted upon by the house, proves the truth of this statement. Mr. Reed's bill would, if enacted into a law, provide the government with means to raise the gold reserve fund to its proper amount, and by providing the secretary of the treasury with money to meet deficiencies in the revenues of the government until such time as the revenues of the government should exceed the expenditures, would keep the gold reserve intact. a new violinist tomorrow (Saturday) Here is Mr. Reed's statement of the situation: "We were redeeming greenbacks when they were presented. If deemed it would stay in the treasury, and this notwithstanding the fact the secretary is authorized to re-issue; for it is not either the authorization or even the demand of the law that they shall be re-issued that causes the trouble. It is the fact that they are re-issued. It is the fact that their re-issuance causes this continued depletion of the treasury."

"Much ado about nothing" is about the only correct title to apply to the some dark leaden-colored banks of financial debate and the votes taken this week in the house, Every man of of us. From all indications we are even average intelligence knew beforehand that it made not the slightest difference what the house did or what it failed to do, as far as the accomplishment of any financial legislation was concerned. They knew that Mr. Cleveland had all his arrangements made for another bond issue, and that it would be made. About the only result of the debate in the house was that it enabled some of the outgoing democrats to put in a strong claim for presidential appointment to office.

The Fruit Men.

Mr. Emil Schanno has just returned from Portland where he has been attending the meeting of the State Board of Horticulture. He was highly pleased with his visit, and says that the only counties that had any fruit exhibit worth mentioning were Wasco and Union, and that the former, owing largely to the interest that Hood River took in the matter and her contributions, was the better. Mr. Schanno is an active member of the board, and insists that the money now appropriated for the use of the board is and time of sentence fixed for Friday at sufficient. He says with considerable 9 a. m. foresight, that if the money set apart for the horticultural board is increased in amount, the office will become a political one for the reward of political workers. and will be filled by persons who know no more about fruit than the railroad commissioners do about railroads, and who will be after the place simply for the money in it.
