A Case of Smallpox.

S. Monahan, a stockman, arrived here from Arkansas Thursday, and took a room at the Obarr lodging house. Friday night he was taken sick and Saturday until there was little doubt but that the nature of the case was suspected, vigorous steps were at once taken to quarantine the house, and those who were unfortunate enough to be found in the house were compelled to stay there, and were vaccinated at once. The old pest house having fallen into decay, it was decided to keep the patient where he was found, which has been done. Dr. Geisendorfer of Arlington, this morning, in consultation with Dr. Hollister agreed with him that the case was one of smallpox.

The Maskers Enjoying the Music and the Spectators Enjoying the Maskers and Mirth.

The masquerade given last night by the Woodmen was the affair of the season, the only thing detracting from the enjoyment of the occasion being the fact that the walls of the building were not far enough from each other to hold the crowd comfortably. Chairs had been provided, and between 300 and 400 spectators were ranged around the hall, and enjoyed thoroughly the motley asthe city, and with it much unreasoning semblage that paraded before them. There were eighty-five maskers, and some of the costumes were very fine.

while of course some relied upon touchwas awarded the prize for the handsomest costume, and it was handsome too. Mrs. Lorenson as a Spanish fisherwoman captured the prize for best sustained character. Mr. J. R. McAvoy got the first prize for best dressed gentleman, representing a Spanish cavalier, and Sam Thurman, as an Esquiman, with the assistance of Register Moore's big dog and a sled, was decided to be the best sustained character. These were the prize-winners. Of the others dainty little fairies, a beautiful "starry night for a ramble," a belle "sleighbells." 'Miss Lena Neilsen represented THE CHRONICLE, being dressed, even to the hat, in that family paper, which for once, at least, was filled with the most interesting matter. Ernest Drew, as a monkey, made a close call for the prize, as he sustained the character exceedingly well. The two big cigars made the reporter want to go out and smoke, even though they were made of cloth wrappers and Dalles "fillers," J. Ullrich being inside of one and J. McNeal the other. #### The Caucus.

The Oregonian this morning, after giving an account of the regular republican caucus and Senator Dolph's speech thereat, finishes its report of the caucus as follows:

"After the senator's speech, it was decided that a committee of three be appointed to confer and recommend a plan of action, and Senator Gesner, Representative Smith of Josephine and Speaker Moores were appointed. They retired for some minutes, and after conferring together, and afterward with Senator Dolph, returned to the meeting. Their report was to the effect that Senator Dolph could be elected tomorrow if his support would remain intact. After a general discussion on the subject, including some long-winded speeches, a ballot was taken as to whether Dolph should be voted for again tomorrow. Upon this there were thirteen votes against such action and seventeen votes in favor. Then, the hour being late, and only thirty members being present, and the house members being tired with the long night session, the meeting adjourned till 8;30 tomorrow morning."

Would All Want the Onion.

A Pendleton gentleman visiting in the Willamette valley sends the following, avs the Tribune:

"Society is always on the alert for some thing new and novel. A new game called the 'onion social' has made its appearance and is growing into the favor of the young people. This is how it is played: Six young ladies stand in a row; one of them bites a piece out of an guess who bit it. The correct guessers kiss the other five girls, while the unsuccessful kiss the lass who bit the onion. People who don't believe in card playing ought to enjoy this game."

five would guess wrong where one guessed who bit the onion would get five kisses to the other girls' one. This would come first time the game was played, for every girl would want to bite the onion.

The middle Columbia is just now furnishing a large amount of sturgeon for the Eastern markets. This once despised shark is now selling at three or onion, and the gentlemen pay 10 cents to four times as much per pound as the once royal, but now deposed, chinook.
