THE CANAL AND LOCKS.

The Post, published at Washington, in its issue of the 14th inst. has the following concerning the Cascade canal and locks:

"The people of Oregon are in high spirits over the approaching completion of the Cascades on the Columbia river, which will open that stream to navigation," said Mr. I. N. Day to a Post reporter at the Ebbitt. Mr. Day is quite a young man of the hustling, enterprising Western type, and is one of the firm that secured the contract for completing the enterprise referred to by him.

"It is a work of vast magnitude," he said, "and means more to the inhabitants of Eastern Oregon than can be well understood in this part of the country. The construction of the locks and canal involves a total expenditure of $3,500,000, the canal to be 3000 feet long, with locks and lift of twenty-four feet. Four massive gates are provided for, measuring 55 feet in height by 94 feet in width, being the largest lock gates in the world. One thousand men are employed in the enterprise, which is carried on principally in the fall and winter, as the work is annually submerged by the June floods remaining in that condition for about five months of the year. When the canal is finished it will give a navigable water-way from The Dalles to the Pacific ocean, a distance of 200 miles.

"There are millions of acres of idle lands in the eastern part of the state, fertile and productive and capable of supporting a dense population. That section is alluded to in our country as the 'Inland Empire,' and it has hitherto remained in an undeveloped state chiefly from lack of transportation facilities. The opening up of the Columbia river by the construction of this canal will bring about a change of conditions that cannot fail to benefit this naturally favored territory. The climate is mild and equable, the summers not excessively hot, and the winters much milder than on the Atlantic coast. The scheme for developing this country originated with Senator Mitchell away back in '75. At that time he was attorney for Ben Holladay, the then great transportation king of the Northwest, who had committed himself to the support of Mitchell for United States senator. Subsequently Holladay was seized with senatorial aspirations himself, forgetful of his promise to Mitchell. The latter, nevertheless, walked off with the honors and shortly after his election had a brief and spirited interview with his former friend.

"Holladay sneeringly said: 'You think you are a pretty big man now, Mitchell, but what are you going to do for the people of Oregon when you get to Washington?'" "Still smarting under the sense of injury, Mitchell answered: 'One of the first things I shall strive to accomplish will be the building of a canal around the Cascades and give the people of inland Oregon the benefit of competing transportation rates against your railroads.'

"The senator never forgot that declaration, and I think by January 1, 1896, his constituents will see a consummation of his long-cherished plan."

DON'T REALIZE THEIR POSITION

The most amusing thing about the Chinese situation is the self-satisfied manner of the Chinese officials, and the confident manner in which they declare that Japan cannot do this, or cannot do that. They seemed utterly oblivious of the self-evident fact that Japan has their country at its mercy and can dictate the terms of peace. The latest statement is from Prince King who is credited with the following:

"He questioned very seriously whether Japan could claim possession of the territory she had conquered together with 400,000,000 taels indemnity. 'China,' he said, 'stands upon principle, and Japan upon power. If Japan will meet her in a friendly spirit, the conclusion of peace will be possible. If her demands are exorbitant China will continue the fight.' He added he did not think Japan could overrun all the Chinese provinces, even if the war was continued."

Now that the senatorial question has been settled by the election of Hon. Geo. W. McBride, the people will feel grateful indeed if they are given a rest. They need it, and they have waited patiently for it for these forty days; but the aftermath is worse than the affliction. The Portland Sun is mapping out a course of conduct for the new senator, which, it is perhaps unnecessary to state, has silver trimmings all over it. Its dictation in that line is already making an already-tired public weary. The Oregonian, on the other hand, is insisting that McBride will "stand by the platform," and therefore recognize all money as being equally good, provided it is based on gold. We suggest that Senator McBride be given time to recover from the sudden shock to his nerves his election must have given him, and that the public be given a rest. We have McBride, and McBride has the office; therefore we all have the office. Now then, let us give him time to pull himself together, and as for us newspaper fiends, let us talk about something good to eat, wrestle with spring poetry, decimate the early fish story, and cheerfully vie in seeing which community can produce the biggest egg or the earliest berries. The senatorial matter has lost its savor. Let the flavor of the plum, now that it is picked, be sufficient unto itself. Let's all take a rest.

SOME OF THE OTHER SIDE.

The battle at Salem is over, and won or lost, according to the position from which it is contemplated. It is perhaps as well to let it pass into the quiet sleep of oblivion; but there are some assertions made that cannot be sustained by the facts. One of these is that the anti-Dolph legislators blocked legislation and prevented many economic measures being adopted. In so far as maintaining one side of the dispute is concerned, that may be true, but if true, is true of both sides. Let us take an example: The senate consisted of nineteen republicans, eight democrats and three populists. Of the nineteen republicans, three were against Dolph and sixteen, a clear majority of the entire senate, and enough to pass any bill, were for Dolph, yet the business of the senate was no better conducted than that of the house. When the appropriation bill was passed by the house, the $20,000 item for paying the railroad commissioners was struck out. In the senate that action, which was certainly in the interest of economy, was repudiated and the amount was put back in the bill by the senate, with its sixteen solid Dolph members. Who blocked that effort at economy?

Another statement, that the Dolph men elected McBride, is not any more fully borne out by the facts. That he was nominated by Cleeton, a Dolph man, is true, but when the vote was taken, those who were opposed to Dolph voted for McBride, to a man. So that when the election was accomplished, it was by a vote of thirty anti-Dolph men and seventeen of that gentleman's supporters.

It is useless to stir the matter up. It is settled, and we hope for the best. Recriminations and disputes are not going to assist in healing the sore spots, and the sooner the whole question is dropped, the better. Each side can find lots of things to kick about, and they are creditable to neither.

IT ADJOURNS MONDAY.

Congress is down to its work in great shape just now; but outside of the appropriation and deficiency bills, little will be accomplished. Next Monday the session will expire, and the democrats will step down and out; it is hoped to remain out for an indefinite time. We can cheerfully say, without mental reservation, and not being prompted by malice, prejudice or ill-will toward the soon to be late and sadly lamented democratic congress, that its like never before met in legislative meditation. It failed to do anything that it promised to do, and it did many things that it should not have done. It found the country prosperous, and it leaves it with its business stagnant and its industries sadly crippled. It has saddled an interest-bearing debt of many millions on the people. It has reduced the revenues of the government to a point that will cause still farther indebtedness, and it has violated every pledge made by the party by which it was placed in power. Every true democrat is ashamed of it, and every republican regretfully sorry that the pitiful puny microbes of desolation were ever allowed to inoculate the nation's capital with the seeds of dampholiness.

However, it dies Monday, and as it already smells to heaven, it will be buried deep, and while never forgotten, will be remembered only as a national disgrace.

It is said that Governor Lord holds that the legislature having failed to elect railroad commissioners he has the right to appoint the successors to the present board. While we are unalterably opposed to commissions in general and railroad commissions in particular, we know of no reason why the present board should be superseded. They are all clever gentlemen, and can and will do all the work required of them as well as any one. If the commission is to be kept the present commissioners might as well be kept too. They know what is required by reason of their salary sitting them, and should be let alone.

MORE THAN SLATTERLY.

Savannah, Georgia, has been having a riot that only the utmost forbearance on the part of the militia prevented culminating in bloodshed. It was caused by a man named Slatterly, who claims to have been a Catholic priest, and his wife, who, it seems, pretends to have been a nun, delivering a lecture in which they pretend to expose the secrets of the priesthood and of the convent. Naturally the Catholics of that city were indignant, and unfortunately they let their indignation lead them into an attempt to prevent Slatterly or his wife lecturing. Had they looked at the matter coolly, they would have realized that the attacks of such a Slatterly on religion of any form cannot hurt it. According to Slatterly's statement, he is a man who has violated his solemn promises to the church, and his wife is a woman who violated her vows to God, and forsook Him to cling to a traitorous servant. Who then would believe them? Such people serve to amuse the idle and spumy-minded, but what reasoning man heeds them? Ingersoll attacks all religion, yet we admire his graceful diction and the beauty of the sentiment that he sometimes expresses, while we smile at his premises, laugh at his logic, and recognize at a glance the futility of his conclusions.

Our Catholic brethren should simply ignore Slatterly and such as he, for, like steam, he only becomes powerful when confined. Resistance to such as he but supplies the fulcrum for his lever and furnishes the friction that enables him to move. Slatterly, a renegade to his church, cannot harm that church by anything he may do, unless he again joins it. He is powerless for harm only when by such actions as those in Savannah those fighting him make the foolish think he and his amount to something. Yet trifling as he is, there is a principle involved in the matter that cannot be permitted to be set aside. That is, the right, guaranteed under our constitution, of free speech. Mr. Slatterly cannot go into the Catholic church to there express his opinions, but when he hires a hall he is entitled to talk as much as he pleases, on any subject he pleases, as long as his language is decent; and as many as desire may go to hear him, and believe or disbelieve his statements as suits their pleasure. When this right is denied to Slatterly it makes it possible that the same rights may be denied to priest and preacher. Whether Slatterly is allowed to speak or not is a trifling matter, but whether the right of free speech to every American citizen is to be abridged or denied is of vital importance.

THE NEW REILLY BILL.

Under the proposed modification of the Reilly funding bill, says the S. F. Call, the bond-aided roads will pay the principal of the government debt in cash, refund the accrued interest for fifty years at 2 per cent and extend the first mortgage bonds by a release, payable in installments through a period of fifty years with interest at 3 per cent. It is reported that this scheme finds favor with many opponents of the original Reilly bill, and is likely to pass both houses of congress.

It is a better proposition as far as the government is concerned, because it will pay into the treasury the principal of the second mortgage bonds. This is the bait which promises to hook votes enough to carry the measure.

For California, and the communities between San Francisco and Omaha, the scheme is just as bad as the original refunding bill. The companies will have to borrow the money to pay the principal, and the people tributary to the roads will have to pay it, principal and interest. Also, as heretofore, their business interests will be held liable for the principal and interest of the first mortgage bonds. The stock of the two companies will retain its existing status, and the present management will hold fast their control of the properties, with all the maladministration which that fact has involved in the past and will imply for the future. The scheme also shuts off the possibility of legal proceedings for the recovery of the millions wrongfully diverted by the managements.

WILSON, POSTMASTER GENERAL.

Ex-Congressman W. L. Wilson has been appointed postmaster-general in place of W. S. Bissell resigned. Mr. Wilson was elected to congress from West Virginia in 1882, and was closely connected with the tariff tinkering of Mills, assisting in perfecting what was known as the Mills bill. His name became prominent through the fact that he was chairman of the ways and means committee of the house and the tariff bill, under which the government is now sailing so smoothly, was prepared by him; though, to do him justice, it might be added that it was so amended after leaving his hands that he failed to recognize it when Senator Gorman introduced him to it after it had passed the senate.

Sheriff Sears of Multnomah county and Senator McGinn had an encounter in Portland yesterday. Sears accused McGinn of sneaking a bill through the legislature reducing Sears' emoluments. McGinn, though surprised at being accused of trying to practice economy for the state, realized the enormity of the charge, and its lack of foundation, and struck Sears in the face with his fist. Sears responded by striking McGinn on the head with his revolver. At this point bystanders separated them. Sears went into a pawnbrokers shop, probably to "soak his head," while McGinn, so the Oregonian says, went down to the Turkish baths, and soaked his.

VETOED THE BILLS.

Governor Lord has vetoed senate bill No. 99, giving Miss Iva Templeton $5,000 on account of her leg being broken by a fall through a rotten bridge, in Linn county, a few years ago, and house bill No. 14, giving mileage to sheriffs. The first he thinks unconstitutional, and the last mischievous and contrary to the expressed policy of the people. The latter did not affect the sheriff of Multnomah county, who was expressly exempted from its provisions.

We suggest that the 5th of March be declared a national holiday, or else that the November Thanksgiving be transferred to that date, for surely there is no one thing over which the nation ought to so sincerely rejoice as upon the adjournment of congress. That is something for which indeed, all could give thanks.

Dufur Doing.

The trees have commenced to unpack their trunks preparatory to donning their spring finery, while the willow pussies are coming out, telling us that crusty old winter has reluctantly taken his departure and tardy spring, fickle maid, with her smiles and tears, has at last taken her place.

The snow has nearly disappeared leaving the grass quite green.

The farmer's holidays are about over and he gladly welcomes plow time. In some places he is already out with his plow stirring the fresh, mellow earth.

The roads are in an almost impassable condition about Dufur and between here and The Dalles.

Mr. Peabody has made his exit into the country on account of the smallpox scare.

The other night a large crowd of friends gave Miss Anna Dufur a pleasant surprise for her birthday. They were greeted with a cordial welcome, notwithstanding their unexpected arrival. Games of all sorts were soon commenced and the rooms were filled with the merry laughter of some who were busy at whit, others at Louisa, while the young people were kept merry with other games suggested by Miss Anna, who acted the part of hostess. She with her usual thoughtfulness saw that no one was lacking amusement. At an early hour the guests were invited to partake of ice cream, cake and coffee. The party broke up at a late hour, and all expressed their enjoyment of the evening.

Among those who were present were: Dr. Kane, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Balch, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Johnston, Messrs G. W. C. J. H. and S. B. Johnston, J. B. McAtee, D. S. Miller, Jas. Kennedy, O. K. and R. D. Butler, Will Cantrell, A. Howie, J. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Dufur, A. Gregg, Meedames Adams, Slusher and E. Dufur, Misses Carrie and Myrtle Markham, Edith and Maud Peabody, Anna and Daisy Dufur, Anna Heisler, Eva Slusher, Mary Douglas, Bessie Hastings, Ann Neal and Angie Phillips.

Washington's birthday was celebrated at Dufur as only we Dufurites know how. The school was given half a holiday and all enjoyed the bright warm sunshine with many thoughts of patriotism concerning the valiant George, whose eventful life dated from that day 163 years ago, in sunshiny Virginia. In the evening the band favored a large crowd with a concert, which deserves much credit as to the management. Among those worthy of note was "Fore-paw's Aggregation" given by the band of fourteen pieces. "Mince Pie" was composed of well chosen spices making it very palatable. Prof. Helfreich gave a beautiful clarinet solo, "Comin' thro' the Rye," after which he gave in response to an encore, "Home Sweet Home," which was very appropriate and had the natural tendency to rekindle the patriotic feelings inspired by the day. After the concert a dance was indulged in until the "wee sma' hours" of the night.

Misses Lola and Mamie Driver from The Dalles, spent the 22d at Dufur.

Mrs. Adams left for Portland. M. J. Anderson has returned from Salem filled with republicanism, democracy, populism and all other items to be got at the legislature.

The Boy as a Barometer.

Yesterday a boy in this town, standing upon the heel of one boot for a center, described the circumference of a circle with the toe of the other. It was a marble ring, and the spring's first and surest harbinger is here. The migratory birds may be deceived. The trees may swell their buds with a false joy at the deceitful breath of the south wind. Waters may laugh merrily at their temporary release from bondage, as the mouse rejoices when the cruel cat lifts up her tantalizing paw. The sky and the earth and the air may seem to read the signs of spring and be mistaken, but the boy is nature's masterpiece. He does not err in interpreting the sound of nature's voice.

When the season's change is first surely heralded, the boy is the herald. The marble ring is more faithful in its promise than the rainbow. There is no doubt now that the winter has done its worst. There may be bitter cold days, but there will be in the chilling winds the chill of spring, and the warm days will outnumber the cold ones from now on. Before many weeks the browns of the prairie will be changed by the kaleidoscope of the season to a deep black, and then will come the livid green of the first foliage of the fields. The crowds in the suffocating "trailers" will spread to the grip car to keep company with that crazy girl who has been riding down town every morning in the biting north wind, wrapped in the placid delusion that she is improving her health. Easter will follow Lent, and apple blossoms will follow Lent, and women in their first white dresses will come after the blossoms, and when these events have been celebrated, the three best things of the year will be gone, and summer will have come.

But the boy will foretell the coming of summer and the passing of spring better than all the manifestations of inanimate nature. After the marbles come the tops. After the tops, mud balls. After the mud balls, the boy wanders back to the water which he left, clicking his skates on his back, for the marble ground. The water of the pond, the creek or the river is never too cold for the boy who experiments with it when the ice is gone. For wading or for swimming water is always as warm as "dishwater" to the boy who feels inspired by the whisperings to try it. No boy ever was called into the water by his natural impulses too early in the spring. He may shiver. He may turn purple, and his old chickenpox rash may come out on his shaking legs as he "dries" on his shirt among the willows just in leaf, but he will not admit an error. Nothing the boy does when in the open is too late or too soon. The boy is nature's thermometer and barometer. He has indicated the death of the winter. The click of his marbles in the ring prophesies the coming of the spring.—Kansas City Star.

The blue-bird is hailed as a harbinger of spring. It is also a reminder that a blood purifier is needed to prepare the system for the debilitating weather to come. Listen and you will hear the birds singing: "Take Ayer's Sarsaparilla in March April and May."

And once (here the strong man's voice trembled), once, for one moment, I thought I saw half of a sofa, at the extreme left of the stage; but I cannot be sure.'"—Life.

and those about to become mothers, should know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription robs childbirth of its torture, terrors and dangers to both mother and child, by aiding Nature in preparing the system for parturition. Thereby "labor" and also the period of confinement are greatly shortened. It also promotes an abundant secretion of nourishment for the child. During pregnancy, it prevents "morning sickness" and those distressing nervous symptoms from which so many suffer.

Tanks, Cottle Co., Texas. Dr. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir—I took your Favorite Prescription previous to confinement and never did so well in my life. It is only two weeks since my confinement and I am able to do my work. I feel stronger than I ever did in six weeks before.

Yours truly, Corda C. Culpepper

A MOTHER'S EXPERIENCE.

South Bend, Pacific Co., Wash. Dear Sir—I began taking your Favorite Prescription the first month of pregnancy, and have continued taking it since confinement. I did not experience the nausea due to pregnancy, after I began taking your "Prescription." I was only in labor a short time, and the physician said I got along unusually well. We think it saved me a great deal of suffering. I was troubled a great deal with leucorrhoea also, and it has done a world of good for me. Yours truly, Mrs. W. C. BAKER
