THE PASSING OF CLEVELAND.

President Cleveland's second term has passed its half-way mark, and, like his reputation, is waning rapidly; and, of Cleveland and Clevelandism is the history of the passing of big little men, since the world was populated. Cleveland went out of office six years ago with a reputation of which he might have been, if not proud, at least not ashamed. That he cannot do now. In two years he has lost the good opinion of threefourths of his own party, and the rehis party as a guide, he maintained the respect even of his political enemies, because that was the course expected of him by all. That was the course he pursued during his first term, and that course was what made his second term possible.

His re-election was his undoing, because it gave him the impression that he was larger than his party. He came to believe he was a self-made man, and when he looked upon the magnificence of his handiwork, he was moved to idol atrons worship of his creator. Moved by the flattery of the rich, he has steeled his heart against the masses and prostituted the high office to which he was elected, to serve the classes. The golden curtains of Mammon shut him off from a view of his countrymen, with whom he is no longer in touch. He is the ideal democrat, as described by General Grant, for he always manages to "do the wrong thing at the right time."

He will end his term a good yoke fellow for his democratic predecessor, James Buchanan, and his name will be heard in the future years only when men desire to epitomize the characteristics exemplified by him. His re-election was a misfortune to himself, as well as to the country, and by the end of his term there will be indeed few left to do him reverence. His last bond sale, whereby the foreigners who bought them re-sold them at a profit of $8,000,-000, however honest he may have been not be made a citizen, we see no good in the matter, is something that he can in him. He soared high and he fell a yellow dog, can become an American lands of the Umatillas caused the addihard, and the fall killed him.

OUR CITIZENS.

Three prominent, though new, American citizens will leave Umatilla for Washington in a few days to interview the great white Manitou. They go in the interests of their fellow-citizens to learn for them why an American citizen with a pedigree running back to the time the Monnd-builders were driven off by their ancestors, cannot get drunk if he wants to. The three gentlemen are all leaders in their way, the delegation consisting of Old Chief, Chief No Shirt and Chief Billy One Sock. The delegation of the scanty-wardrobe cognomens are really better dressed than their names would imply, for No Shirt wears a double-breasted Prince Albert, with balloon sleeves and a tail that covers his hip-pants, concealing his utter lack of pyjamas. Billy, he of the single socle, like his unfortunate brother, Jerry, of Kansas conceals his paucity of foot underelothing in a pair of galligaskins, and while Le would not be in costume for a Castellane-Gould wedding match, still his tout ensemble is not to be sneezed at. Biliv is an American citizen, and as such we are glad to extend to him and his'n the right hand of fellowship; and yet we cannot but feel sorry for him in cheif, and sincerely hope that when he escapes from Washington, and turns his Umatillas, his solitary sock may still be with him.

Judge Bellinger has listened patiently for several days to arguments in the matter of the receivers for the Short Line and O. R. & N., arguments which if reported correctly in the papers, were about the flattest and weakest, for the price, ever made out of the justice court of Scappoose precinct. The judge, after digesting the arguments, only to be there was nothing to decide, and so decided to leave things just as they were. United States Senator Thurston, who audience during the course of the arguhumor. He rose to his feet, and pointing set fire to it. The gases generated penethe index finger of his full hand at the trate to the utmost limits of the recei jocund face gave scintillations of the jest unborn, but struggling within him, he turned the faucet of his pent-up mirth on full head, and doubled his hearers up like a jack-knife, or a pocket rule, or a democratic majority, or a jack-rabbit, or any other loose-jointed thing, with the side-splitting remark that the lawyers of the "wild west were wild and woolly." And then he smiled at himself while he took out his memorandum book and jotted down a "mem," to charge the company $1000 additional-for a joke.

The Walla Walla Statesman says "the state of Washington needs a new constitution." As the present constitution is hardly old enough to be weaned, it does not seem possible that another can be needed. Now, here in Oregon we are getting along in the same bib and tucker the good old pioneers made when the population of the state was not much larger than that of the city where the Statesman is published. The garment is small, consisting principally of bib, and as we have grown from infancy to whiskerdom, it necessarily like it, will soon wink out. The passing follows that considerable of our anatomy is exposed at times, for the reason that in attempting to cover one part some other is exposed.

The branch asylum case will do for an illustration. In this the court is asked to decide that the constitution is unconstitutional, and that if it is not so, that the supreme court find a way to get around it. We want to see the asylum built in spect of nine-tenths of the people. As Eastern Oregon, but still we believe long as he kept the faith and beliefs of that doing so will uncover some parts of the venerable old state will be left bare.

> There is a typical case of modern political morality exemplified at Portland in the matter of Isaiah H. Bradbury, a colored gentleman from Missouri, and, in a way, a prominent politician of that state. It seems that some political trickery was performed at the recent elections in the way of stuffing ballot boxes, or something of the kind, and of course the other side was horrified at the idea of the laws being violated. They were so severely shocked that when they found Bradbury had skipped to Portland, in this state, they sent an officer out here, who, instead of arresting his man according to law, kidnaped him. The officer soon discovered that Missouri methods would not go in Oregon, and he is now under arrest. The love of the American politician for the laws of his country is really wonderful, for, as has been demonstrated in this case, he is willing to violate them in order to have them enforced-against some other fellow.

Clarence Cole, member of the legislature from Multnomah county, and one of the two of its representatives who refused to support Dolph, has brought suit against the Oregonian for $45,000, alleging that his reputation has been damaged in that amount. The fact that Cole was a member of the Oregon legislature will make it difficult to establish the fact that there was anything that could be said beyond the mere statement of the fact that would injure his character. However, the Oregonian should have profited by our advice, and in its sweep ing assertions modified its language. "Stinkard" is a rude, vulgar word, and our big contemporary should have used stenchard."

An exchange says that Chile con carne translated into English means "meat with pepper." This is a mistake, as anyone who has sampled the dish knows. One never hears the expression "butter and bread," but always "bread and butter," presumably because the his projected visit to the great white bread is the larger ingredient of the combination. For the same reason the translation of Chile con carne should be longing eyes towards the land of the literal with "pepper, meat," and not much meat either, if a Mexican prepares the dish.

citizens for the annexation of Hawaii is movement into consideration. The population of the islands is about 90,000, of whom 2,000 are white, 15,000 Chinese, 12,000 Japanese, 34,000 Kanakas, and 6,000 mixed breeds. Does the United States need this heterogeneous population added to its citizens? We think not. Our free institutions are threatened now from our criminal carelessness in making citizens of foreigners who are not capable of understanding the principles upon which free governments rest, or appreciating liberty. We made a serious mistake when we put the ballot into the hands of the negro almost as soon as his shackles were broken, and before he was given an opportunity to learn the power for good or evil that rested in the right to vote. The same mistake was made before this in regard to certain classes of foreigners, who were as guiltless of knowledge necessary to vote intelligently as the negro. We have continued, and still continue this mistaken policy, founded on the

tion of money, the largest sack carrying the day. Nor have we found the limit yet. Only a few days ago the Umatilia Indians were declared by our courts to be citizens of the United States. They cannot talk English; they have no idea of government, except the crude and savage form of tribal fealty, and their idea of liberty is the right to do as they please, without regard to the rights of others. The toga of citizenship had not been fairly settled upon their shoulders when the United States troops had to be called out to keep them from defying the government which made them citizens. The dispatches yesterday gravely tell us in glowing headlines that the 'Umatillas show no sign of going on the warpath;" that that celebrated American citizen, "No Shirt" is in danger of his life from "his fellow citizens," who are just as shirtless, or shiftless, as himself. The lines were loose enough before, but now all barriers are down. The be-diapered citizens of Umatilla, fresh from their wick-e-ups, handpainted, be-greased and be-blanketed; ignorant of civilization; without an idea government; without education: whose idea of freedom is the right to get drunk, and whose understanding of liberty is the privilege of killing their enemies, are the latest voting contingent,

We have enough of this kind of citizens, and we have no need of Hawaii. with its bias-eyed Mongolians, its leption to our voting population of "No Hawaii, and it is better to do without tion.

THE POLICY OF SURRENDER.

The foreign policy of the present administration is aptly stigmatized by Senator Lodge as a policy of surrender. In every instance of dispute with a foreign nation there has been a failure to maintain the dignity and enforce the rights of our country. An ignominious lack of backbone has disgraced our diplomacy, and put us at a standing disadvantage. As often as occasion has been presented to promote our interests abroad, disappointment has ensued by reason of incapacity at Washington. The state department has counted for less than was ever before known, except as a target for derision, and the national honor has been disparaged accordingly. There is a good deal of force in Mr. Lodge's suggestion that the explanation of this unpleasant spectacle lies largely in the fact that the democratic policy of tariff reform makes subservience to foreign nations easy and consistent, if not absolutely necessary. "The economic doctrines which the tariff reformers have been urging," he says, "were of course borrowed from England, and all the queer and extraneous fantasies attached to these doctrines were borrowed with them," thus putting American ideas and sentiments in the background.

It is certainly true that the democratic party has forfeited the robust and aggressive Americanism that characterized it in former days, There is nothing Jeffersonian or Jacksonian about its present attitude towards foreign nations. It was once noted for its determined opposition to the idea of imitating other countries, or of being dictated to by them, but now it is tamely willing to order its course according to foreign intimidation. The American spirit seems to have cozed out of it, and it looks to Europe for inspiration and guidance. It is principally animated by what Mr. Lodge calls "the melancholy doctrine that there is no higher aim or purpose for men and nations than to buy and everything cheap;" and in giving practical effect to this doctrine, it does not The wild howl made by some of our besitate to sacrifice patriotism in order to gain the favor of other countries. made without taking the results of that This is one of the reasons why it has made such a mess of the great work of conducting the affairs of the government it is in Washington it will cut no figure during the past two years. #### Let Us Spray.

Notice is hereby given by the Oregon State Board of Horticulture that all fruit Sibley, of Pennsylvania, an eccentric trees and plants which are found to be infested with the San Jose scale, the woolly aphis or other injurious insects, in this state, are required to be sprayed or washed before the end of March, 1895, with a solution of lime, sulphur and salt, or some other equally effective if Sibley doesn't get tired of paying the properly treated with the wash.

DIRECTIONS-Place ten pounds of lime and twenty pounds of sulphur in a boiler with twenty gallons of water, stir and boil over a brisk fire for not less than one hour and a half, until the sulphur is thoroughly dissolved. When this takes place the mixture will be an amber color. Next place in a cask from twenty to thirty pounds of unslacked lime, pouring over enough hot water to thoroughly slack it (being careful to keep it moist and not to spoil it by burning), and while it is boiling add the fifteen pounds of salt. When this is dissolved add to the lime and sulphur in the boiler and boil for half an hour or more longer, when the necessary amount of water to make sixty gallons should be added. It should then be strained through gunny cloth or burlap. When using, it should be frequently and well stirred. In applying this wash a strong rubber hose and a nozzle having a rubber orifice or plate should be used, as those made of brass are soon worn out by the action of the lime. Apply lukewarm.

Mr. Sherman also put in another bid, knocking off the back for the funeral and substituting a "bent wood" coffin for the walnut stained one, and offered the lot for one cent per burial.

The Butte Undertaking Company's bid was in every particular the same as the second bid of Mr. Sherman, except that the Butte Undertaking Company agreed to throw in a shave when neces sary, and on motion of Commissioner Lloyd the contract was awarded to the company at 1 cent. The contract runs for ane year.

The man suggested was ex-Congressman millionaire who has been republican, democrat and populist all within the last fifteen years, and who is probably expected to put up the money to maintain the headquarters which are to be opened at once in Washington and kept open-bills-until the presidential election. It would be difficult to find an angrier set of men than were the democratic exsenators and representatives who had hopes of executive favors, when they learned that Mr. Cleveland had left them in the lurch and gone off in search of a good time. Some of them could not control their anger, and used words in the presence of Private Secretary Thurber which probably settled the little chance they had for getting official crumbs from the presidential table, but the most of them smiled and hid their disappointment as far as possible, and will be on hand when Mr. Cleveland returns.
