A Description of the Foutball Game.

A lady in The Dalles has received from a friend who is visiting in Portland, but whose home is in this city, a letter which contains a graphic description of the recent foot-ball game between the University of Oregon club and the eleven from Portland University. Some of the passages may prove interesting, and so we re-produce a portion of the letter. In speaking of her husband, who is well known in The Dalles, the writer says he has "quite recovered, or nearly so, from the almost complete loss of his voice. ' You will be alarmed to read this, but calm yourself. On Saturday evening his voice was not far different from a bullfrogs, For why? Oh! we went to the football game! We had to shout, for Portland University students were so well organized, had so many horns and yelled the university yell so loud, that we had to help Eugene. It was simply wildly exciting. People in the grand stand rose en masse and yelled, umbrellas and hats tossing in air, Eugene's vellow flags waving and Portland's cardinal streamers flapping. Old men yelled till they were purple in the face, and has now ceased. professors of both universities, forgetting dignity, thought they were kids. They slapped each other on the back till I was afraid they would knock their wind clean out. We were seated immediately behind the organized gang of P. U. yellers and it was deafening. The law school, which is part of the state university, had a very taking yell. It be-"Blackstone, Blackstone, Rah! this morning on company business. Rah! Rah! We are University School of Law." They gave it often and with this morning for a short visit with friends. great enthusiasm. The medical school call was not so striking and I couldn't catch the words. Clyde Bonney was one of the Eugene men and we watched train. him with interest. "Ed Lyons sat near us. Beside him was an elderly gentle-Spaulding, two well-known attorneys of man, who, during a breathless pause, Goldendale, are in the city. while people were waiting to know whether to shout or groan, turned to Mr. Lyons and said: "Is this baseball, did you say?" No wonder Mr. Lyons turned pale. Many students wore mortar boards. We saw Frank French 820. and Will Crossen at the game, but as they were shouting for Portland University the outcome was not pleasing to of court and then went home for a few days, has returned to town. them."

Saturday Evening at the Baldwin.

The "American Girl" drew a large house Saturday evening at the Baldwin. The reserved seats were nearly all filled, and the "gallery" well represented. It was the first time the play had been produced by this talented company, though no one could have discovered that fact by the performance Saturday night, so evenly did everything pass off. city. building, have had much money spent in the way of improving. In addition to opera house must not be overlooked. The cost of this work can not be far from $10,000. The strengthening of the bridge leading to the railroad shops and the building of a new incline to the coal bunkers are improvements well worth noting.

Altogether The Dalles has made great strides since last spring and its citizens can f-el satisfied with its present conditions and hopeful for its future. We doubt if there is any city in the state which proportionally can show a better advance than this city has done. Next year the progress will be greater yet.
