Pendleton's Point of View.

A good-natured rivalry has sprung up between Pendleton and The Dalles regarding their commercial advantages and growth. . The tollowing article from the Pendleton Tribune gives that paper's views upon this question and its loyalty to Pendleton is commended. However, the statement made by THE CHRONICLE that $600,000 was paid into The Dalles for wool during the past season is approximately correct, and for the number of pounds 6,000,000 is a much more correct estimate than the 5,000,000 allowed by the Tribune. The price paid per pound here ranged in some instances over 12 cents, while large quantities sold for 11. lower. We envy Pendleton her woolen led as the great wool center, the number of pounds handled at this point pre-vious to the establishment of the scouring mill, less than two years ago, never exceeded a million and a quarter. A "lusty rival?" It would seem so, when it is known that not until last year has it become generally known to the people of Eastern Oregon, that the rife competition existing between local buy-ers combined with the other advantages she possesses, Pendleton easily leads as the most advantageous shipping point for the wool men of the Inland Empire. It is now confidently expected that during the present year Pendleton will over 6,000,000 pounds of wool, nor will she then have arrived at the zenith of her possibilities as the great entrepot of the wool product of Eastern

The people of Pendleton are deserving of the enviable reputation they enjoy as reliable and enterprising business men, who never fail to contribute toward any scheme calculated to benefit the town, but the fact should not be lost sight of that nature has done much for Pendleton, and that it is to her natural resources that the people of this city are largely indebted for the city's rapid strides to the goal of her ambition—the ideal inland city of the state-leading atl others as a commercial and manufactur-

In Pendleton the prices ranged much lower. We envy Pendleton her woolen mill and scouring mill, but The Dalles will not concede that Pendleton surpasses her as being the wool emporium of the West. All the more reason why woolen manufacturies should be established here, where the natural product is at our door and transportation rates, by reason of an open river, so cheap. Here are the Tribune's remarks:

In another column will be found an interesting article from The Dalles Chronicle under the caption, "Time to Advance," wherein the opinions expressed by commercial travelers concerning the leading towns in Oregon are referred to, supplemented by a deserved tribute to Pendleton, which is acknowledged by The Dalles paper to be a 'lusty rival.'"

The Chronicle says that for wool alone $600,000 was disbursed by The Dalles banks last summer.

The Tribune is willing to admit that The Dalles leads as the wool market of Eastern Oregon, but is inclined to be lieve that the figures quoted above are too high.

Conservative estimates place the amount of wool handled at The Dalles for years past has led as the great wool center, the number of pounds handled at this point previous to the establishment of the scour, township 3 founds and the force of pounds handled at this point previous to the establishment of the scour, to she the state of the scours, wherein and decree having deem endered and entered in the Circuit Court of the 23d and of December, 1935, in a cause therein pends and of December, 1935, in a cause therein pends and product and send for of Sibons, A.
