

THE BEST FAMILY MEDICINE

She Has Ever Known. Words of Praise from a New York Lady for AYER'S PILLS

"I would like to add my testimony to that of others who have used Ayer's Pills, and to say that I have taken them for many years, and always derived the best results from their use. For stomach and liver troubles, and for the cure of headache caused by these derangements, Ayer's Pills cannot be equaled.

When my friends ask me what is the best remedy for disorders of the stomach, liver, or bowels, my invariable answer is, Ayer's Pills. Taken in season, they will break up a cold, prevent la grippe, check fever, and regulate the digestive organs. They are easy to take, and are, indeed, the best all-round family medicine I have ever known."

Mr. Knight's Lecture.

The speaker informed his audience that he had carefully written a lecture for the occasion, and started for The Dalles with it safely stowed in his grip, but that in leaving his hotel in Portland the porter had given him a grip so like his own that he did not discover that it was another's until after his arrival here. He had been in not a few trying circumstances in his life, but confessed that never did he find himself in such a strait as this, or so doubtful of his power to meet the emergency, and we, who had gone to the lecture expecting much from the man and the topic, found ourselves as curious to see how the lecturer would meet the emergency.

"The Practical Idealist" is not a topic that one might dare to speak upon without a certain inherent sympathy, combined with much special thought upon the theme. The lecturer showed himself to be possessed of both. We will not undertake to give a synopsis of the lecture, and certainly we would not dare undertake to reproduce any of the fine phrases and illustrations with which he showed the real things of life as opposed to things that only seem. What is called the practical in all departments of life and thought is measured by conformity to reality; and too generally that reality which gives the standard is nothing higher nor better than an outward tangible and temporary seeming. The real thing, which gives shape to what now is and beckons us on to a higher and nobler shaping and attainment, is the perfection and glory of the thing—the ideal. That is the reality and nothing less or lower. The ideal is not found in any departure from nature truly seen, but in the perception of the true thought and purpose of nature and conformity to them. It is opposed to all pretensions and shams; it hates all hypocrisies, dishonesties and selfishnesses in business and society and politics and art. He is the dreamer who in any of these things thinks that the present imperfection, or worse, is the thing itself, which we must seek knowledge and to which we must contentedly adapt ourselves. He is awake and practical who sees the ideas which things and conditions are trying to embody or express. Art itself, which by many is supposed to have an ideal of its own, with power to go beyond nature in its expression, is in fact the most obedient and eager interpreter of nature, and only succeeds in winning the hearts of men and women and demonstrating its truth when it portrays not simply what actually is, but rather what every man and woman is striving to make real, to think out for themselves and in some way or other to make real. When the lecturer, in illustration of his theme, spoke of the effect of music as the interpreter and master of the best that is in us, the audience listened rapt with eager sympathetic attention, and were made to behold in visions a glory which they might well hope for when the last hour comes, and that which is, becomes one with the blessed ideal.

We confess to a certain justifiable pride that Mr. Knight is an Oregonian. Though not born in Oregon, he has grown up here and received his education here, and developed a fineness of culture and a literary quality which, with his originality and strength of mind, would give him rank in the very centers of culture in our land. First and last, there are many who come to this coast, or are called hither by those in search of brains and culture and the art of putting things, and we are glad to welcome them, but let us not fail to appreciate the splendid abilities and noble worth of some that have grown up among us.

Gow Chow's Perplexity.

When Gow Chow was brought up for sentence he created a most amusing scene. The process of American law courts is something beyond the Celestial's grasp. He thought it was all right and regular to be led to the bar by his queue and made no demur. He raised both hands while hearing his doom, his knees bent inwardly from agitation, and his face wore a woe-begone expression ludicrous in the extreme. The sentence was a fine of $50, which was paid by his attorney, and he was told to go. He started, but was plainly afraid to make any decided motion when the clerk thundered: "Go on." Thus encouraged, he walked a few steps, but again fearing a trap turned to the judge and stopped. He was waved onward and thus by stages left the court room. On the steps he met Jailor Fitzgerald coming up, and Gow thought here was another peril. He commenced to tell the jailor in Chinese how it was, but Mr. Fitzgerald could not or would not understand, and told the Chinese to "g'wan," and still jabbering, he left the scene of his incarceration, trial and discharge behind him.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

Many years ago Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., compounded this medicine of vegetable ingredients which had an especial effect upon the stomach and liver, rousing the organs to healthful activity as well as purifying and enriching the blood. By such means the stomach and the nerves are supplied with pure blood; they will not do duty without it any more than a locomotive can run without coal. You can not get a lasting cure of Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, by taking artificially digested foods or pepsin—the stomach must do its own work in its own way. Do not put your nerves to sleep with so-called celery mixtures, it is better to go to the seat of the difficulty and feed the nerve cells on the food they require. Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliaryness and Nervous Affections, such as sleeplessness and weak, nervous feelings are completely cured by the "Discovery." It puts on healthy flesh, brings refreshing sleep and invigorates the whole system.

Mrs. K. HENKE, of No. 86 1/2 North Halsted St., Chicago, Ill., writes: "I regard my improvement as simply wonderful. Since taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in connection with his 'Pleasant Pellet,' I have gained in every respect, particularly in flesh and strength. My liver was greatly enlarged and I suffered greatly from dyspepsia. No physician could give relief. Now, after two months I am entirely relieved of my disease. My appetite is excellent; food well digested; much improved."
