Oregon Land Cases.

The secretary of the interior has denied the motion of Abel Erskine, for review of the departmental decision of The Dalles land district case of Arthur Couzens vs. Erskine. Erskine claimed to have settled on the land with the expectation of purchasing it from the Northern Pacific railroad if they should obtain a title thereto.

William Floyd loses in his appeal from the lower action in the case of Rupert H. Childs vs. Floyd, in The Dalles district. The general land office, in January, 1895, reversed the decision of the local officers, and held Floyd's entry for cancellation. The secretary in the decision in the case says:

"However bona fide and good Floyd's intention may have been, when he fenced the land involved, or at any other time to purchase it of the Military Road Company, when it secured title and wanted to sell it, such intention would not avail him under the most liberal construction of the act of September 29, 1890. This act was intended to protect and accord the right of purchase to all such as could bring themselves within its terms, and at the same time open the forfeited lands to disposition to claimants under the homestead law."

A Little Boy Killed By the Cars.

The little 8-year-old boy of Mr. Dan Daffron, car inspector at Umatilla, was run over by the cars about 8 o'clock last evening at Umatilla and was killed. The accident could not have been averted, for no one knew of it until some of the trainmen came upon the poor little fellow's bleeding body. His leg had been cut off diagonally following its junction with the body. He was alive when found, and lived for about six hours. It is thought he had fallen from a box-car when in motion, as he was in the habit of playing around moving cars in the yard.

Mr. Daffron was at one time car inspector in The Dalles, and is well-known among railroad men here. Mr. James Brennan of this city is his son-in-law.

List of Indispensible Books.

Some time ago the editor of the Missouri Editor, published at Columbia, Mo., wrote to Mr. Charles A. Dana, editor of the New York Sun, asking for a short list of books valuable for country editors. Mr. Dana's reply was published in The Missouri Editor for March, 1896:

NEW YORK, Feb. 26, 1896.

DEAR SIR:—I enclose a little list of books which seem to be indispensable, not merely to country editors, but to every person of American origin.

Yours sincerely,

WALTER WILLIAMS. C. A. DANA.

The Bible. The Declaration of Independence. The Constitution of the United States. Bancroft's History of the United States. McClure's Life of Lincoln (partially published).

Irving's Life of Washington. Franklin's Autobiography. Channing's Essay on Napoleon Bonaparte. Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Shakespeare.

The Wheat Trade.

The market shows no change either for the better or worse, says the Commercial Review. A few small parcels of wheat have changed hands. The general disposition of holders is against marketing at present, many believing that there will be a more favorable market during the coming month. The slow selling movement has no disturbing effects upon exporters, who are entirely indifferent whether they buy or not. Nearly all business on hand is cleaned up, and future shipments depend upon foreign values and local freights; when such a combination of conditions permitting a profitable business is brought about, exporters can float cargoes, but at the moment shipping can be done only at a loss.

BORN.

Friday, April 10th, to the wife of A. W. Mohr, Grand Dalles, a son.

Day Bros.' steam launch, while returning to the Cascade Locks Sunday afternoon under full steam, grounded upon the sand bar in the river just opposite Mr. F. Locke's place. The lumber company's little tug, seeing the launch in distress, got up steam and started to the rescue. But after about an hour's time the launch succeeded in getting free, a few minutes before the arrival of the tug.—Glacier.

"THE CONFEDERATE SPY."

The Plot of the Interesting Play Briefly Related.

The following is the story of "The Confederate Spy," which will be produced at the Baldwin opera house to-night:

George Waterman, a Northerner, meets a Southern belle with whom he falls in love. She reciprocates his devotion, but the two are separated in sentiment by a gulf which appears insurmountable. His sympathies are strong for the North and he enlists, while the girl is an ardent devotee of the Southern cause. She has a brother who is a Confederate spy. He is captured and condemned to death, and the Northern lover is captain of the guard. When the guard discovers the relationship of his prisoner and the girl whom he loves a plan is made to save his life by substituting the body of a dead soldier for the spy. The spy is then required to sign a parole. The plan is successful and the spy goes to the North, where he remains until the close of the war. Waterman, however, is discovered, and is himself sentenced to death. He escapes the guard, and his love for the cause prompts him to again engage in battle. In the struggle with Ainsley, a Confederate, Gen. Banks is wounded and Waterman renders him such valuable assistance that he obtains a reprieve for himself and the spy, who in the meantime has been discovered and placed under guard. Waterman is himself wounded, however. When the lovers next meet it is in the North, at the close of the war, and it does not take long to facilitate the happy denouement. Following is the cast:

Geo. Waterman (a young Unionist)... N. J. Sinnott... Fred Ainsley (a rebel)... F. W. Wilson... Major-General Banks (U. S. A.)... D. C. Herrin... Colonel Willard (U. S. A.)... J. R. McAvoy... Officer Mulgurry (one of the finest when out of danger)... John Hampshire... Clay (a gemmen of color what knows what de chickens roost)... John Hartnett... Sockery Schnell Hebecker (the drafted Dutchman)... Wm. Resmus... Rastus (the unknown)... Louisa Hampshire... Mrs. Waterman (mother of George and widow of Capt. Waterman)... Mrs. G. C. Blakeley... Mand Bradley (a Southern belle and sister of spy)... Rose Michell... Nora Meleggia (down on the haythen Chineezer)... Lillian Snell... Rose Southwick (lady presenting flag) Leansuel

Among the interesting specialties is a sword fight between Ainslee and Waterman, a song and dance by J. F. Hampshire and J. Hartnett, solo by N. J. Sinnott, quartette by Artisan club, dance by Rastus and an instrumental duet by the Misses Myrtle and Retta Stone.

A Good Example.

Several young ladies set a good example at the last show which is well worthy of emulation. The floor at the Baldwin is level, and the audience back of the first five or six rows of seats have quite an imperfect view of the stage caused by ostrich feathers and ribbon, which adorn the heads of the fair sex. There is now going on a popular crusade leading to the removal by the ladies of their hats during a theatrical performance, and many ladies, in the larger cities, have endorsed it by removing them. Several ladies removed their hats at "Finnigan's Ball," and the effect from a masculine point of view was quite as pleasing as if they kept their hats on, and we know those men immediately back of them loved them the better for doing so, if that is a reason for wearing the hats. On behalf of the public who pay their money to attend a show, and in behalf of the opera-house management, who would be better patronized if their patrons could be assured of a good view of the stage, we urge that the ladies of The Dalles adopt the sensible style set at the last show and remove their hats. There is good sense in it; there is appreciation for the rights and comfort of others in it; and there is admiration and gratitude of all, which is always a winning proposition.

Injuries By Insects.

A young lady before retiring recently noticed a blow fly on her pillow, and would not go to sleep until she had killed it. The following incidents will excuse her alarm: The Oregonian recently published a story about a fly depositing eggs in a sleeping person's nose. The eggs hatched and it was with much difficulty life was saved. An incident capable of the fullest corroboration is that of a lady living near Hood River, in whose ear, about two years ago, a spider deposited eggs. They soon hatched, and large numbers of infinitesimal spiders commenced crawling out of her ear. This caused her intense pain, and she nearly lost her hearing. Cases are frequent of spiders biting children, but beyond a slight swelling and some pain no harm is done.

The Long Creek Eagle says that Hugh Arbuckle recently found the skeleton of a human being in an alkali lick on the middle fork of the John Day, near the mouth of Granite creek. While looking after some stock, Mr. Arbuckle was attracted to the lick by a peculiar formation caused by the incessant licking of the animals and the action of the elements for years past. What appeared to be a knee joint protruding above the surface, led Arbuckle to vigorous efforts, and with the aid of a pick and shovel what proved to be the remains of a white man were soon unearthed. Notwithstanding the fact that they must have lain for many years in this alkali formation, the bones were all well preserved.

FLAT FEET ARE THE THING.

Use Wide Shoes and You Will Be Able to Walk Erectly.

Not more than two men in 100 walk erectly. This observation comes from a man who is a crank about the benefits of wide, flat shoes, says the New York Press. He declares he has made notes and knows what he is talking about. He thinks that the "two men in 100" wear the same kind of shoes that he wears, which look like those used for walking on water. This man also believes that the percentage of women who walk straight is so small that it is not worth considering.

The whole trouble he attributes to shoes. He says men and women were never intended to wear shoes at all. It is his observation that when the foot is flattened out and the toes spread the natural movement of the body is to straighten itself. This he attributes to certain muscular action, and he has a chart to prove it.

When the foot is compressed by a shoe and the toes jammed together there is a sympathetic tension on the whole muscular and nervous system which draws the body forward or bends it. It has been noted in his calculations that persons in bathing costume on the beach walk much straighter. It is also a notable fact that the Indian, who runs barefooted on the plains, has the proudest kind of a walk. He is as straight as an iron pole.

Well and Truly Said.

Over the triple doorway of the cathedral of Milan there are three inscriptions spanning the splendid arches: Over one is carved a beautiful wreath of roses, and underneath is the legend: "All that pleases is but for a moment." Over another is sculptured a cross and these are the words underneath: "All that troubles is but for a moment." But underneath the great central entrance in the main aisle is the inscription: "That only is important which is eternal."
