"CYCLONE" DAVIS AND THOMAS JEFFERSON.

"Cyclone Davis" was introduced on the occasion of his address here as the greatest campaign orator in the United States. He began his address by declaring that his only text book is the Constitution and his only counselor is Thos. Jefferson, and for effect he caused to be piled upon the table nine or ten volumes, which he said were the writings of Thos. Jefferson, from which he quoted, or pertended to quote. Thomas Jefferson being one of the patron saints of all good Democrats, his frequent reference to Jefferson is a winning card, so far as Democrats with Populist tendencies are concerned.

Jefferson was unquestionably a good man. History has accredited to him much, and, from the standpoint of every Republican, quite all that he was or is entitled to. But he, like the "Texas Cyclone," and all other southern Democrats, was of the class of men who believed, or maintained, that the union was a general government constituted for special purposes only; a compact of states, and that the component states should be the final judges of the extent of the powers delegated to the general government. In other words, Jefferson and Madison, in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, concerning the Alien and Sedition law, of which they were the respective authors, were the first promulgators of the doctrine of nullification and secession. Some political writers have given Calhoun the honor (?) of first advocating this doctrine in which "our recent unpleasantness" had its origin; but reference to the resolutions above referred to clearly demonstrates the error of such writers. Davis, who was a southern Democrat until five years ago, comes, backed up, as he claims, by the father of secession, to teach the people of Oregon how to vote. If Jefferson was the author of all the ideas this Populist agitator accredits to him, he was as far from truth and patriotism as when he wrote the Kentucky resolutions.

As to the banking system, against which Jefferson is said to have written and spoken, it was in its nature essentially what the Republican party today is opposing, viz, a system of inflation. The Populist is demanding more currency inflation—the very thing which Jefferson opposed, and concerning which he used the language which this ex-secessionist says he used as to the whole banking system.

Davis' speech hardly merits so much attention, for it contained no argument. It was a harangue against capital, and banks in particular—an appeal to the prejudices of men who are not advised as to history or finance. It was this and nothing more.

ANOTHER MISSTATEMENT CORRECTED.

A few days ago the Mountaineer contained an article charging Sheriff T. J. Driver with "lobbying at Salem in the interests of the sheriff's mileage bill. The following statement should set at rest any doubts the public may entertain as to Mr. Driver's personal intention or attitude upon that question:

PORTLAND, May 18, 1896. To Whom It May Concern: At all meetings of the sheriff's conventions of the state of Oregon, T. J. Driver, sheriff of Wasco county, expressed himself as being in favor of having the law, as to the compensation of sheriffs remain as it was, and in the event of any change in said compensation of sheriffs being made by an act of the legislature, he would not oppose such change, but would continue to act in such matter under the law as it existed at the time of his assuming the duties of sheriff of Wasco county. GEO. C. SEARS. Pres. of Sheriff's Convention.

A report has originated, and the circulation commenced of a story by a friend of Judge G. C. Blakeley that when he assumed the office of county judge of Wasco county he found the county $110,000 in debt, and that he has reduced this amount to such an extent that should he be re-elected in another year he will wipe out the debt entirely. It is needless to say that this silly fable will not be circulated among that class of men who read THE CHRONICLE, or any other publication. It is meant for the ignorant and uninformed, and the man who started it says the story will be circulated widely the coming week. Any reader of THE CHRONICLE knows that the county debt is a few hundred dollars greater than when Mr. Blakeley assumed the office. But this story will have its effect. There are those in every community who cannot, or do not, read, and they will believe it, and believing it, will vote for Blakeley.

Senator Gorman's proposed issue of $100,000,000 of treasury certificates to pay the deficit between the current revenues and expenditures of this government will startle the country to a clearer knowledge of the distress of the United States treasury. This deficit began with the Cleveland administration, and has been deep seated and continuous. It has forced nearly $200,000,000 additional bonded indebtedness upon the people, and is one of the chief causes of the existing financial distress. Upon these bonds it is now proposed to throw $100,000,000 of treasury notes, or national warrants. The proposal will meet with a whirlwind of popular indignation.

There has never a word of reproof or criticism been uttered, that we have ever heard, regarding Mr. Kelsay's management of the county clerk's office. He has held the office but one term, and if the people appreciate a good officer in a responsible position, they will endorse his conduct by re-electing him county clerk.

PAST AND PRESENT ATTITUDES.

Judge Northup's campaign is not meeting with gratifying success in Wasco county. As election day approaches the tide is setting more strongly against the candidate named by the Oregonian and Joseph Simon. As the logic of the situation is analyzed the true motives which have prompted the candidacy of Mr. Northup are made more apparent, and the golden mask under which he has been hiding becomes transparent and reveals his true features.

The people of Eastern Oregon do not take kindly to this proposal to give Portland another member in the congressional delegation. The county east of the Cascade mountains is entitled to at least one representative in the national legislature, and any attempt to deprive it of this right will be frowned upon.

Judge Northup, with the cunning tactics of the professional politician, attempts to play upon the credulity of Eastern Oregon people by announcing in clarion voice his eagerness to assist in the opening of the Columbia river. Mr. Northup's work is a little coarse. His newfound love will be harder wooing than he thinks, and we can promise Mr. Northup that his protestations of friendship for Eastern Oregon come at an hour too late to be of much avail.

The attitude of Portland has always been inimical to the completion of the Cascade locks. Time and time again when the people of the imprisoned Inland Empire asked for assistance from the metropolis they were turned away with scorn. During the spring nearly past when The Dalles cried out against the monstrous wrong that had been perpetrated Portland remained selfishly silent. This is history and all the pretty words of Judge Northup cannot change the record.

The Oregonian-Simon candidate must have a low opinion of Eastern Oregon intelligence if he thinks that the people will disregard the lessons of the past and support for congress a man who is the espoused candidate of men who by word and action have ever been unfriendly to the people living east of the Cascade mountains. It is time Portland were taught that it no longer dominates the rest of the state.

In no better way can this rebuke be administered than by burying under an avalanche of ballots the cherished pet of Scott and Simon.

Does Wasco county want to be represented in the legislature by Populists, who will cast their votes for Penoyer for senator? This will be the logical result if the Populist candidates on the fusion ticket are elected. Penoyer is anything and everything. He is a Populist when it pays to be one; he is a Democrat if the party be on top—he is all things to all men, and above everything else is a seeker after votes. Penoyer brought disgrace upon the state of Oregon by his churlish treatment of Presidents Harrison and Cleveland. Does Oregon want to be still further dishonored? A vote for Messinger and Henry is a vote for Penoyer. Think well before taking such a course.

If there is a man in Wasco county who is fitted to perform the duties of county judge, that man is Robert Mays. His name is a synonym for honesty and ability. He is deeply interested in the material welfare of the county, and if elected to the honorable position for which he has been nominated he will perform the duties, as he does everything else, wisely and well.

It is generally conceded that C. L. Gilbert has a walk over for the school superintendency. This is as it should be. Mr. Gilbert is well qualified for this important office, and his administration will redound to his credit and to the good of our schools.

Mr. Butts has performed his share in saving the county expense in the matter of inquests, and might have held twice as many if his object were only to milk the county. The spirit is worthy of wide emulation, and he deserves re-election to encourage such a policy in other office-seekers.

POOR OLD SALLY AGAIN.

From Cold and Hunger Her Child is Passing Away.

Some time since mention was made in the CHRONICLE of "Sally," an Indian woman who works hard all day at the wash-tub for 25 cents, and who does not earn money enough to maintain life and care for her sick daughter. In consequence that daughter is today dying—dying from cold, hunger and neglect. In trembling and uncouth language she informed a patron last week that she would not be able to wash the coming week, for her girl would not live long and she must be at her bedside waiting for the end. She begged for a pair of stockings to furnish warmth to the one being on this earth she most dearly loves, who, unattended by a doctor, her frame emaciated by disease and insufficient food, and her body so scantily clad that she is constantly chilled, is dying.

This week she again appeared with a new and terrible trouble. While at Seufert's cannery a Chinaman accidentally cut her on the wrist with a huge knife while chopping salmon. The wound is a serious one. The two sides of a triangular space, about two inches in length, are depressed, showing the presence of a deep wound. She suffers great pain constantly, but has no "chickamin" (money) to purchase either medicine or medical attendance.

Poor old Sally's troubles will soon be over. She will shortly stand at the brink of a grave, where her great maternal love will be buried with her child; the heavy earth pressing over the loved form will communicate its weight to her bereaved heart. With crushing sadness, but savage fortitude, she will return to her desolate hearthstone, and with heart sick and body racked with pain, she will endure as best she may the short span of life that yet remains to her before her spirit takes its flight to that realm where cold cannot pierce, where hunger cannot gnaw, and where let us hope, there will be no lack of comforts that a fond mother may not bestow on her child. May that love be eternal, unthwarted and measureless.

The Evangelists.

The subject of the Bible reading yesterday afternoon was "Assurance," at which time a fair-sized audience greeted Mr. Crittenton.

It was 8 o'clock last evening before the leaders announced the first hymn, and a short praise and prayer service was held, at the close of which the solo by Mr. Wallace, "My Old Country Home," was finely rendered, he being assisted by a refrain, which seemed to come from the sides of the stage. After the solo Mr. Crittenton made the announcements and distributed a large number of cards of invitation, to be given out to induce all the children in the town to attend the children's meeting this afternoon at the armory. Also cards of invitation were distributed to those present to give to their friends and neighbors inviting them to attend the lecture on Wednesday evening on the subject of the "Florence Mission Rescue Work."

Eighty-fourty-five had been reached before the regular services began, and Mr. Carpenter in commencing urged that as many as could attend the meeting at the Congregational church tomorrow afternoon, led by Mr. Crittenton, on the subject of "Consecration."

Mr. Carpenter took for his text Jeremiah xii 5, "If thou hast run with the footmen and they have wearied thee, then how canst thou contend with the horses? And if in the land of peace, wherein thou trustest, they weary thee, then how wilt thou do in the swelling of the Jordan?" The speaker said life was full of mile-stones, and every moment we were nearing the last milestone of life, and we should be prepared for that last mile-stone, the swelling of the Jordan, and then the end would be glorious. He spoke very touchingly of never having seen his mother, but believed he should know her in the world to come, when life's race is run. After the address an invitation was given and cards distributed to those wishing for prayers and who were willing now to start on the Christian life. The beautiful hymn "We Are Passing Away" was very affecting, and the audience showed how deeply it was moved by the solemn quiet that came over it. The meeting closed by Mr. Crittenton asking the Christians present to refrain from talking of other subjects than those of a serious nature, especially with the unconverted, after which the benediction was pronounced.

If you want Senator Mitchell to succeed himself, vote for Hon. T. R. Coon for joint representative, as he is the only candidate that will unqualifiably agree to support Senator Mitchell.

The Australian Ballot.

While at the locks the other day Mr. A. M. Kelsay met a traveling salesman who has lived in Australia who told him many interesting facts concerning the Australian ballot system, from which it appears that we have as yet but a very crude knowledge. Sydney and Melbourne, Australia, are cities larger than San Francisco, and a comparison was drawn between them. In the Australian cities there are but four polling places in each. These are in the largest possible halls that can be found, containing from two to three hundred booths. There is no hitch nor waiting. Every man votes as soon as it is possible for him to do so, and there are always unoccupied booths. The polls are closed at 6 o'clock, and by 12 o'clock that night the votes are all counted and ready to be announced. In San Francisco at the last general election it required nearly three weeks to count the ballots. From this it appears we have much to learn of the practical workings of the Australian ballot law.

"Cyclone" Davis.

"Cyclone" Davis spoke to a crowded house last evening at the court house. The appellation preceding his name is caused from the remarkable emphasis he frequently gives the last word of a sentence, by which he appears to be trying to shake his teeth loose. His whiskeys vibrate about 1,600 times to the second and a soundful howl emanates from a confused space 15 inches in width above his shoulders which he endeavors to fill at one and the same time with a 7 1/2 inch head. It is certainly a cyclonic spectacle, unusual and unique in campaign oratory. However, Mr. Davis is interesting to all and probably convincing to the class of people of which he is an exponent. He confined himself almost entirely to the money question, dismissing the tariff by saying that it made no difference whether the tariff was high or low, or no tariff at all. We did not import wheat, wool, cotton or lumber, and a tariff on those articles was consequently unnecessary. We shall not attempt to reproduce his speech. Davis must be heard to be appreciated.

A QUESTION ANSWERED.

By the request of many friends and voters of this county, who believe, like myself, that this free country should be run by the people, and not by any faction nor political bosses of any party, who would down a man without any cause whatever. Now, gentlemen, I do not ask for more than others have had before me, and have only done my duty as a faithful custodian of the minds of this county, and shall continue to do so as long as you say by your vote for me to stay in this office; not favoring the rich more than the man who toils long for his hard-earned dollar. I leave it for the voters of this county to say if a tried man is not as good as an untried man in this responsible office. dl-20w3t Wm. MICHELL.

Women often feel the effect of too much gayety—balls, theatres, and teas in rapid succession find them worn out, or "run-down" by the end of the season. They suffer from nervousness, sleeplessness and irregularities. The amile and good spirits take flight. It is time to accept the help offered in Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's a medicine which was discovered and used by a prominent physician for many years in all cases of "female complaint" and the nervous disorders which arise from it. The "Prescription" is a powerful uterine tonic and nerve. It is especially adapted to woman's delicate wants for it regulates and promotes all the natural functions, builds up, invigorates and cures. Many women suffer from nervous prostration, or exhaustion, owing to congestion or to disorder of the special functions. The waste products should be quickly got rid of, the local source of irritation relieved and the system invigorated with the "Prescription." Do not take the so-called "celery" compounds, and nerves which only put the nerves to sleep, but get a lasting cure with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

"FEMALE WEAKNESS."

Mrs. WILLIAM HOOVER, of Belleville, Richmond Co., Ohio, writes: "I had been a great sufferer from 'female weakness'; I tried three doctors; they did me no good; I thought I was an invalid for ever. But I heard of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and then I wrote to him and he told me just how to take it. I took eight bottles. I now feel entirely well. I could stand on my feet only a short time, and now I do all my work for my family of five."

Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again.
