NEEDED LEGISLATION.

The legislature of Oregon at its session next winter will be called upon to enact much needed legislation.

The abolishment of useless, money-wasting commissions will be among the first duties of the session; but of equal importance, and more so from the standpoint of patriotism, is the necessity of passing a registry law.

The enactment of the Australian system was a great advance in the direction of good government. Intelligence is a necessary element in the process of voting, which was far from being the case under the old procedure.

Especially is this so when, through the lack of a registration law, voters can be imported from outside places and more than that, can be made to vote several times at the same election by appearing in different wards.

This subject has already received some agitation through the press of the state, and the sentiment is strongly expressed in favor of such legislation.

QUESTION TO BE DETERMINED

The American people are inclined to politics naturally. Election day is a time of exhilaration to the average citizen, and he casts his vote and assists his neighbors in casting theirs with feelings of pleasure mixed with pride.

The campaigns which every four years occupy the attention of the nation are distinctive features of American civic life. The harangues of the spellbinders, the air resonant with music, the gay flags and bunting, the tireless enthusiasm of the listening populace, all make up a scene that has changed but little since the early history of the country.

The arts of the politician are nowhere greater developed than here. The American politician is a species by himself. To be successful in such a line of work requires certain elements of character which not lofty in themselves, yet are above the common.

It is being seriously considered if the politics of the country are not being developed at the expense of its commercial interests. Many business men are crying out that there is a surfeit of campaigning; that the equilibrium of business affairs is being too often disturbed by the frequency of elections; that vital questions are settled after bitter struggles only to be re-opened before there has been time to realize effects.

That there is merit in the query is unquestioned. The people of Oregon have just finished one exciting political season and are already beginning upon another. During the months between the nominating conventions and the election the attention of thousands of our citizens has been concentrated on other objects than their business.

On the other hand, to change the time of elections to dates wider apart would be to go against the policy which, enacted by the founders of the government, has been kept in view ever since. The sovereignty of the people demands that frequent opportunity be given for expression of opinion, and to lessen the number of elections would be a deprivation of popular rights.

NOW THEY SELL WOOL.

Here is the testimony which the East Oregonian proffers as to the successful results of the venture which brought the wool scouring mill to Pendleton. We wish we could say the same words for The Dalles:

Pendleton is the only point in the state where any wool has been sold so far this year. It seems that the East Oregonian was right when it declared the wool scouring mills to be most important to Pendleton and made the fight to secure them in the face of the strongest kind of opposition.

Aside from the silver bolters there will be no sulking in Republican ranks. The nomination of McKinley meets with genuine enthusiasm, and his name will be a talisman for speakers to conjure with during the campaign. The American people will be called upon to decide whether the next four years shall be prosperous or not; whether the markets of this country shall be presented to the countries of the world with no recompense in return, and whether the currency shall be brought to a level of debasement and consequent dishonesty.

Many issues will be settled this campaign. Throughout the country the question of maintaining a sound currency and the reenactment of a protective policy will be determined. In Illinois the people will be called upon to choose between good government and anarchism. The re-nomination of Altgeld was nothing more nor less than an indorsement of his action in turning the red-handed anarchists loose when the interests of society demanded that they be kept in close restraint.

Ohio and Texas have sent delegations to strengthen the free silver crowd at Chicago. Whitney will have his hands full keeping under control the Populistic tendencies of the convention. Sad must be the soul of Cleveland as he views the extent to which the Democratic party has swung away from his cherished teachings.

THE TRUE CAUSE.

After hauling wool to The Dalles our sheppmen suddenly became aware that there is no sale for it there any more than here. The Dalles is not a wool market. After it is hauled there it must be shipped to market and very often no doubt goes back over the O. R. & N. through Grant, Arlington and Pendleton.

This from the Arlington Record is amusing. Of course it is to be expected that our neighboring city would not look kindly upon the encroachments made by The Dalles in securing wool from territory formerly controlled by other places, but the railings of the Record show a lack of perception of the real causes. It is true little or no wool has been sold in The Dalles thus far, and it is possible none will be for some time.

When, however, the market does open it will be found that the difference in prices offered here and elsewhere will contain a wide margin. Last year wool sold in The Dalles for twelve cents, when the best that competing points in the interior could offer was nine. The same condition relatively will result this season as soon as any movement begins.

One criticism of the Record is, however, clearly right. In connection with other advantages as a wool center, The Dalles should have a wooden and scouring mill. Pendleton has stolen a march upon us in this regard, and is reaping a consequent advantage.

The Record is wrong again when it says we have no competing transportation lines to the east, and in this respect are no better off than Arlington. This is fallacious. The Dalles, Portland and Astoria Navigation Co. has brought to The Dalles the benefits of all the competing transportation lines which center at Portland.

If the price of wool is to be low this year, all the more reason why the growers should bring their products to The Dalles and obtain the higher figures which will be offered here.

While the advantages possessed by this point could be increased through the establishment of a woolen mill, yet without that institution they are greater than those possessed by any city in the Northwest.

An argument in favor of less frequent elections is found in the cost of holding national conventions. It is estimated that the St. Louis and Chicago meetings will cost in round numbers $8,000,000. This would go a long ways towards the interest on the Cleveland bonds. On the other hand the spending of so large an amount by people who presumably are able to pay is of benefit in giving employment to thousands of men and in putting into circulation capital that might otherwise be dormant.

BURNED LIKE FIRE

Speedily Cured by CUTICURA REMEDIES

I was a sufferer for eight years from that most distressing of all diseases, Eczema, but can now say truthfully that I am entirely cured. I tried some of the best physicians in the country, but they did me little good. The palms of my hands were covered, and would become inflamed; little white blisters at first would appear, then they would peel off, leaving a red, smooth surface which would burn like fire and itch; well, there is no name for it. On the inside of the upper part of both my limbs, great red blotches not unlike hives would appear, and as soon as I became warm, the burning and itching would begin. Night after night I would be awake all night and scratch, and almost go wild. I heard of CUTICURA remedies, got a box of CUTICURA (ointment), a bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT (blood purifier), and gave them a thorough trial, and after a few applications I noticed the redness and inflammation disappear; before I had used one box there was not a sign of Eczema left. I can truthfully assert that $2.00 worth of CUTICURA REMEDIES cured me. Any one I meet who has Eczema, I do not hesitate a moment in recommending your remedies.
