The Cascades.

Tis an ancient Indian legend, "When the golden to shore, Gathering from each lengthening cubit greater

The mour tains in their anger b lehed forth the molten rock; Hurled them as from mouth of cannon 'gainst the span; And when the battle ended, earth trembled with the shock,

'Till the mighty bridge which spanned the flood was gone.

You can yet, while passing by there, where the Cascades' angry roar Warns the mariner of danger in his path, See the stakes of the 'butments of the bridge which stood before The mountains wrenched it from them in their wrath.

Just beneath, where massive causeway in o'deu grandeur stood, -Stands a wooden fortres, honeycombed with where Phil Sheridan, the soldier, in the strength of young manhood, First gave to wity Savage mortal hosts.

Adjacent stands the cotton wood, where the chiefs of savage men
Paid lite's last explation for their claims:
When Chief Chenoweth and others drew the tomshawk again, To drive the white invaders from their homes.

And here, where only Nature his inspiration giving,
Led the Indian to the scaffold—proudly scaled—
If by suffering death for others he might bring to those yet living.
Hope to drive the white invaders for them field.

But to conquer is not for him; his race must pass away; The places which knew him shall no more. The green hills of his father, so ject to an alien Marks his grave where his father roamed be-

I see him passing by me like dim shadows of the past; His valor and his serrows left unsung.

The mountains both the cradle of his race, Gloomy, silent, swift with stories of his wrong. The iron arm of Progress clasped him in its flerce embrace; He is crushed beneath the foot of human The problem of his being is left for man to face; Does advancement bring to better human need?

No more along the mountain trail his daugh-ter's voice will ring; Her music's lost in silence, and her song Yet trembles in the aspens, while her spirit on the wing. the wing.
Tells no tale of long oppression or of wrong.

His cance upon the river is lost to mortal sight; His warriors ever fide in phanton boats; He has sunk beneath the surface of the river's conquering might, His paddle in the driftwood ever floats.

Now there springs from out the silence of a dead race passed away, The genius of the white man's power and state And he seeks to wrest the rapids from the river's conquering sway, To check its restless speed with stone and gate.

Where once the gods in vain uph 1d their bridge of stone.
The tiny hand of man exerts its power;
But his work will pass away like the dead race
that is gone,
And the river will be ever water there.

Broad Columbia! mighty river! fitting emblem of the great! Thy waves shall wash the sands of fleeting time: And the race which seeks to curb thee shal, be leveled t · the state

Of this dead race, lost to history and to rayme. The Bridge of Gods is fallen, for the lock you'll look in vain: The hand which formed the mountains shadows all.

Brings the seed-time and the harvest; brings the hailstorm and the rain;

Brings to justice all his creatures—unjust nations to their fall.

Grand Columbia! glorious river, sweeping matealess to the sea;
Bearing on thy heaving bosom nature's wreath,
You have swept the ages past—for a past eternity, and will sweep on where mankind is lost in death.

REGISTERED, MAIL.

Many Clerks Handle and Verify Each Package.

In the New York post office, when a letter is presented for registration it is inspected by the receiving clerk to ascertain whether it is in good condition, firmly scaled, properly addressed and sufficiently prepaid, and that the name of the sender has been indorsed on it. These requirements being met, the clerk records the letter in a book composed of alternate thin and thick leaves, a manifold copy of the entry being obtained by means of a sheet of carbon paper placed between the

The thin sheets are perforated in oblong sections for ready separation, and constitute the receipts issued to the public. Each receipt bears a distinct number in a series running from one to one hundred thousand, and every letter registered has the number of the receipt issued for it indorsed on its face.

The condition of the letter envelope is now inspected by another clerk, and if perfect, the imprint of a hand stamp is impressed across the edge of the flap to betray any tampering.

These preliminaries being completed, a card known as the return receipt is prepared and attached to the letter by means of a rubber band. On one side of the card appear the number, date of mailing, name of addressee, and destination of the letter; on the other, the name, and full address of the sender, to whom the receipted card will be returned when the letter has been deliv-

In its numerical order the letter passes to a separating clerk, and with 99 others, composing an even 100, is distributed to one of the six cases, where it will be further treated. The separating clerk verifies the count of each 100 letters before separating another 100, and, as frequently as may be necessary, delivers each subdivision to the clerks in charge of the cases.

A case consists of a long table with a set of pigeon holes bearing the names of the large cities in the section of the country assigned to that case, and in these pigeon holes the clerk in charge boxes the letters, and from time to time parcels them out to his assistants. The next step is the preparation of

The Weekly Chronicle. what is known as a registered package envelope. This consists of an ingeniously contrived envelope specially manufactured out of particularly tough paper for the use to which it is put, and also numbered in a series of 100,000.

On the face of each envelope appears its number and spaces for the name of the post office, county and state to which it will be sent, while the back is Jo Jo sun was young."
Mount Hood and hoary Adams waged in war:
They wrenched the solid mountains from their base beside the stream.
And hurled them as fi-ree missiles from afar. At that time a solid causeway spanned the broad these envelopes having been addressed, Columbia o'er,
And the rushing, rearing waters filled its entry of the letter to be inclosed in it is made on a registry bill, which shows length;
It stretched in solid archway its span from shore the date of mailing, name of the post office using it, name of the post office to which it will be sent, number of the registered package envelope, and, finally, the registered number of the letter to be placed in it and the name of its addressee.

The bill and the letter are placed in this envelope, which then passes to a clerk, who removes its contents, com-pares the letter with the entry on the registered package envelope numbers, together with their destination, to an assistant, who records these particulars in the mailing book. The letter and bill are now replaced in the envelope, and it passes to another clerk for final verification of contents and sealing. The sealing consists in an application of blue mucilage to the three flaps of the envelope, which when once closed cannot be reopened without mutilations, the blue mucilage exposing any attempt to open the envelope by any steaming process. The postmark showing the mailing office and the date is now affixed, and the envelope, with a lot of others from the same case, goes to the pouch room, where another separation is necessary in order that it may get to the registered pouch that will carry it to the distributing office nearest its final destination. The contents of the registered package envelope can now only be ascertained by reference to the registered letter numbers charged against the envelope number in the mailing book, or the more full description of the letters on the registry bill, which is under seal, and, therefore, inaccessible. The registered package envelope is entered by origin, number and destination on the book of the pouch in which it is to be dispatched, a earbon manifold record of the package inclosed in each pouch being preserved, the duplicate sheet of each pouch forming the bill of advice to the office to which the pouch is sent.

When as many packages as the pouch will hold have been entered on the proper book two clerks verify the entries, sign the last sheet of the bill, place it with the packages in the pouch, adjust the strap that secures it and finally attach that mechanical wonder called a rotary lock. This lock has a fixed serial number engraved on its side, which serves to identify it, and a rotary number, which unerringly advances one every time the lock is opened.

The pouch is then delivered to a railway postal clerk, who receipts for it by lock and rotary numbers, and it remains under constant guard until its destination is reached. Keys that open the rotary locks are issued only to post offices exchanging registered nouches, and a careful comparison of the rotary number of the lock with its entry on the pouch bill is the first duty of the clerks opening a registered J M Filloon, justice fees.....

Any discrepancy between the rotary number advised on the bill and that shown by the lock received would indicate an irregularity to be at once investigated. At every transfer from one clerk to another of a registered letter, registered package envelope or registered pouch a receipt is taken, and by these means no difficulty is experienced in tracing a letter from the time it is first mailed until delivered to its addressee.

These rotary locks cost $15 each, and when the number 999 is turned they must be returned to the makers for readjustment. -Business.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Care is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimoulals. Address: F. J. #### Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c and $1.00 per bottle at Blakelev & Houghton's drug store.
